QUEBEC MARKETS.

MONTREAL, August 29, 1901.

GROCERIES.

ALTHOUGH business shows no particular improvement this week over last week, a fairly good trade has been done, and wholesalers express themselves as being well pleased with the condition of trade. "As soon as the holiday season is over," remarked a leading merchant, "we look for a busy time of it." Prospects for a good trade this fall are exceedingly encouraging. Particular attention seems to be turned towards canned goods at the present, and a good demand for all lines prevails, particularly for canned fruits. It is said that packers are not offering any gallon apples at the moment. Strawberries are also very scarce. In sugar, nothing further has occurred since the decline of last week. The molasses market is steady. Jobbers evidently have sufficient supplies on hand to meet the wants of their customers, as the demand is limited. Spices of all kinds are moving fairly well at steady prices. The market for fine-grade Japans is higher, and there seems to be an over-supply of low grades.

SUGARS.

No new features have developed in sugars since the reduction of last week. A fair volume of business is being done, but the increased demand anticipated by refiners on account of the decline did not materialize, jobbers evidently having sufficient supplies on hand. Local quotations are $4.40 per 100 lb. for granulated and $3.65 to $4.25 per 100 lb. for yellows, according to quality. City, 5c. additional.

CANNED GOODS.

The canned goods market is probably the most interesting in the grocery business this week. Some wholesalers anticipate a material advance in prices in the near future, while others claim that there will not likely be many changes, as the crop outlook is not as bad as reported. It is said that a meeting of the canners took place a short time ago to review the situation, and the advisability of withdrawing quotations on some lines was discussed, when one wholesaler pointed out that every year a scarcity is predicted, but the reports did not always prove correct. It is evident, however, that the tomato and corn outlook is not very satisfactory at the present. Quotations on tomatoes are as before, namely, 80c.; for corn, 75c. Peas are still quoted at 85c. The demand for canned fruits still continues to be brisk, at the following prices: Strawberries, $1.50; raspberries, $1.40; gooseberries, $1.40; pears, $1.55 for 2's and $2 for 3's; Lombard plums, $1.20; greengages, $1.30; yellow peaches, $1.75 for 2's and $2.50 for 3's; sliced pineapple, $2.30, and $2.45 for grated; 3 lb. apples, 85c.; red pitted cherries, $1.80, and whites, $2. A particularly good demand is evinced for canned apples. On account of the short crop the pack is expected to be much smaller than heretofore, and there is a probability of an advance in prices before long on this account.

Prices and particulars from the Agents

SYRUPS.

Business in syrups is in a very listless condition, and quotations are unchanged at 1½ to 2c. per lb. for cane syrup, and 3 to 3¼c. for corn syrup, according to parcel.

MOLASSES.

Nothing of importance has taken place in the state of the molasses market. A fairly firm tone prevails, but the demand is not very brisk. Barbadoes is quoted at from 27½ to 28c.; 29c. per gal., in small lots, is the price still quoted.

SPICES.

Business in spices is fairly active. An increased demand is being felt. The small supply of many grades of spices is certain to have an effect on the market very shortly. We quote as follows: Nutmegs, 35 to 65c. per lb., as to size; Penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 20c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole, Cochin, 15c.; Japan, 10c.; Jamaica, 20c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 20c.; Jamaica, 25c.

RICE.

The demand for rice is very satisfactory, but no change in the market has taken place since last issue. We quote in combine district: B rice, in bags, $3.10; in ½ bags, $3.15; in ¼ bags, $3.20; in pockets, $3.25. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $3 in bags; $3.05 in ½ bags; $3.10 in ¼ bags; and $3.15 in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4¾c. per lb.

COFFEE.

The position of the coffee market is still very uninteresting and the low prices noted last week still prevail.

TEAS.

The Japan tea market continues active. Cable advices received indicate a firmer market, and the season will close shortly for Yokohama teas. The volume of business being done in teas is up to the average and prices rule firm. The Indian and Ceylon tea markets still show a firm feeling.

We cannot too strongly urge upon dealers the great advantage of carrying an assortment of the better and more expensive lines of Brushes. The result is bound to be satisfactory to the consumer and a more profitable trade to the dealer.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE CANADIAN GROCER.

ST. JOHN, N.B., August 27, 1901.

AS the season for the receipt of pickled herring is here, the matter of inspection and the unsatisfactory condition existing is brought to mind. While the Government appoints an inspector and will not allow him to engage in other work, they do not make inspection compulsory. And at other receiving points, as Moncton and St. Stephen, there is no inspector. There is need of inspection, as was shown this week, when the inspector refused to pass several lots of pickled fish. Now, what is the result? Either these fish will be sold to some dealer at a cut price or taken to some point where there is no inspection and there sold. In either case, the man who buys first-class inspected fish has an unfair competition, and the consumer, in whose interest inspection should be compulsory, is in no way protected.

OIL—In burning oil, the low price continues, and the shortening days compel increased consumption. Paint oils are somewhat unsteady, but there is little business. Lubricating oil seems rather firmer, though there is little, if any, change in price. The demand is light. Cod oil is lower, and is about at usual figures. There have been fair receipts. Wax and candles continue unchanged.

SALT—Liverpool coarse salt continues to arrive via steamers from Liverpool and Manchester to St. John. The price is firmly held. There is quite a full stock here. The demand is good. In fine, business is rather more quiet. We quote: Liverpool coarse, 52 to 58c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1; Canadian fine, $1 per bag; cheese and butter salt, bulk, $2.40 per bbl.; 5 lb. bags, $2.85 to $2.90 per bbl.; 10 lb. bags, $2.70 to $2.75 per bbl.; 20 lb. wood boxes, 22c. each; 10 lb. wood boxes, 14c. each; cartons, $2 per case of 2 doz.; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per doz.; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

CANNED GOODS—The past week has seen little movement of interest. Dealers have bought about all their supplies. Peas are held at the advance. Tomatoes are very firm. In peaches, packers have either withdrawn or advanced prices. Strawberries tend firmer. Pears are quite low, particularly 3 lb. goods. Gallon apples tend higher. The local market is largely supplied from Nova Scotia. Salmon quotations, which were withdrawn, are again quoted. There is, however, no change. The market is well supplied with spring fish, and sardines have a good sale at the present prices. Kippers and haddies are short. Blueberries, local packed, are short and tending higher.

GREEN FRUITS—In Californian fruits, the season is getting late. Prices have ruled high, particularly for pears. Plums are quite plentiful at fair figures. Peaches have sold well, but the Georgia peach, which is now offered, is preferred. In pears, barrel goods are received. The crop in the east is very light. A few Nova Scotian peaches have been received, but they are poor. Nova Scotian plums are just coming in, but they have little sale yet. In grapes, a few Delawares are seen. Ontario grapes are shortly expected. Bananas are arriving in fair quantities. The price of both United States and New Brunswick apples, which are offering, is high. Few melons are sold.

DRIED FRUITS—There is rather more interest. In spot goods all Californian lines, such as loose muscatels, prunes and seeded raisins are higher. The stock of prunes held is very light. While new goods have not been quoted, it is thought quite full figures will be asked. Malaga and Valencia raisins are quoted, but little movement is reported as yet. Prices keep firm. Dealers hesitate to buy this season as last year was so unprofitable. New currants tend higher. Spot stock is very light. Dates will be low. Peels, particularly citron, will be well above last season's figures. Evaporated apples are much higher and new stock will be high.

DAIRY PRODUCE—In butter the movement is rather slow. Good butter is hard to get. It would find a ready sale. Eggs are in light receipt and but slow sale. Prices remain unchanged. Cheese are held in light quantity among the grocers. Prices continue firm.

SUGAR—It is expected the new regulations will come into effect the first of September. All dealers who are in the Guild—and that includes about every wholesaler—will quote sugar at any point at the same price. And after the present stock of foreign sugar is sold those in the Guild will not again import. This will not affect the consumer to any extent, but it is thought the wholesaler will be able to make at least a shade of profit. In prices there has been a slight advance, chiefly in granulated.

MOLASSES—There is quite a stock of Barbadoes here, the last steamer having quite a quantity for St. John. In Porto Rico, quite a large quantity is just landing. The market is unchanged and prices are rather easy. The demand is light. Little is heard of American molasses.

FISH—In dry cod, the market is rather easier. It is still a little early. Pollock are dull at the low figures. Pickled herring are easier, and prices are not expected to rule as high as last year. While some poor fish are received, in general the run is better than usual. Smoked herring are scarce. The new have only just begun to come in. A few kippered herring are received. In fresh fish, little is offered. The run of shad is very disappointing. Smoked shad, which are splendid eating, are offered. Pickled will be very scarce. We quote as follows: Large and medium dry cod, $3.65 to $3.70; small, $2.50 to $2.60; haddies, 5 to 5½c.; smoked herring, 12 to 13c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.40 to $1.55 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2.00 to $2.15 per half bbl.; Canso herring, $5 per bbl., $2.75 halves; Shelburne, $4.50 per bbl.; $2.25 per half bbl.; shad, 10 to 12c.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL—The flour market is rather firmer, but prices show little change. A fair business is being done. It is almost impossible to get feed. Oats are still high, with little doing. Oatmeal remains the same. Cornmeal is held firmly at the high figures. Beans, which are a light stock, are again rather higher. The present price is a complete surprise. It is said new beans will be high. Barley is unchanged. Split peas are rather higher. Present figures much higher than usual. We quote as follows: Manitoba flour, $4.60 to $4.70; best Ontario, $3.90 to $4.00; medium, $3.60 to $3.70; oatmeal, $4.25 to $4.30; cornmeal, $2.90 to $3; middlings, $2.2 to $2.3; oats, 48 to 50c.; hand-picked beans, $2.35 to $2.40; prime, $2.25 to $2.30; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3.00; split peas, $4.30 to $4.45; barley, $3.90 to $4; hay, $12 to $14.

ST. JOHN NOTES.

T. Collins & Co. predict much higher prices for potatoes.

C. & E. Macmichael have some extra quality Patna rice to hand.

Baird & Peters are landing another cargo of Porto Rico molasses this week.

Domestic sardines are being freely received by John Sealy. Mr. Sealy has a large western trade.

Smoked shad are particularly appreciated by lovers of fish. This is the season when they are at their best. James Paterson receives them fresh every day.

Jones & Schofield have just received some Californian prunes from New York (the Los Gates brand). These are particularly prepared for summer business, and are guaranteed to keep.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

WINNIPEG, August 24, 1901.

THE weather has been somewhat dull and damp during the latter part of the week, but has cleared again, and now has every indication of continuing fair. The dull days did no harm beyond delaying cutting slightly. The few cars of wheat that have come in are graded No. 1 hard. Threshing, however, will not be general for some time to come.

Trade is very good and prices firm, with sharp advances in a few lines. It is a noticeable evidence of healthy trade that no kick is made by buyers over advancing prices, the getting of the goods being just now the important matter. Advances are accepted with the utmost philosophy.

One of the startling advances in price is that of white beans, of which enormous quantities are used in this market. The price is going up by leaps and bounds. Less than two months ago this product was quoted at $1.85 per 100 lb., to-day beans sell at $2.75, and are remarkably firm even at that figure. Shortage of crop is the reason assigned for this advance.

The scarcity of supply in the green fruit market has been considerably relieved. Advances have reached the city of the shipment of the first lot from British Columbia. These cars will consist of plums, pears and apples, and the first shipments will be made from the Kelowna district and Fraser Valley.

Following about one week later will come the consignments from Vernon and Salmon Arm. All this fruit is consigned to the Winnipeg Fruit and Produce Exchange, and will only be accepted and handled if in first-class condition on arrival.

CEREALS—Rolled oats still firm at $2.25 to $2.30, and no decline is anticipated for at least a month; beans, $2.75; cornmeal, $1.75.

FLOUR—Firm; market unchanged in price and with good demand. Ogilvie's Hungarian patent, $2; Glenora patent, $1.85; Alberta, $1.65; Manitoba, $1.50; XXXX, $1.20; Lake of the Woods Five Roses, $2; Red patent, $1.85; Medora, $1.45; XXXX, $1.15.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED FRUITS—The general interest of the market centres around the advance in price and the scarcity of small prunes. Latest reports from California indicate that, though the prune crop is a fair one, the sizes are all large and the same applies to other markets. This has caused an advance here of from  $\frac{1}{4}$  to  $\frac{1}{2}$  c. per lb. on all old stock. This is in marked contrast to the low price and rapid sale of a few months ago. If the prices advance abnormally, it is a little difficult to see how matters are going to turn out. When evaporated apples are dear and scarce and prunes cheap, prunes are substituted for apples and vice versa, but this year both apples and prunes bid fair to be very dear. All reports as to evaporated apples indicate very high prices, 9c. at present being quoted. Apricots have again advanced, and although the price in Winnipeg is still quoted at 12  $\frac{1}{2}$  to 13c., it is well understood that the fruit could not be laid down for that price now and that new stocks will show the advanced price. Reports also indicate an advance for Californian layer raisins, but to date no change has taken place here. There is not much doing in either raisins or currants.

CANNED GOODS—The features of this market are the advance in peas and apples (gals.) due in both cases to the shortage of crop, and advanced price of tin owing to strike. Peas are now quoted at \$1.95 and apples at \$1.75 per case,  $\frac{1}{2}$  doz., or an advance of \$1.25 over former prices. Other canned goods remain without change for the moment.

SYRUP—In sympathy with the advance in corn, Davenport syrups have advanced 10 per cent. on this market.

STARCH—Advances in all grades are looked for before the close of the present week.

GREEN FRUITS—There has been a drop of $1 per case on lemons. Supplies in all lines are now abundant and business very active. Apples, per barrel, $6. Reports indicate a short crop, and prices of winter apples about $3 to $3.50, point of shipment. Peaches—Freestone, $1.50 per crate. Plums—According to variety, $1.60 to $2.25. Pears—$3 to $4 per box. Tokay grapes—$4 per crate. Ontario tomatoes are still arriving by express, but carlots will certainly be in this coming week. The price has already dropped, and quotations are from $1 to $1.25 per basket.

BUTTER—The demand for creamery butter cannot be called active and almost all shipments are going to Montreal. Price is still quoted 16 to 16  $\frac{1}{2}$  c., factories. Dairy butter is arriving in fair quantities. Demand is light and prices 10 to 12c. Winnipeg.

CHEESE—Little has been offered through the week and price remains at 7  $\frac{1}{4}$  to 7  $\frac{1}{2}$  c.

EGGS—Moderate receipts and good demand at 13c., Winnipeg.

THE TRAVELLING SALESMAN.

THERE was once (and may be yet) a printed notice posted in The Herald office which read: "You are nothing—The Herald is everything." For a rule of conduct to fit every case this is the best that could be devised, and the intelligent workman will see in it the mainspring of his effort, and interpret it in its intended sense. This same rule should be kept in mind by the salesman as he is the direct representative of the house, and in his hands rests its reputation.

Each sales manager has his own ideas, and places before his salesmen from time to time volumes of circular letters of advice and instruction. A few general remarks may, however, obviate the necessity of much such to the conscientious salesman, and it is hoped, if carefully noted, they may assist in making his work more satisfactory and successful to both himself and his employers.

The salesman should first remember that his value is gauged by net results, including not only such orders as are secured at once, but the general effect upon the future. The business is presumed to be perpetual, and often the work of the salesman will yield better value if directed to strengthen the position of his house for the future, than to securing small present orders.

As above noted, the impression created by the salesman's manner determines the opinion of his principals. It is presupposed that the house has an honorable record and a good standing; these must in no wise be abated by any act of a representative. It will be unnecessary to mention that the salesman, in dress, manner and habits should at all times be a gentleman, or what is better—a man. Correct habits while commendable on moral grounds, are imperative in business. Intemperance will not long be tolerated; profanity is a mark of ill-breeding, while excess of any kind is sure to impair efficiency. The discriminating manager in these "strenuous days" has no use for any but those who are honest, reliable, thorough, earnest and undivided in allegiance. The degree to which these qualities are found usually determines the rate of advancement and responsibility.

Don't try to impress your customer with your superior knowledge. You are the seller. He is the buyer. Neither is subserviency nor timidity productive of good results. Show a willingness to listen and fully understand what he thinks he wants to purchase, and to assist him in getting it. Where your reason shows that he is making an unwise choice, you can with tact, and without in any way suggesting that he is either ignorant or stubborn, show him the better way. Do this in such a way that your manner will impress him that your training and experience are better guides and that your suggestions emanate from a sincere desire to give him the best satisfaction.

Tact is a talent that should be continually cultivated, as it is the tactful man who is successful. A recent writer has said that it is superior to genius and I am not prepared to dispute the point. You can hardly name a phase of political, commercial or social life where the man of tact is not ahead. I have seen ability and brains relegated to the rear or kept in subordinate positions while the man with the hypnotic art forged ahead. Don't misunderstand me, without brains and ability no success is permanent, but with those for the charge and tact for the match, bullseyes are a sure thing.

If the salesman secures orders simply by the argument of lowest prices, then it matters little and he need read no further in this article. But if his house is handling or making a good line, it should be his strongest argument that there is no competition on price. If his wares are equal to those of other makers, they are of equal value, and in these days of combinations and gentlemen's agreements it becomes all the more important that the question of price be left out of any argument. Within my own experience I have seen two manufacturers attain to the highest rank by freely advertising a high price and a corresponding high quality. A failure on the part of their salesmen to secure the higher price was looked upon as a confession of failure and they were "allowed to resign."

At the risk of being called passe, I repeat what others have often said: Don't disparage competitors. It will take all your skill and ability to properly present your own line. Decrying the other fellow only advertises him, and if I found the salesmen of other people jumping on the company I now have the honor to represent, it would immediately cut down our advertising appropriation. You should be familiar with the points wherein your house considers its goods better than those of other makers, and if forced to compare, should honestly point out the advantages claimed. Even then avoid criticism or any inference of ignorance. Seek rather to bring your customer to look at the matter from your point of view. Make no statements of which you are not absolutely sure and which you do not yourself believe. Truth is ever convincing; the slightest untruth throws doubt upon the whole case. Many times has justice miscarried because some witness, in his enthusiasm, has drawn from his imagination for his facts.

Do not ever attempt to discuss a subject on which you are ignorant with the assurance of knowledge. Cultivate a knowledge of uses of goods you handle and ascertain the technical meaning of the peculiar language of the craft. Absence of such knowledge will inevitably lead to some incorrect use of a technical word and thus immediately convey the impression that you are not master of your business. Then confidence is gone and failure is sure to meet you. The correct and easy use of the terms of trade relating to the goods you handle will contribute largely to convey the idea that you know your business and your advice can be safely followed.

In the matter of expenses, I realize I am on disputed ground, but generally it is expected that these will be limited to what is legitimate, and be honestly stated in the voucher. Needless expensiveness should be avoided, nor should you patronize any house to which you cannot without apology invite your customers. In the matter of incidentals, salesmen are often influenced by the fact that the house pays the bills. In the long run it would be better if they applied the golden rule and act as if they were themselves the payers. As stated in the beginning, it is net results that count. The profit yielded, and the cost through the salesman of securing that profit, are factors which determine the length of service or rate of advancement. The house cannot take time always to analyze critically the expense account and to point out where it should be different. In most cases where unreasonable expenses or unsatisfactory returns continue, it is easier and more judicious to dispense with the salesman's services.

Finally, brethren, and this is my hobby, devote a reasonable amount of time to the study of the technical literature relating to your line, and to such as will give you a better insight into the source and reason, the intent and use of the goods you are handling. It is not enough to be familiar with the catalogue of the house. Learn of the materials entering into the composition, the origin, history and destiny of every piece, and familiarize yourself with the various processes necessary to make the harmonious whole.

In filling vacancies the salesman stands the best chance for promotion, if he earns it. More than any other employe he is the moulder of his own destiny and must alone be held responsible for success or failure.—F. A. Southwick, in Hardware.

Fire caused about $5,000 damage to Jonathan Groh's general store at West Gravenhurst, Ont. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

Hochelaga grocers have agreed, at the request of the Montreal Grocery Clerks' Association, to close their stores at 8 p.m. three nights a week.

The Regina Trading Co., Regina, N.W.T., have engaged H. Rait, of Beckenham, Kent, Eng., in their grocery and crockery department.

Burglars entered the stores of Murphy Bros., and H. Martel, St. James street, Montreal. They did considerable damage in both stores, but did not carry away much stuff.

Prince Edward Island crop reports indicate a small harvest in the western sections of that Province. West of Tignish the crops are almost a total failure. Pasture lands have been sunburned brown, and some of the cattle are now being housed and fed on hay.

EARLY CLOSING IN QUEBEC.

The Hull, Que., Council have refused to pass amendments to the early-closing by-laws of that city because they maintain that the Quebec by-law is "ultra vires." The amendments were requested through a petition of the clerks. Messrs. Foran and Champagne stated that they did not see how the by-law could be enforced. In 1894 the Quebec Legislature had passed a law authorizing cities to pass by-laws to govern the early closing of certain stores. In 1896 a certain Montreal merchant tested the by-laws in the Superior Court, alleging illegality and injustice of the by-laws as being without reason and opposed to the liberty of commerce. The Hon. Judge Loranger upheld the merchant in his contention, declaring the by-law illegal and "ultra vires." Recorder Montigny in the same year refused to prosecute for contravention of the same by-law. Under these circumstances the legal gentlemen thought it would be unsafe for Hull to attempt to enforce the by-law.

THE PROVISION TRADE.

The Markets—The Army Meat Contract—Miscellaneous Notes.

THE ARMY MEAT CONTRACT.

WE publish this month the report of the Committee of Public Accounts as to the contract made in October, 1899, in South Africa for the supply to the troops in the field of 4,000,000 lb. of meat by the Cold Meat Storage Co. (sic) at 11d. per lb. It exonerates The South-African Supply and Cold Storage Co., the contractors referred to, from any charge of dishonesty, for Col. Richardson, who made the contract, distinctly states that it was fully understood on both sides that frozen meat could be supplied. It so happened that three-quarters of the total quantity of meat distributed to the troops was frozen. The company received £188,888, and this handsome sum swelled the huge profits which it made, causing its shares to stand at their present high premium. The Premier of Queensland is reported as saying that the company has only had to pay 3½d. per lb., landed, for its Australian frozen meat. After representations from the War Office, the company consented not only to refund £27,000, but also to charge 9d. per lb. for frozen meat in future; yet, it would have been fully within its rights to demand its pound of flesh. The committee mildly suggests that Col. Richardson "should have contracted at different prices for frozen and fresh meat, and that the terms of such contracts should in future be made more clear to the War Office when reported home." It seems to us that the gallant officer's conduct was only in keeping with the rest of the stupid blundering of which the War Office and its officials have been guilty, and that when De Wet is caught or killed some simpleton or other should be made an example of.—Cold Storage, London, Eng.

PACKING IN MEXICO.

John W. McKay, secretary of the North-American Beef Co., of Chicago, accompanied by James W. Davidson, a lawyer of the same western city, is at present in Mexico for the purposes of investigating the recent purchases of the packing concessions at Uruapau, in the State of Michoacan. It is proposed to instal a water-power plant at the Cupatizo Falls. Eight thousand horse-power will be the capacity.

STOCK YARDS FOR TORONTO JUNCTION.

Much interest has been aroused, not only in Toronto and Toronto Junction, but also throughout Western Ontario, by the passage of a by-law in Toronto Junction to grant the Union Stock Market Co., Limited, 35 acres to be used as stock yards.

It will be remembered that some time ago the Union Stock Market Co., Limited, was incorporated with a stock capital of $1,000,000, to erect and operate stock yards in Toronto Junction similar in purpose, but more modern in construction, to the yards at Toronto.

The matter came up in the Toronto Junction Council on Thursday night. The company was represented at the meeting by Ald. Hodgson, manager, and A. Dods, solicitor. Mr. Dods explained that the intention was to add to the ordinary stock-yard a remount station and a market for the sale of fancy stock. Two or three years ago, Toronto was petitioned by many drovers and others to remove and enlarge its stock yards. The fact that no action was taken made the need of this market all the greater. It was the intention to build large offices, and probably a hotel, along the Keele street frontage, in the rear of which would be the horse stables, built to accommodate 1,000 horses. Behind this would be accommodation for 250 carloads of cattle, 100 carloads of sheep and 90 carloads of hogs. The market would be granolithic or brick paved. A grant of 35 acres was asked for, but the company hoped to enlarge the yards from time to time until they covered 150 acres. The expropriation by-law received its first and second reading, but the third reading was deferred.

On Monday evening, the by-law was again taken up. At this meeting, strong opposition to the proposal was manifested. Some citizens of Toronto Junction maintained that the erection of stock yards would interfere with the sanitary conditions of the town. It was also pointed out that Ald. Hubbard, of Toronto, had proposed in the Toronto City Council to cut off the sewer connection with the Junction. Both of these objections were made light of by the majority of the council, and the by-law was given its third reading and passed. The board of health has also granted permission for the erection of the yards.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

A good business for this time of the year is being done in dressed meats, and prices are steady for all lines, except dressed hogs, which are 25c. lower. We quote as follows: Dressed hogs, $9.25 to $9.75 per cwt.; mutton, $6 to $7 per cwt.; lambs, 8 to 9c. per lb.; beef carcasses, $7.50 per cwt. for best and $6 to $7 for mediums; hind quarters, 8½ to 9½c. for best; fore quarters, 4½ to 5½c. for best; calves, $8 for best and $6 to $7 for mediums.

The demand for cured provisions keeps active, and prices continue stiff. "The indications are," said a local jobber this week, "that lard will advance before long. Stocks are running down, and the output just now is very small." There is no change as yet. We quote: Long clear bacon, 11½c. Smoked meats—Breakfast bacon, 15c.; rolls, 12c.; small hams, 14c.; medium hams, 14c.; large hams, 13c.; shoulder hams, 11½c.; backs, 15c. Barrel pork—Canadian heavy mess, $20; Canadian short cut, $21. Lard—Tierces, 11c.; tubs, 11¼c.; pails, 11½c.

MONTREAL.

The demand for all lines continues good. We quote as follows: Heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $20.50 to $21.50; Chicago clear pork, $22.50 to $23; selected heavy short cut mess pork, boneless, $21.50 to $22.50; family short cut back pork, $20.50 to $21.50; heavy short cut clear pork, $20 to $21.50; hams, 13c.; bacon, 14c.; lard, pure Canadian, $2.30 per pail; refined lard compound (Fairbank's), $1.92 for 1 to 24 pails; $1.90 for 25 to 49 pails; $1.88 for 50 pails and over; Snow White and Globe compound, $1.65 per pail; Cottolene, 9½c. per lb. in tierces, and 10½c. in 26-lb. pails, and 10¼c. in 50-lb. boxes, for Quebec.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

The pork market is quite bare. Chicago prices continue to advance. Boston quotes rather under western figures. Dealers will soon have to buy somewhere. In beef the market is rather easier. Lard is higher and hard to get.

INQUIRIES REGARDING CANADIAN TRADE.

The following were among the recent inquiries relating to Canadian trade received at the High Commissioner's Office in London, Eng.

ON account of the recent action of the Commercial Travellers' Mutual Benefit Society in raising the insurance assessment of their members, some investigations recently made by Mr. E. Fielding, Toronto, are of considerable interest. The tables consulted by him were as follows :

Table of Elementary Mortality Values deduced from the mortality experience of males from 1876 to 1880 of the friendly societies of Great Britain as published by authority of the British Parliament.

Experience of Canada Life Assurance Company, from a table prepared by Mr. A. K. Blackadar, F.I.A., and read before the Actuarial Society of America, published in the report by the Inspector of Insurance of Ontario, 1897, over the signature of J. Howard Hunter, with this head note: "No allowance whatever for profit or for management or other expenses, or for loss on investments."

A NOVEL USE FOR SOAP.

Soap is commonly supposed to be more valuable according to its efficacy as an emollient. It is therefore curious to read of its great success as an irritant. The recent visit of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York to the hot springs at Rotorua, New Zealand, serves to remind non-travelling Britishers that the eruption which destroyed the matchless "Terraces" did not leave the "Britain of the South" bereft, says The Oil and Colorman's Journal. Persons unacquainted with the ways of geysers will have read with amusement that in order that the biggest of the boiling fountains should do itself and Rotorua credit on an occasion so auspicious, no one was permitted to throw "soap" into its pool for six weeks before the Royal visit. The geyser was not to be encouraged to use any of its energies in preliminary displays, and soap, to a geyser, is as a red rag to a bull. Throw in half-a-pound of the commonest variety, and the least amenable of boiling fountains then and there will spout. This Sophia, the old Maori guide, discovered. It is satisfactory to learn that when the Duchess dropped the soap in, this particular geyser replied with a mighty outburst.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch.

Your idea may be that all starch is starch and that your customers won't detect even a slight difference in quality. You may think that because there is a cent or two extra profit on "Mushroom" brands (that come and go), you can retain the confidence of your trade—it doesn't pay to trifle with the confidence that a customer has in you and your goods.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch is as staple as flour. In the name there is the fame of nearly half a century. In the making there is the skill of long experience combined with honesty of purpose and unequalled manufacturing facilities. Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch represents the highest type of perfection there is or can be in starch. Kegs of 100-lbs.—handsome enamelled horse-shoe tins holding 6-lbs.—handsome 1-lb. packages that give a touch of life and color and "go" to a grocer's shelves.

“One Object and One Aim.”

You remember the old saying, “It is better not to have too many irons in the fire at once.” One thing well done is far better than a dozen carried but half way to perfection.

Captain Austin, manager of the Thistle Haddies Company's Factory at Digby, Nova Scotia, has followed in the footsteps of his father before him, and is acknowledged absolutely unsurpassed as a fish curer. His “one object and one aim” has always been to put up the very best fish in the very cleanest way—to cleanse them properly, to cure them properly, and to pack them perfectly.

Captain Austin has had but one iron in the fire at once—he has devoted a lifetime to doing just one thing and to doing that well. The result is that the famous represent without exception the top notch of excellence in their various lines. The Thistle Haddies Company's Factory is the most perfectly equipped and the cleanest one of the kind on the Atlantic Coast. Its cleanliness is almost proverbial. The cast iron rules regarding the quality of the fish themselves bar out everything that falls below the standard that has made the name of “The Thistle Brand” famous everywhere.

The rich, natural, delicate flavor of the freshly caught fish is retained in its fullness in the “Thistle” Brand. It is the brand that connoisseurs buy exclusively. It is the “Thistle” Brand that “wins out” every time, because Manager Captain Austin has now and always had but “one object and one aim” in life.

THE NAME.

When the name "JONAS" appears on a bottle of extract it is a guarantee that the contents are certain to give satisfaction to the user, because of its strength, purity and richness. In Canada, JONAS' FLAVORING EXTRACTS stand without a rival. Their fame is constantly increasing. What has been the secret of their success?

From the beginning, exactness in detail has been our policy. The manufacturing is in charge of competent and experienced hands. Nothing is left to chance. Every drop in every bottle that leaves the premises is exactly as it should be.

Jonas' Flavoring Extracts

are absolutely free from artificial coloring matter or essences. They are concentrated—distilled, redistilled, until they contain the greatest amount of strength.

Taking these facts into consideration, a wide-awake grocer can quite readily appreciate the advantage of handling them. It goes without saying that a woman prefers using such extracts for her cooking. A very little of them does the largest possible amount of work, and does it perfectly. The requirements of your lady customers for extracts that will give this satisfaction can be satisfied by selling them.

Dear Sir,—We have much pleasure in returning the essays on "The Buying, Handling and Selling of Coffees" which you had entrusted to us to judge of their comparative merits. SUBJOINED are the three papers that won the cash prizes in the recent contest inaugurated by THE CANADIAN GROCER. The object in view was the creation of greater interest in coffees among the trade. Already this has to some extent been accomplished, and, judging from the commendation which comes from the judges, the papers which we herewith publish will prove helpful as well as interesting to our readers. The five essays which were selected by the judges as entitling the writers to copies of THE CANADIAN GROCER for one year will appear in subsequent issues.

Mr. C. L. MARSHALL, the winner of the first prize of $15, is the manager of Warren Bros. & Co.'s sample-room. He is a native of Bristol, England. Medicine was the career originally intended for him, and for two years he was a student of the healing art. It is over twenty years since he came to Canada, and during the first five years of his residence here he was engaged as an accountant in the lumber business. His first experience in the grocery trade was with Mr. John Garvey, then a retailer in Peterboro', but who has since left that town. Mr. Marshall's connection with Warren Bros. & Co. began about eleven years ago. During that time he has gone through nearly every department of that firm's business, and his present position, as manager of the sample-room, he has been filling for the last three or four years.

Mr. WILLIAM RHODES, the winner of the second prize of $10, was born at Elk Rapids, Mich., in 1870. In 1883, his father having died about ten years before, he went to live with his uncle, Mr. John Rhodes, a Brockville, Ont., grocer, whose store, three years later, he entered as a clerk. In 1892 he became a partner, the style of the firm becoming J. Rhodes & Co., and now, in the declining years of the senior partner, the responsibility of the business largely rests upon the gentleman who carried off the second prize in the recent essay contest.

Mr. R. H. HUDSON, the winner of the third prize of $5, began his mercantile career in 1893 with the late W. Beatty, general merchant, Parry Sound, Ont. Mr. Hudson's duties were largely confined to the grocery department of the store, and he soon learned to take a lively interest in the goods carried in stock, as well as in the customers upon whom he waited. The result was that in three years he had become the firm's principal buyer, except for the dry goods and clothing department. The ill-health of Mrs. Hudson necessitated the removal of Mr. Hudson and his family to Ashville, N. C. There he began business as dealer in teas and coffees. Large quantities of the latter being drunk in the South as well as in other parts of the United States, Mr. Hudson paid particular attention to them. He gave names to his blends of teas as well as of coffees, and his business gradually increased. The health of his wife having improved, Mr. Hudson finally returned to Canada again and took charge of the tea and coffee department of MacWillie Bros., Yonge and Richmond streets, Toronto. In 1898 he went with Brown Bros., Queen street west, Toronto, where he still is, and where teas and coffees are still his hobby. Brown Bros., it might be noted, are famous for the exceedingly well-appointed tea-room which they have in connection with their store. Mr. Hudson was last year president of the Grocery Clerks' Association and this year he is treasurer of that organization. He has been a subscriber to THE CANADIAN GROCER since 1892.

The First Prize Essay.

By C. L. MARSHALL (O. G. Java), Toronto.

IT is now generally conceded that coffee is the most intricate branch of the grocery business. A thorough knowledge of its details can only be obtained after a lifetime's experience, and even then, with new growths and types being marketed month after month, no one has ever reached the point where it can be said truthfully that there is nothing new to learn. Many a grocer has stood aghast as he has faced the immensity of the subject, and although, perhaps, a thorough master of everything else pertaining to his business, has neglected the study of coffee, and been content to let the spice or wholesale man secure all the knowledge, and incidentally nearly all the profit there is to be obtained from what should be one of the most profitable lines he handles.

That coffee can be made a profitable and extensive business is demonstrated in nearly every city and large town in Canada

(as in other countries), where some particular grocer has built his reputation on selling good coffee—just a little better, perhaps, than his competitors sold.

Essentially a luxury, good coffee is, by the consumer, much more difficult to purchase than good tea. A more intimate knowledge of the latter has made it an important factor in every grocery store, whereas the former, not being in as general use, has been neglected by the majority of our merchants. Convinced that by supplying a better article at a moderate price any grocer can foster the trade for and encourage the consumption of an article which in many countries far exceeds in volume the sale of tea, I will endeavor to give a few hints which may be useful to the retail grocer in the buying, handling and selling of coffees.

BUYING.

The modern grocer rarely attempts to buy his coffee in the green condition. There are good reasons for this. Grown in Arabia, Java, Ceylon, India, the West Indies, Mexico and in nearly all the South-American Republics, with countless types and growths; many of the lower grades washed, dyed, scented and soaked to imitate the higher grades—numerous pitfalls await the buyer of greens, and experience has taught many an ambitious merchant that it is safer and easier to buy it washed. Aside from the expense incurred in the purchase of a roasting and cooling plant, the roasting itself is a high art and should not be attempted by any but a thoroughly experienced man. In support of this, the experience of a large departmental store is a good example. The company in question had always purchased its coffee roasted from a local roaster, and thinking that a greater profit could be made by buying it green, despatched the manager of the grocery department to New-York to buy what he considered in quality and quantity would meet the requirements of the store.

C. L. Marshall, Winner of 1st Prize.

Now, the buyer, an ex-proprietor of a grocery store and a thoroughly experienced man in many other respects, probably knew as much about "green" coffee as he knew about astronomy (and that was very little), and the result was his purchase included a large proportion of soaked Santos, made to look exactly like Mocha, and other faked-up growths in imitation of Javas and Ceylons on which, besides paying to the New York dealer an extor-tionate profit, not being imported direct from the country of growth, a duty of 10 per cent. ad valorem had also to be paid.

That goods well bought are half sold applies very strongly to coffee.

To buy it well you must rely on your own judgment as to what will suit the tastes of your customers. Disabuse your mind of the idea that there are only two high-grade coffees of any merit, Java and Mocha, for, whilst it is true that a good Mocha or a good Java is hard to beat, it is also a fact that many Central and South-American growths equal them in drinking quality.

Buy your coffees on sample, just as you buy your tea; grind it and draw it and test it, as you would tea—above all buy it for its drinking quality, not for style or appearance. Be satisfied with a fair profit: do not expect to buy coffee to retail at 40c. for less than 30 to 32c.; those to retail at 25 and 35c. per pound at 18 or 26 or 27c. respectively.

Always buy coffee:

- (a) Whole roasted (not ground).
- (b) In air-tight cans.
- (c) In small quantities (not over two weeks' supply if possible).
- (d) From a reputable spice house or wholesale grocer.

Where there is any German, Dutch or foreign trade, there is a demand for Rio coffees, in preference to mild growths, the consumer nearly always buying them green. In making your selection of these choose a green, flinty, regular bean, free from blacks and quakers. The latter can generally be detected by immersing a small quantity of the coffee in cold water, when the quakers will float on the surface. Reject any that are spongy or soft or which have the appearance of having been dyed or washed. Rio coffees in Canada are rarely consumed by English-speaking people—and for this reason, if you sell it roasted for your German trade, be careful not to mix or blend it with coffees sold to the former.

HANDLING.

Coffee may be carefully and skillfully bought at close prices, but not realizing how perishable it is, a serious loss is often made by careless handling. One point in the handling of coffee should always be borne in mind by those who wish to make a success of the business—viz., from the minute it is roasted until it passes into the hands of the consumer, the less it is exposed to the air, the better. There are two reasons for this:

Firstly.—It is very absorbent and easily becomes tainted by proximity to butter, cheese, coal oil, spices, etc.

Secondly.—It loses aroma and strength to a great extent by evaporation.

Both reasons apply more to ground coffee than they do to the unground berry.

Bearing this in mind it is not advisable to dress windows or make counter displays with loose, roasted coffee. Such a course can only lead to rapid deterioration, and a week or two's exposure will render any coffee almost worthless.

Window displays can be made with green coffee, and many merchants who do not sell the raw article purchase a small quantity for this purpose, or if exposed in air-tight, light, white flint bottles and changed frequently very little loss will be incurred by using roasted goods.

Still bearing in mind the rapidity with which deterioration sets in from evaporation, the importance of not stocking too heavily in roasted coffee will be apparent. For the same reason purchase and keep your supply in air-tight cans, and refuse to accept any purchase you have made which is shipped to you in barrels, boxes, or paper parcels. Jealously guard your stock from the air, grind it only as you sell it, and to insure its reaching your customer in good condition parcel it in parchment or tinfoil bags. These cost a little more than the ordinary paper packages, but the outlay will amply be repaid by increased sales. The same diligent care should be taken in handling the cheapest as the highest grades sold. The ideal cup is made from freshly roasted and recently ground coffee. Impress this on your customers and induce them, if possible, to grind their own coffee, just as they want it for each meal. Small mills of good and lasting quality can be retailed at one dollar or less; keep a dozen or so in stock, and press the sale of them. In countries where the sale of coffee is greatest per capita, it is almost invariably ground by the consumer.

To sum up, a few of the more important things to be remembered are:

- (a) Expose to the air as little as possible.
- (b) Induce your customers to do the same.
- (c) Keep your stock fresh.
- (d) If you sell it ground—sell it freshly ground.
- (e) Never allow it to come in contact with other goods.
- (f) Never grind anything but coffee in your coffee mill.

SELLING.

Your coffee well bought and skillfully handled will, to a great extent, make the selling of it an easy matter. It is however necessary to have a definite place of campaign in placing it before your customers.

Advertising.—If you have space in a newspaper, let the public know you make a leader of coffee, roasted daily, ground while they wait, etc. Emphasize the fact that you excel in this particular line and back it up with good values. Good coffee carries within itself its own best advertisement, viz.: aroma. Place your mill in a conspicuous position in the store; do your grinding within sight of the customer, and leave the appetizing odor arising from the process to tell its own tale—a tale more eloquent than any mere words can express.

Much good coffee is ruined by bad treatment in the making—and much has been condemned as "poor stuff" simply for this reason. To overcome defective preparation a good plan is to have one or two thousand neatly printed copies of the following formula, either on a special parchment coffee bag—or on a card which can be inclosed therein.

HOW TO MAKE A CUP OF COFFEE.

One tablespoonful of coffee to each cup and one for the coffee pot. Boil ten minutes and allow time to settle. Fill the cup with three parts coffee and balance with cream or scalded milk.

There are those who will take exception to the instructions in this recipe for "boiling," but I have found that, with coffee drinkers generally, boiling is popular, for the reason that it extracts everything contained in the coffee, and although it is true that the flavor can be extracted by a mere infusion, the body of weight of liquor is not obtainable without boiling.

As a further aid to selling periodical demonstrations, preferably in cold weather, should be useful. The expense of such is not great and a small cup, perfectly made, of your best line served with cream will act as an inducement for many a new customer to buy.

THE USE OF CHICORY.

In the history of the grocery business chicory has always been associated with coffee, and the judicious use of it is, without doubt, advantageous.

Many coffee consumers are much prejudiced against chicory or rather against the name, due largely to over-adulteration by grocers in the past when coffee was much higher-priced than it is at present. With low-grade coffee costing 22 to 23 cents per pound it was a great temptation, for the sake of profit, to add a too liberal proportion of chicory, so much so, that blends containing 50 or 75 per cent. were common articles of commerce. With the same low-grade coffees obtainable at 14 cents per pound and less the addition of chicory, from a profit point of view, is quite unnecessary. Chicory is now recognized as a most wholesome and harmless adulteration in coffee, and is appreciated, although unconsciously so, in blends containing 10 or 25 per cent. by a large section of the public who would consider there was something radically wrong with their beverage if the chicory were absent. At all events it is the custom of a great many grocers to add from two to four ounces to the pound, the consumer thus acquires a taste for the mixture and except in rare instances prefers the adulterated to the pure article.

Personally, I do not advocate the mixing of chicory with coffee, high grades in particular. It is true it adds body to the liquor, but it appreciably destroys the natural delicacy of flavor in a really good coffee—and in a properly balanced blend the addition of body should be unnecessary.

The chicory question has been threshed out over and over again in trade journals—much being written pro and con, but the wisest plan to adopt is to leave it to the individual tastes of the customers. If they prefer an admixture by all means supply it. When the sale of coffee is made endeavor, if possible, to sell two, three or four ounces of chicory in a separate parcel, to be mixed at home as required; in this way the purchaser can ascertain if he likes the addition, and if he does the proportion needed to suit his taste. Some coffee drinkers will have already decided the question and will ask for a stated quantity to be added, in which case the desired amount of chicory "nibs" can be added to the berry before grinding.

The grocer in buying should select a good, heavy-weight chicory, uniform in color and grain, and now, that as good an article is grown in Canada as can be produced anywhere in the world, it is not necessary to purchase the more expensive English and German growths. Before making your selection carefully draw a teaspoonful in a cup of boiling water. The liquor should be sweet and faintly pungent with no disagreeable flavor, and have all the necessary body.

In conclusion, no branch of the business is more worthy of the attention of the grocer than the buying, handling, and selling of coffees. A careful study of the tastes of his customers is of the utmost importance, for be it remembered that "tastes differ" and the delicate flavor of the high-grade Java, is so delicate as not to be appreciated by the every-day coffee drinker, a coarser, harsher flavor often being preferred.

Success awaits the man who will make a leader of coffee—and in doing so supply the public with a good and fresh article at a reasonable price. Try the experiment.

The Second Prize Essay.

By WILLIAM RHODES (Quality), Brockville, Ont.

COFFEE is one line among the many which a grocer handles that is capable of being made a distinguishing feature in one's trade; that is to say, a man may, by diligent pushing, assisted by a little judicious advertising, establish a reputation for fine coffee which will bring him trade outside of his regular customers.

This is something which should be aimed at for several reasons: First, it pays you a good profit; second, it is a good advertisement, and third, it helps to bring trade for other goods. Now in order to accomplish this desirable result, the first step is the

BUYING.

We presume these essays are intended for the benefit of retailers generally, so first, we would say, do not attempt to import your coffee green and do your own roasting unless doing an exceptionally large business. There are several good, reliable houses in Canada handling coffee and spices combined whose goods can be relied on both for quality and price, and we would recommend placing your account with one of them. They will do the roasting far better than you can, for they will do it in so much larger quantities under the watchful eye of men who, after years of practice, have become experts and know just when the proper color has been attained. Besides, there are several items in the cost of roasting which have to be taken into account, such as interest on investment (cost of roaster, etc.), fuel, shrinkage in weight, risk of burning a batch occasionally, and last, but not least, time consumed which could be far more profitably employed in attending promptly to customers, arranging stock attractively, or collecting accounts.

Wm. Rhodes, Winner of 2nd Prize.

A merchant should know all he possibly can learn about the goods he is handling and so it is a good plan to from other houses and draw them against the ones you are handling in order to compare values. It is also well to familiarize yourself with the flavors of the different coffees as well as noting the shape, style and general appearance of the berry. In these ways you may become something of an expert yourself in time.

Now, as to the different kinds of coffee. They consist of Ceylons, from the island of that name; Javas from the islands of Java and Sumatra; Mochas, from Arabia; Maracaibos, from Venezuela, in South America; Santos and Rios from Brazil, and Jamaicas from the Island of Jamaica. There are a number of other kinds. In fact, there is more or less coffee grown in nearly all tropical countries and islands, but the kinds we have mentioned are the ones best known to commerce.

The Plantation Ceylon is considered one of the finest coffees grown, and has its largest sale in Europe. Its sale in this country is limited; partly because it is not known, but principally on account of the price which ranges from 35 to 36 cents per pound. Having a rich, full flavor, it is often used for toning up other coffees, or makes a very fine cup of coffee alone.

But the names of coffees most familiar to the public are Java and Mocha, and there is a great deal of coffee sold under these names which is a libel on them.

Java and Mocha are the coffees which should be pushed, as they give the best satisfaction when your customers become educated to them.

There are lots of people who drink cheap, heavy, black coffee with a thick sediment in the bottom of the cup and they like it because their taste has been educated in that direction. But if you could get them to try a blend of Java and Mocha, and persist in its use for a short time, they would soon prefer it and they could not be induced to return to the cheaper grade. There are, of course, many grades of both Java and Mocha, the difference consisting partly in the draw and partly in the style of the bean, which is due to the care in cultivation and place of growth. Private Javas, which are the finest grown, are those grown on private estates where they get the greatest possible care in cultivation, and command prices ranging from 35 to 45c. per pound, but they are sold almost entirely to wealthy city trade.

Old Government or Mountain Java will be found satisfactory to ordinary trade, and when blended with Arabian Mocha, in about the proportion of 4 parts Java to 1 of Mocha, will make an excellent coffee to retail at 40c. per pound. Mocha does not make a desirable coffee alone, because of its peculiar acrid flavor.

Next in order come the Maracaibos—a medium-priced coffee. Here, again, you find a number of different grades. The best grade is branded "C. C." from the district of Cucuta, in Venezuela, its place of growth. At its present wholesale price, 10c., it makes excellent 30c. coffee alone, while by blending with Mocha and Java you have a choice 35c. grade. We do not recommend the use of chicory unless your customers demand it particularly.

The grades which retail at 25c. per pound or less are composed of cheaper Maracaibos, Rios, Santos, Jamaicas or a combination of several of them to suit the price and the customer.

You may buy small quantities of the different cheap lines and blend them yourself, or you can give your coffee house a price limit and have them put up the best blend possible at the price.

We think this the best plan as you do not require to bother with so many lines nor keep so large a stock. It is pleasing to note that Canadians as a people drink principally the best grades of coffee, the cheap package stuff, such as is sold largely in the United States, having little or no sale here. This condition of things is better for the seller, as the higher-priced article affords a better profit, and they certainly give greater pleasure in the cup to the consumer.

HANDLING.

The first point under this heading is the quantity to buy. Our rule is, to buy only a month's supply at a time and have it shipped in air-tight tins, as when coffee is exposed to atmospheric changes it absorbs the dampness, making the bean tough and rubbery, thus losing its crispness and fresh flavor. Coffee is one article which must be fresh to be as good as possible, so we would say, never buy ground coffee, as the delicious aroma and flavor of a good coffee passes away before it is all sold no matter how tight the tin, and a poor coffee is certainly not improved by being kept ground. If you desire to draw people's attention to your coffee by means of price tickets, put it in a glass dish with a tight-fitting cover.*

SELLING.

We now reach the last and most important point in connection with this subject, namely, the selling, for this touches your profit—your living.

The main point in selling is to get yourself and your goods prominently before the public. Use every legitimate means by which to get the people talking about your coffee, so that they will think you have the best coffee in your town or neighborhood. One way to accomplish this is to

ADVERTISE IN YOUR LOCAL PAPER.

A large and expensive space is not necessary as a small one written up in plain, catchy style will often do just as well. Change it often and make quality your strong point. Keep hammering away on quality, quality.

Quote prices occasionally if you wish, but don't cut prices. A cutter generally cuts his own throat first. Have your profit and sell good goods, for that is what tells in the long run.

TO DEMONSTRATE COFFEE.

Another very good way of advertising your coffee is by demonstration, when possible. Very often a back corner of a store or a small room in connection with a store could be fixed up cozily with little trouble or expense. A few small tables and chairs which can be rented cheaply; a good sized coffee-pot on a gas-burner or stove; clean linen, dainty china, and a plate of five-o'clock tea biscuit on each table, and you are ready for callers. Of course, a demonstration, to be a success, must be well advertised for about a week beforehand.

Another point is to watch your customers' orders and see if they all buy their coffee from you. If you find that any do not, introduce the subject in a careful way, ascertain their particular taste as nearly as possible, give them a sample to try and tell them to be sure to let you know how they liked it. If they should forget to do that, ask them yourself and if that sample failed to please give them another blend, and so keep on until you strike something to suit their taste.

Do not keep much coffee ground up ahead. It is, however, a good plan to grind what you think will be needed on Saturday first thing in the morning, so that customers get the benefit of the aroma when they crowd in.

In conclusion, do not get discouraged if results do not follow as quickly as you think they should. Be patient and keep pounding away on quality first and success will be yours eventually.

The Third Prize Essay.

By R. H. HUDSON (Wahbunung), Toronto.

I AM not asked to say anything in this article as to the history of the coffee bean, or as to the amount used in our own or foreign countries. Instead, as the preacher would say, my text has been given to me and I shall proceed with the subject on hand.

To my mind the buying, handling and selling of coffee, is the most important by far of all the duties of the grocer; and it must, of necessity, call for the greatest possible care and intelligent consideration on his part and the faithfulness of those associated with him in seconding his efforts to maintain a high standard. For no matter what care and wisdom have been manifested in buying, unless they are handled properly, the selling of them will eventually amount to but very little in building up and holding your trade.

THE MOST SUITABLE COFFEES.

In buying your coffees you must know what kinds suit our water; that is, what coffees are the best to use where you have hard water, and what kinds are best where the water is soft. The kinds which I believe to be most suitable here are Mocha, Java, Ceylon, Maracibo, Santos and Rio; and grocers, in Canada, at least, should be very sparing indeed of any other kind. Two of the kinds mentioned should never be put in where finest quality is sought, as delicate flavor departs when you sprinkle Rio or Santos in your blends, just in proportion to the extent in which you use them.

THREE GOOD BLENDS.

If your trade demands what mine has you need about three regular blends. The first should be a well-colored, strongly-flavored blend of about 10 parts Mocha, 4 parts Java, 2 parts Ceylon and 1 part Maracaibo. A second blend, very mild for those who delight to smack their lips and say, "There's the flavor!" would be of about 10 parts Java to 4 parts Mocha and 1 Maracaibo; while a third blend to please the cheap trade can be made of about 4 parts Mocha or Ceylon, 4 parts Maracaibo and 3 Rio or Santos (Santos preferred).

But whatever blends you have keep them the same. and buy so that you may be able to do so. You may as well attempt to fly as to please your trade by giving one good blend this time, and a different one next time, and so on. Give a poor blend, if you must, all the time, rather than a good one and a poor one alternately.

Seeing, then, it is so important to have a fixedness of flavor, you must necessarily obtain the same coffees and not go hunting from Dan to Beersheba for something cheaper to palm off on your trade; for when it comes to drinking coffee, the trade worth seeking demands the best and will pay for it. The proper way, no doubt, is to have a sample of your last purchase on hand and draw to match; and never buy, or, at least, never have roasted more than a week's supply on hand at one time. Never mind that quarter of a cent extra for roasting often, for the resulting benefit will extend into dollars.

BACON'S OPINION OF COFFEE.

The philosopher, Bacon, said of coffee: "This drink com-forteth the brain and heart and helpeth digestion." Fortunately for him that he does not live in this day and be forced to drink some of the mixtures sold for coffee!

There is a reason for the large sale of package coffees which give so little profit on a turn-over; and possibly you've guessed it by what I have said. "There the same poor quality," do you say, "but they can always be relied on for one thing, namely, the same flavor as last time." And the demand for these package goods is on the increase and will be still greater if you will not buy what will change your cereal, or chicory, or paste-drinking customers into substantial coffee customers; and your casual coffee customers into well-pleased and delighted customers, who must have your blends no matter where they move, so long as it is within reach of you at all.

There is no food which gives the mental exhilaration and physical buoyancy which coffee gives; hence the importance of purchasing with this high ideal in one's mind and not merely to gratify a fancied whim on the part of your customers. Be firm in your resolve to have the best procurable, and to always have the best.

CARE IN HANDLING.

Then, there is the handling of coffees, so dependent on the buying and so fraught with important issues. For how true it is that the best coffee ever imported can be spoiled entirely by careless handling; handling by wholesalers or jobbers, and later by the retailer or his assistants! Grocers err mostly in some of the following ways: By exposing the bean in the store or window for show or advertisement, leaving it in the same store-room with coal oil, or fruit, such as oranges, lemons, pineapples, etc., or vegetables, such as turnips, cabbage and potatoes. You remember what the proverbial preacher said: "Brethren, these things ought not so to be." And so we must lay all the emphasis possible upon the importance of keeping this delicate berry away from its grocery store associates: for nothing can improve the flavor of the bean, but dozens of fruits, vegetables, etc., can do untold harm.

Another thing I must mention is the

a very important matter, and yet one which is relegated to the freshest boys in the store. A lady returned a pound of coffee a short time ago, complaining of a taste of sulphur about it, and the fact was revealed that it had been packed on the top of a box of matches which went in the same order. And I could give you similar instances, where good coffee had been rendered almost useless and the trade of the customer in question jeopardized. Be sure always to pack the tea and coffee away from anything and everything which could possibly affect it, and the best plan is to have a separate box, clean and dry as a bone, for teas and coffees, then it will run no risk of being packed in a fish box, a haddie or codfish box, for instance. I spoke about this not long ago to a delivery clerk and he replied, "Why, haddie boxes are the nicest delivery boxes we have!"

I have often thought how much I would like to take some of our grocers and clerks through some good coffee-milling establishment, where they could see for themselves how very particular the operators are in their work of sorting, then cleaning and grading, then roasting of the berries. While the coffee is yet warm it is ground and packed in tin boxes, half-pound, one pound, and up to fifty pound tins, when it is labelled and taken to the ware-room ready for shipment, the whole manipulation, from beginning to finish, being a practical demonstration of the

and the utter absence of all foreign flavors. It is not a question of what our mothers twenty years ago thought about coffee, or how the grocer around the corner used to handle his coffee, for likely he had only one scoop, and it had to do duty for pepper and tea, cloves and coffee, as well as salt, sage and snuff. This is a day when law and order should be recognized everywhere, and especially should we have the best going in our up-to-date stores. I would just as soon think of taking the peek measure or oyster ladle to fill up my coffee with as the scoops which are used by some grocers daily. No wonder your customers have been driven to the package goods, for they have seen some of your habits and they "beg to be excused," and so take the other fellow's brand, while you are out a nice little profit. Worst of all, you have by your carelessness forced them to use some brand which can be purchased anywhere else, and so they need not put themselves about to come to your store, when they can just send across to the little corner grocery. A customer lost through careless handling! Are our customers particular? Are they cranks? Let us praise them for it, and be even more particular, for it is right and will surely pay.

And so the proper handling means the easier selling, for after all

SELLING IS THE GOAL.

We buy and handle to sell. We read and think what and where to buy and how to handle that we may sell the goods. And how pleasant and comparatively easy it is to sell what we have confidence in ourselves; what we know comes up to our ideal of what is possible in coffee blending.

If there is one kind of an individual for whom I have no respect, it is that storkeeper who prates about relatives, friends, weather, the latest in novels or shows; but when he is asked about coffee is as dumb as an oyster. What is the matter? Why, his heart is in these things and not in his business; and the day seems so long, and dinner time or supper hour so tardy in coming, because he doesn't enjoy his work, and he is not trying to do his best. Know how to prepare coffee yourself and you will be able to speak from experience.

When the boys came home from South Africa how we endeavored to get near them to talk with them! Why? Because of their experience, thrilling and interesting as it was! And their words burned themselves on our memory, and we said: "What splendid fellows!"

And if we wish to impress our opinions upon our customers, we must though humbly and kindly, and be able promptly to give a reason why we recommend any special blend of coffee, so that if Miss A. wishes a nice, mild drink, we shall explain the character of our No. 2 blend, and if Mrs. B. wants a good, strong drink, our No. 1 blend will just suit, and so on. Take your customers into your confidence, and explain the proper mode of preparing for use; for really very few people know how, but will follow your advice gladly.

Sell your customers your best. Rather sell half a pound of good than a pound of cheap coffee, and it will pay you to do so. Few are attracted by low prices. It is quality that draws, and quality that retains.

Demonstrate your best blends occasionally. Serve with dainty cups and saucers.

Advertise judiciously. Let the people know that you are still alive and in the old stand.

Be good-natured, courteous, attentive, and keep your blends always up to the standard and enclosed in well-fitting tins, arranged in sight of your customers.

HE MISSED HIS VOCATION.

DO you believe in palmistry? I suppose it is unnecessary to say that it is the science by which a palmist looks at your palm and by the lines on it tells not only your characteristics, but your probable future.

I never believed in it much until the other day, when a palmist read my old flipper and told me what sort of a man I was. I had no idea before that I was such a nice man. I repeated the whole thing to my wife that night, and I could see that she was impressed. After I was through, she observed that it was strange that after 28 years of married life she hadn't discovered some of the good qualities that the palmist had found in two minutes.

Seriously, I believe in any science or fad, whichever you please, that can see as far into a man's disposition as that palmist saw into mine. Actually, the analysis was so close that I felt an involuntary, modest shrinking while I was in the man's presence—sort of fearful that he could look right through my shirt and see the old brown mole on my heaving bosom.

I asked the palmist whether he himself believed in the thing. He said, with great earnestness, that he did, and argued that, in his opinion, it was not in the Divine plan to send a child to earth with no guide post by which his leanings should be determined, like a compassless ship. The lines of the palm, he thought, were the signs of character and trend by which a child should be started right on the walk of life.

This gives palmistry a practical bent that has never been claimed for it before. If the argument is logical, a father could forecast from the palm of his month-old baby that baby's future—what it was cut out for; what it should be.

For neither the shape of the hand nor the lines in it change, be a man 70 years old or 7 days.

I couldn't help but think of these things the other day as I stood in the little store of a grocer and notion seller in a small Pennsylvania town. I have known the old fellow who runs this store for a good many years. He is about 70 years old—one of the little, old, mild-mannered fellows who invariably have large families.

The description of this old man will probably be recognized by nearly every salesman who travels through Central Pennsylvania. He has never been a successful merchant—he has never been anything like successful. He is as good an example of a misfit as I ever saw.

This poor old grocer is absolutely at the mercy of every salesman who sells him goods. He knows nothing about buying—he can't seem to learn anything about it. When the salesmen tell him to buy he buys. The salesmen all know the old fellow and they take care of him, for while any travelling man will dump with pleasure the merchant who poses as a smart Aleck, they are protectors as true as steel to the man who admits his ignorance and puts himself in their hands.

The old fellow takes a trade paper and seems to read it in a desultory fashion, but information about the markets seems to make no impression on him. He hasn't a shred of business instinct, and he has grown to lean so absolutely on the salesmen that he no longer considers it necessary to think for himself.

If this lamentable old failure had only had a father to study his palm as he lay in his cradle, he might have been spared this lifetime of failure. I looked at his hands that day as he wrapped up some sugar. They had long, slender fingers—a beautiful hand—the real artistic hand. The man should have been an artist or a musician. Never in the world should he have been a grocer or a merchant of any sort.

But seventy years ago palmistry, with other things, was probably not even dreamed of.

His customer gone, I engaged the old fellow in conversation. I wanted to see whether my little attempt at reading his hand was borne out by the facts.

I asked him how business was. "Bad." I have never heard him say anything else for ten years. I looked about the store for a means of getting at what I wanted. Finally, I saw a gay colored poster back of the counter.

"It's wonderful," I said, "how beautifully color printing can be done nowadays. Look at that child—the flesh tints in the face there are wonderful!"

"Fair," said the old fellow, briskly, "but they need brightening a little. They're a little too pale. As a rule, the tones in these posters are exaggerated, but in this case it's the reverse."

"Pardon me," I said, "but you seem to know something about these things. Do you paint?"

"Oh, no," he replied. "I used to do a little at it when I was younger, but I haven't for twenty years." And the old fellow sighed.

This aged and forlorn grocer, rubbing along at 70 with a poor little unprofitable grocery store on his bent back, might have made a national reputation as an artist. He "used to do a little at it when he was younger"—how that speaks of a born ambition, only half gratified, then strangled!

One look at his hands had told me more about his bent than a lifetime had told either himself or his parents.

All this for the want of a shrewd, keen-eyed palmist to look at that baby's palm, and say, "This child's bent is artistic; he should play, or sing, or paint."—Stroller, in Grocery World.

DOGS IN GROCERY STORES.

Dogs have their places, remarks American Grocer. They possess qualities that endear them to men and women. They also possess teeth that adhere very closely to a man or woman on occasion. Considering their affection for their master or their mistress and their friendship for friends, it is not surprising that so many dote on the dog, or even that women make fools of themselves over their beribboned puppies.

There may be a question as to whether a dog is in his place in a woman's arms, but there is no question that a dog in a grocery is, head, tail, and 'tween ribs, entirely out of place. We are not referring so much to the customer's canine as to the grocer's dog. He may be big, little, or average—the airy greyhound, the sportive terrier, the grim-visaged bull, or the majestic mastiff. In each and every case, the animal is out of gear with the business.

We are not referring to his natural-born habits. Under proper discipline they can be properized. Neither do we refer to any probable (though there is always a possible) attempt of the dog to make both ends of his teeth meet in somebody's calf. Our objection—rather, criticism—is that a dog lying in the doorway or cavorting about the store is, in commercial parlance, "in restraint of trade."

Fear of the stranger-dog is inborn in most of the sons and daughters of Adam. Many a child, many a woman, and, more or less, men, have been prevented, by fear of a canine dental operation, from going into a store to buy goods. The dog-owner loses customers, alias profits, by the presence of his four-legged companion to such a degree that, did he realize it, it would make him both say and put in practice "Dog gone!"

It is always exasperating to the dog-fearer to hear the owner so confidently remark, "Oh, never mind, Jack; he won't bite," while the watchful "critter" is suspiciously looking at you and growling ominously. Curious, isn't it? The dog-owner is always sure his dog will never bite.

Friend grocer, if you are in business to realize the largest possible returns, either make a door-mat out of your dog or give him to somebody who has neither business nor friends.

The grocer who keeps his dog in the store To snap at the cat or indulge in a snore, Will add to his customer's comfort and ease, Will find that his sales will be sure to increase If he shortens the "dorg" by a head and a tail And announces the fact to his trade by next mail.

GROCERS TO HAVE HORSE RACE.

On Wednesday afternoon next the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association intend enjoying an afternoon's fun at Exhibition Park. Owing to the fact that some of the events at the annual picnic at Oshawa were not run off, several prizes donated for that day were not disposed of, so it was decided to have another afternoon's sport.

There has been during the past year or two considerable discussion among the grocers of Toronto as to who possesses the speediest horse, so it has been decided to hold both trotting and running races to decide the championship.

Owing to the roughness of the ground at Oshawa, the quoit match there was not altogether satisfactory, and another match, to which entries from both travellers and grocers will be received, will be held. Another interesting event will be a relay race between grocers east of Yonge street and those west of Yonge.

A baseball match between the grocers' association and the wholesale fruiterers of the city is also on the programme for the day. This is likely to be a warm, keenly-fought contest.

Altogether, the afternoon promises to be an unusually interesting one.

FIRE INSURANCE RATES IN THE MARITIME PROVINCES.

In its report of the discussion of fire insurance rates at the convention of the Maritime Board of Trade, The Monetary Times says that eight delegates retired while the subject was under consideration.

Our contemporary has been misinformed. Only one retired, and that one was Mr. W. M. Jarvis, St. John, the representative in the Maritime Provinces of the Liverpool, London and Globe Insurance Company, who did so, as he said, from a sense of delicacy. Our reason for referring to the error is to smother any impression that might get abroad that anyone left the meeting as a protest against the resolution that was under discussion. Instead of there being any dissentients, the delegates were unanimously in favor of the resolution.

In our own report a slight error occurred, through the printer substituting the word "have" for "leave" in the second line at top of third column, page 15. The sentence, which was in Mr. Jarvis' address, read: "But it was a serious matter to have these boards and so weaken the influence which they exercised for good." Substitute the word "leave" for "have," and you have the sentence as Mr. Jarvis spoke it.

FIRE IN A TORONTO GROCERY.

Late Wednesday evening fire was discovered in the grocery store of A. White, 440 College street, Toronto. About $600 damage was done, which is covered by insurance.

SPICE AND GROCERY CABINETS.

NO part of a grocer's business has, of late years, received more attention than the arrangement of goods in his store. It has become a recognized fact that the appearance of a store has much to do with the success of the proprietor. The store which is dainty and attractive in appearance, in which everything is so placed as to keep it clean and sound, is the store which does much to attract and retain customers.

Owing to the especial need that spices and other delicacies handled by the grocer in bulk should be kept free from taint and dirt, the trade will be greatly interested in the spice and grocery cabinet, designed by J. S. Bennett, Toronto.

These cabinets are both substantial and attractive. They are fitted with drawers, which are a patent combination of block tin or galvanized iron and wood, which prevents cracking, shrinking and sticking.

They have a lip at the top, making them dust and insect proof; also a depression in the side, with a price card and a bronze label and drawer pull. The back and divisions of cabinet being metal, it defies mice and worms.

A cabinet similar to the one shown in the accompanying cut, and containing 24 drawers, each  $4 \times 4\frac{1}{4} \times 10$ ; 12, each  $4 \times 6\frac{3}{4} \times 10$ ; 12, each  $6 \times 6\frac{3}{4} \times 10$  inches, and made in either oak, birch or maple and hard oil finished, is listed at \$20. Other sizes are made, listing at \$15, \$28.50, \$17.50, \$32.50, \$22.50 and \$40.

Further information re these cabinets may be secured by communicating with J. S. Bennett, 20 Sheridan avenue, Toronto.

HOW THINGS GROW IN HAWAII.

How great are the possibilities of Hawaii as a fruit and vegetable growing country, will be understood, says an exchange, when it becomes known that four crops of potatoes have been produced in succession on the same piece of land within twelve months. Radishes become edible in ten days after sowing. Strawberry vines bear fruit all the year. The berries are of the finest flavor.

Cabbage grows all the year, and it apparently makes no difference whether it is planted in the spring, summer, autumn or winter. Parsley once sown, grows forever, apparently. Lima beans continue to grow and bear for over a year, and they have to be gathered every week after starting to bear. Cucumbers bear the entire year, and so do tomatoes, which, with proper attention, bear for years. Raspberries bear for six months.

Pineapples come into bearing when the plants are four months old and bear in abundance for years. Lettuce can be planted at any time and it develops quickly. The same is true of celery.

BREAD BY EXPRESS FOR GROCERS.

To the extent of the truth of the axiom that there is no proof of quality in any article so convincing as a constantly increasing demand for it, the advertisement of The Model Bakery Co., Limited, Toronto, manufacturers of Weston's bread, in this issue should be a convincing one. This firm, by virtue of the consistent quality of their bread, and the satisfactory treatment they have always extended to their customers, have succeeded in extending their trade to 120 cities, towns and villages throughout Ontario.

The bread is expressed (prepaid) daily from Toronto in baskets. During August 7,500 lb., or  $3\frac{1}{2}$  tons, were shipped in this way every day.

In the great majority of instances this bread is handled by grocers, so that the increase in the demand for it has added materially to the revenue of many grocers throughout the Province. The Model Bakery Co., Limited, claim that this has not been the only advantage to the retailer handling their bread, maintaining that as bread is a staple article, the grocer who really handles good bread is bound to have a big connection with desirable customers.

THE CANNED SALMON FLEET.

THE Colonist, Victoria, B. C., of August 24 says: "To-day the sock-eye packing season ends, and in a short time the salmon carriers now arrived will have commenced loading the cases of British Columbian salmon for the British market. The Blytheswood, which has been lying at Esquimalt for a couple of months—having been one of the first of the salmon fleet to arrive—yesterday began to load ballast preparatory to going to the Fraser to begin loading, and the Largo Law, which has completed discharging her cargo of general merchandise on the Mainland is preparing to commence loading. The Combermere, which arrived some days ago at Port Townsend, is also preparing to receive her cargo.

"The salmon fleet this year will be one of the largest that has ever carried the British Columbian pack to the Old Country. In all nine ships have been chartered to date. The Beechdale is on her way up from Callao to load on the Fraser for W. A. Ward & Co.; the Red Rock is probably off the Cape waiting fair winds to enter with her cargo of merchandise, after discharging which she is to load salmon; the Santa left Juni on July 5 with nitre and general cargo for Honolulu, and is coming thence to the Royal Roads to load salmon; the Chas. Coteworth is 45 days out from Callao for the Roads; the Ballachulish left Santa Rosalia a month ago for Victoria, with part of her cargo loaded at Hamburg, to load salmon on the Fraser; the Havila is 50 days out from Santa Rosalia for Victoria, and with the vessels which have already arrived this will make a fleet of nine vessels in all which have been chartered to load the salmon pack of this season. As last year the fleet only numbered five vessels, it is seen that much more salmon is expected to be shipped to England this year than last. Last year's fleet was made up of the ships Ardnarmurchan, whose home trip was the subject of much speculation; Machribanish, Naiad, Fiery Cross and Clan Mackenzie."

Mr. C. E. Macmichael, of St. John, N. B., has been appointed agent in New Brunswick for Upton's jams, jellies and marmalade, and also for MacLaren's Imperial cheese.

Mr. Fred Carne, jr., Victoria, B. C., spent a few days in Toronto last week. Mr. Carne is one of Victoria's leading retail grocers, and is taking a holiday trip east, visiting, among other places, Minneapolis, Chicago, Buffalo and Toronto. He was one of THE CANADIAN GROCER's first subscribers in Victoria.

A QUESTION REGARDING PREMIUMS.

"J. McF." writes: Is there any advantage to the grocer to push the sale of a line of goods because premiums are offered to the consumer?

I THINK not. The grocer must expect the cost of the premiums to be deducted from his profits or the consumer must receive less value than he otherwise would were the premiums not given. The retailer is the most likely man to suffer, because the manufacturer will probably reduce his profit to cover the cost, expecting the additional demand on account of the premiums to compel the grocer to keep his goods. It is not reasonable to suppose anyone can give as good value with premiums as without them, for that is simply impossible. Why should the grocer, by encouraging premium goods, be a party to hurt the trade of his fellow-merchant in the bookselling, jewellery, furniture or crockery line? Every retailer knows it is just as easy to sell the customer goods without as with premiums, for the average customer, when buying goods, never, as a rule, considers the premium, but the quality of that he is purchasing. To me, it is strange that cheap jewellery, watches, pictures and furniture must (presumably) be given away to sell soap, tea, washing compounds and baking powders. It is not a legitimate business. If it is right, then extend the system and give us premiums on everything we sell. My own idea is: Have the value in the goods, irrespective of anything else, and build up a reputation for dealing squarely and honestly by selling goods on their merits alone.

VINEGAR TAPS.

"R.O.F." writes regarding the vinegar tap difficulty. He says: "We have found the use of wine faucets the most satisfactory. We also find that all wood faucets are easily split when hammering to position. This I always superintend myself, as I find most clerks 'ram them in any old way.' By boring the hole carefully, soaking the faucet before using, and a careful use of the hammer will insure perfect results."

This has been my experience to a large extent, and I also prefer the wine faucet to the all wood. It is not so apt to leak.

A QUESTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

"J.K." has a chance of going into partnership with another clerk, and buying out an old-established grocery business. He is now receiving a good salary as clerk.

It is very hard for me to advise you on a subject like this. One should be intimately acquainted with all the parties concerned and the possibilities of the business mentioned before he is able to discuss this question in a fair way. As a rule I do not like partnership businesses. You should have a thorough knowledge of your partner's character before you make a decision. Differences of opinion on small matters have dissolved and ruined many a good firm. You are responsible for all the acts of your partner in connection with the business. It is not necessary for him to consult you—or you him, for that matter—so you must each fully realize the responsibility that rests upon you, for the welfare of the business depends upon this. I cannot advise you for or against this partnership. All I am able to do is just say a few words of warning along well-known lines. Where you have two men devoted to the interest of a business with sound commonsense, you have a partnership that is bound to be productive of good financial results. Again, when two men go into a business together and one distrusts the other, there is continual faultfinding, bickering over small things, allowing outside issues to interfere with their business friendship in any way, and you have a partnership that is going to end disastrously to all concerned. However, give this matter very careful consideration, talk it over thoroughly with your prospective partner, and have the agreement between you properly drawn up, so that nothing important is left to be understood. Have everything down on the agreement. This saves misunderstandings between you later. My only wish is that you may have success. One other important item: Don't leave your present position until the other is a certainty. "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush."

PRIZES FOR CLERKS.

"G.S." writes: What about clerks getting prizes from wholesale houses for selling certain package goods?

More premium business, only it's the clerk this time. Well, he is no better than the customer, and should sell what his employer tells him. A proprietor often has lines of goods that are all right, yet they go slowly, and if he tells his clerks to push them out, they must (if the interest of the business has any weight with them) obey. I believe a man is paid to sell goods, and no particular line to the exclusion of others. If the employer understands that his clerks receive this premium and is agreeable to the arrangement, then I have nothing to say, but under any other circumstances I do not think a clerk should push the sale of any one line of goods in preference to others, except as he receives instructions from his employer. Someone else wrote me asking this same question before; I hope we now have this matter finally settled.

WORKING FOR BOARD AND CLOTHES.

"Alex. B." says he is working at the business for only his board and clothes, for when he pays these two items he has nothing left for himself.

There are others in the same predicament, including a number of grocers, and some who tell me this are doing a good business, but are unable to get the profits. I'll admit it is not an agreeable condition of affairs, but at the present moment I am unable to suggest a remedy. If I remember rightly, you are young, and the experience you are now acquiring is valuable, providing you are making the best use of your time. A young man should be constantly fitting himself for higher and better employment. The opportunity is sure to come to him for using his knowledge. He may have some time to wait, but it is bound to come if he works for it. The trouble with the great majority of boys is they do not cultivate and develop their ability. They are always after amusement rather than instruction, and, as a consequence, fail to advance in any calling, simply because they are unworthy. We are all impatient. It is natural with some of us that we should be so, yet I often think most people get along as fast as they are qualified, yet we never think this of ourselves. It is pretty hard at times to get any honey out of the grocery life. It is an arduous business at its best, with lots of labor for small financial returns. One has to look long and carefully to find the redeeming pleasures of our business, and sometimes it is a question of a man's temperament if he ever finds any pleasing features in his business. The steadiness of the grocery business, unaffected by styles and seasons, is, to my mind, one of its chief attractions. One has to be continually working and selling in this business, and the successful man has no time to be despondent. Our business takes more of a man's time and energy than any other of which I have any knowledge. Dissatisfaction and despondency will wreck a man's prospects quicker than anything else, while the man who has hopefulness and cheerfulness will generally prosper.

J. & R. Robson, millers and flour and feed dealers, Brantford, Ont., have dissolved.

Royal is the baking powder of highest character and reputation, the favorite among housekeepers. The cheapest to consumers, the most profitable for dealers to handle.

Those grocers who are most successful in business---who have the greatest trade, highest reputation, the largest bank accounts---are those who sell the highest quality, purest, best known articles.

It is a discredit to a grocer to sell impure, adulterated and unwholesome goods; nor is the sale of such goods, even though the profits on a single lot may be larger, as profitable in the long run as the sale of pure, wholesome, high-class articles at a less percentage.

Trade is won and held by the sale of the best, the highest grade, the most reliable goods.

Temptation

 "That has ever been around,
 "It goes with so much chewing gum;

 "How many will you take?

Then spake the lusty baker :

 "The profit I would make.
 "I bought some Tutti Frutti
 "From that chap, the other day,
 "And from the way it's going
 "Guess I'll want some more to-day;

"So put down some Tutti Frutti—Oh,
 "Just a box or two ;
 "For when it's fresh it's better,
 "And sells much quicker too.
 "The public have that feeling,
 "When they want a chew,
 "It's Adams' Tutti Frutti,
 "No other brand will do."

ILLUSTRATE CANADA'S INDUSTRIAL LIFE.

THE preparations and decorations being made at all points to be visited by the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York are proceeding apace. It is right and fitting that arches and trimming of buildings should be done mainly for the purpose of ornamentation, and in an artistic manner.

But is there not also room for something to illustrate the industrial life of Canada? Are we to let the Royal party leave the country without some good illustration of the material progress which the community has made in the industrial arts?

We observe that at least a dozen of the leading newspapers of Great Britain will send representative correspondents to report the proceedings at all the points, and if they are struck by notable evidences of our manufacturing progress and development, the outside world will hear of it.

We observe that in Australia one of the arches under which the Royal couple passed was intended to set forth the immense butter-making industry of Victoria. Is it impossible for us to do something in that line here? What about our great cheese industry?

What about our fruit trade? Should these not be made to serve as part of the celebrations at certain points? There is nothing sordid or base about our parading before the future Sovereign of this Dominion the extent of the wealth over which he must some day wield authority. The military demonstrations are all right as part of the celebration, and we thoroughly approve of them, but there surely must be room for other things, and the commercial phases of life in Canada can be made of sufficient interest to warrant their being included in the coming programme. Where there is to be an elaborate procession, the trades organizations can be made to play a splendid part, as they sometimes do at national fetes in Montreal and elsewhere.

We would like our readers to bring this suggestion to the notice of the committees in charge of the preparations, so that it may receive due attention. Arches to illustrate the dairy or fruit industries of Canada would not be expensive.

We could imagine a magnificent arch decorated with the almost tropical fruits which are grown in the open air of our clear climate, and any town in the vicinity of a fruit area which overlooks this feature will probably make a great mistake.

The Royal couple must have seen scores of the most artistic arches in the world, and, as far as high art is concerned, we are not likely to do any better than what has already been so well done in other parts of the British Empire. But whatever is unique, what is characteristic of our national life, will necessarily be far more interesting to our visitors than something along the daily level of ordinary decoration.

EVIDENCE OF A POOR PEACH CROP.

One can usually gather a fair idea, from a glance at the exhibits at the Toronto Industrial, as to what kind of a peach crop Ontario possesses.

Judging from the character of the exhibits this year, the reports which have been published lately have by no means exaggerated the unsatisfactory character of this year's crop.

Last year, the peaches shown were large in number and exceedingly fine in quality. The conditions are this year decidedly the reverse.

Canned peaches, this year, threaten to become, like the canned lobster, almost a luxury.

THE CALIFORNIAN FRUIT CROP.

THE present season has been up to date a most satisfactory one to Californian fruit growers. The crop has, on the whole, been somewhat under the average, but as the quality of the shipments has been unusually high, prices on all lines have been higher than they were a year ago.

The crop of cherries, which opened the season last June, was somewhat under the average and prices were kept steady and high.

Apricots, which came next to the market, were in fair supply, but an active demand held prices up.

There was an excellent crop of peaches, both in California and in the Eastern Southern States. The receipts in New York have averaged over 50 cars per day for some time. These large receipts naturally prevented high figures, yet the prices received were somewhat higher than last season.

Californian plums, which arrive on the market much earlier than the fruit from Oregon, Washington and Idaho, were an average crop, for which full figures were paid for all desirable lines.

Bartlett pears have been, however, the source of greatest satisfaction and most profit to the Californian growers. The crop in California was large and of superior quality, while, on the other hand, the extreme heat of July virtually ruined the crop in the Eastern States. Prices have consequently been fully twice as high as a year ago.

The least profitable crop of the season is the grape crop. It has been not much more than half a yield, and, though high prices are paid for well-colored grapes, only moderate figures are received for some of the receipts, which are not up to the standard in color.

While the growers have had a good year, an official report from the California Canners' Association states that the canners have not been able to put up a full pack. Owing to the brisk demand for the green fruit and to the difficulty of securing tin for cans, it is estimated that the pack of Crawford and Lemon Cling peaches and of Bartlett pears has not been above 30 per cent.

THE FRASER RIVER SOCKEYE PACK.

SOCKEYE salmon packing for the season 1901 is over, and the results are most gratifying, as far as quantity is concerned. Packing practically ceased the last week in August, the run of salmon having ceased. There is now no close season.

The pack on the Fraser river, if not the largest on record, very closely approximates to it. The largest pack on record was in 1897, when 879,775 cases were put up. And, up to August 24, a few days before operations ceased, 876,101 cases were estimated to have been packed this season. In face of these figures, it is likely that the pack of 1901 on the Fraser will be larger, rather than smaller, than that of 1897. In fact, more than one advice from the Coast estimate the pack at 900,000 cases. The pack of sockeye salmon at the different Fraser river canneries, up to the evening of August 24, was given as follows:

The pack on the Fraser river in 1898 was but 264,331 cases; in 1899, 527,396, and in 1900, 331,361 cases.

The total pack in British Columbia in 1897, the record year, was 1,040,000 cases. How the present season's pack will compare with that remains to be seen. One thing is certain: The pack on the northern rivers and inlets is a short one this season. In our issue of August 2, we pointed out that it would probably be only about one-half that of 1900.

There is naturally an easier feeling in regard to the price of canned salmon since it became evident that the pack on the Fraser was a large one. No change, however, yet appears to have been effected in the price of the standard brands such as "Horseshoe," "Maple Leaf" and "Clover Leaf." But on special and private brands there has been a reduction of 60c. per case on the Coast. There is an understanding among the packers on the Fraser to the effect that no cut in prices shall be made on the standard brands, the object being to protect dealers who placed their orders early in the season, and have in turn taken orders from the retail trade. In view of the light pack in the north, we may, however, expect a good supply of Fraser river sockeye salmon at a moderate price, something which has not been experienced during the last year or two. The English market is easier in sympathy with the conditions prevailing on the Coast.

On account of the large pack of sockeye on the Fraser river, it is said the canners will give little or no attention to cohoes this year. Should this idea be persevered in, it will naturally help to steady the market for sockeye salmon.

As pointed out in another column, the fleet of vessels to carry canned salmon to the English market will be larger than last year, there being nine, each with a carrying capacity of 60,000 cases, chartered for the purpose.

OUR BACON TRADE WITH BRITAIN.

THERE was a most unsatisfactory decline in the import of bacon and hams from Canada into Great Britain during the first seven months of the present year as compared with the same period in 1900.

In bacon the decline was over 35 per cent., the figures, according to British returns, being £603,875 for the seven-month period of 1900, and £387,708 for that of the present year. The decline in hams was relatively greater, being nearly 49 per cent. The actual figures for the respective periods were £234,559 and £120,298.

It is somewhat satisfactory to know that the decline is not due to any unpopularity of our hog products in Great Britain, but simply to the inability of the packing-houses to obtain raw material enough in the shape of hogs to fill their requirements.

We know of one packer alone who, up to a few months ago, was short over 75,000 hogs compared with the same period a year ago.

A report published by the Dominion Trade and Commerce Department, but compiled from British returns, shows that while the imports of bacon and ham from Canada for the 12 months ending June were less in quantity than during the same period in either of the preceding years, they did not show nearly the same relative shrinkage as during the seven-month period to which reference has just been made. The figures giving the reports (in cwt. of 112 lb. and value in dollars) of bacon and hams into Great Britain from Canada during the last three years, ending June 30, were as follows:

|                | BRITISH IMPORTS OF CANADIAN BACON AND HAMS. |           |           |
|                | 1899.                                       | 1900.     | 1901.     |
| Bacon.....cwt. | 500,100                                     | 547,797   | 414,356   |
| ".....$       | 4,370,375                                   | 4,799,426 | 4,384,107 |
| Hams.....cwt.  | 142,473                                     | 166,065   | 155,110   |

As the cause of the decrease in our trade with Great Britain in bacon and hams will naturally soon be rectified, we may confidently expect, in view of the high reputation Canadian hog products possess there, to see the results more gratifying in the future than they have even been in the past.

The imports of bacon and hams into Great Britain from all countries during the six months ending June for three years will give our readers an idea of the possibility of an increased trade in that direction. The figures are:

TRADE IN COUNTRIES OTHER THAN OUR OWN.

CALIFORNIAN ORANGE CROP.

PRIVATE advices from the Coast, regarding oranges, state that the crop for the coming season is estimated at fully 25,000 carloads. "The fruit," says the advices, "is not so heavy on the trees, but with the increased acreage and favorable weather conditions we will probably ship more oranges from Southern California the coming season than last."

SITUATION IN FILBERTS.

Private mail advices from Messina, under date of August 21, report on filberts: "Spot stocks are nearly exhausted. There remain only a few hundred bags. As regards October filberts there are many sellers and only a few are considered reliable. Many short sales have been made. It is feared some of the sellers will not fulfil contracts, and it is necessary to act very cautiously in making sales for forward delivery. Just as soon as this state of affairs changes we will be in a position to make firm offers for round lots and at prices lower than those quoted to-day."

CANNED SALMON EASIER IN LONDON.

Salmon on the spot is easier, and the grocers, who have of late been simply buying from hand to mouth, are already taking advantage of the reduced prices, and a considerable quantity has changed hands. It must not be forgotten, however, that there are still six months trade to be done before the arrival of new salmon in any appreciable quantity, and considering that present stocks are, perhaps, the lowest on record, it would seem that the reduction in price, which has taken place during the last few weeks, is perhaps more than is really justified—for instance, the fall in flat salmon has, in some instances, been approaching 10s. per case, and in some descriptions of tall the fall is 6s. per case. It is also well to bear in mind that packers' ideas for the price of new are at present somewhat above the value of spot prices, and the mistaken policy frequently practised now-a-days of over-discounting the future markets, may be found in this instance to apply to salmon.—Produce Markets' Review, Aug. 24.

CURRANTS IN GREAT BRITAIN.

The market for currants continues active, and Gulph and Vostizza fruit are 1s. to 2s. dearer, due to a steady business and rapidly diminishing stocks. As a full fortnight must still elapse before the first arrival of new fruit, and in view of the genuine scarcity of merchantable parcels, this tendency is likely to become further accentuated during the next two weeks. Provincial is still in sufficient supply and unchanged in price. Shipments of new crop have been delayed by unfavorable weather in Greece, having hindered the drying, and the first steamer's departure may be expected to take place at the end of the present week, instead of several cargoes being despatched some weeks previously, as was originally expected. The earlier estimates of the crop are now generally considered to have been too liberal, and when the quantity retained by the Greek Government under the Parakratisis law (and fixed for this year at 12 per cent.) is deducted from the total, not very much more than 100,000 tons would seem likely to be available for export. If these calculations prove to be correct, prices at present quoted for new currants are likely to be fully realized, but, in the absence of authentic information, there is no inclination in the direction of speculative buying.—Produce Markets' Review, August 24.

CALIFORNIAN PRUNE CROP.

Telegraphic advices from the Coast state that, in consequence of the determination of the Cured Fruit Association to erect its own warehouse, at least one member of the executive board has resigned from the organization. It is understood from the advices that the new packing-house is to be erected in spite of the opposition element. Another telegram stated that at the present time the association controls only about 30 per cent. of the prune crop. These advices, together with the low offerings of prunes of the new crop already reported, have tended to weaken the interest in both old and new prunes among buyers here. Mail advices supplementing previous telegraphic information state: "In some quarters on the Coast there is an impression amounting to a conviction that the estimates given out regarding the coming prune crop for this State (California) are too low. Some hold that the production will be in excess of 100,000,000 lb. The official estimate by the association is not exceeding 60,000,000 lb. Add to this 40,000,000 lb. for the Northwest, there is a total of 100,000,000 lb., as against a crop of 185,000,000 lb. last year. The carry-over, it is figured, does not exceed 35,000,000 lb. The crop of prunes in France is figured at 40,000,000 lb., and the Turkish crop at 88,000,000 lb., making a total estimated production for this year all over the world of 228,000,000 lb., compared with a total (also estimated) of 341,000,000 lb. last year. No figures as to the carry-over from last year in foreign countries are available, but stocks in first hands in this country are estimated to be between 30,000,000 and 35,000,000 lb. Taking the inside figures this will make, supposing the estimates on the new crop are correct, a total of 258,000,000 lb. for the world, or 83,800,000 lb. less than last year. This, with the short apple crop and expected increased consumption of prunes on that account should take care of this year's production very easily provided prices are not too high. Discussing the situation to-day a prominent broker here said: "The trouble with figures on crops at the outset of the season is that they are apt to be very misleading. Last year early estimates figured a Californian crop of only about 120,000,000 pounds, when in reality the total was from 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 greater. No one knows what the carry over really is, and the crop is likely to be 10 or 15 per cent. greater than is figured on. The great trouble at present is the unsatisfactory conditions now existing on the Coast with regard to the Association. Suppose it continues this season, it hardly looks reasonable that a price lower than 3½c. basis on four sizes can be made without injury to purchases on the old stock on the 2¼c. basis. Yet if a 3½c. basis is made there is nothing to interfere with the outside selling at enough under to capture the business on the start off. The prospect is decidedly uncertain, and it looks now as though the trade here is disposed to wait for developments."—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

THE COLOMBO TEA MARKET.

Odell & Co., Colombo, Ceylon, in their tea circular of July 22, say: About 29,438 packages have been offered since our last, of which 24,625 passed the hammer at an average of 32c. per lb. The market remains firm with an upward tendency for all grades, especially common Pekoes and Pekoe Souchongs; there has also been some keen competition for good to fine broken, which have advanced in price. The quality shows an improvement and is likely to be good. The Chamber of Commerce quote shipments from January 1 to July 22, 1901:

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, Sept. 5, 1901.

GROCERIES.

THIS being the second week of the Industrial Exhibition, most of the local wholesale houses have their travellers in the warehouse to receive such of their customers who may be taking advantage of the low railway rates to visit the "Queen City." Quite a number of customers from outside points have visited the various warehouses during the week. Except those from distant outside points, few have placed large orders. The frequency with which travellers now call on retailers throughout the country leaves very little necessity for their buying when visiting the city during the Exhibition. The general volume of business is fair for this time of the year. The primary market has been a little easier on currants, but the cables indicate that a better tone is developing. Canned salmon is easier on the Coast on private and special brands, but no change has been made in the quotations on the standard brands.

CANNED GOODS.

Reports vary somewhat this week in regard to the condition of the canned salmon market on the Coast. The market is undoubtedly easier on account of the large pack on the Fraser River, but quotations on such standard brands as "Horseshoe," "Maple Leaf," "Clover Leaf," etc., are unchanged, and it is not expected there will be. Private brands and brands not so well known can, however, be obtained on the Coast at about 60c per case less than they could here at the opening of the season, and there have been transactions during the week at the lower prices.

The situation in canned vegetables is much about the same as it was a week ago. Very little business is being done. The pack of corn is likely to be a fairly-good one, the crop—thanks to the rain—having turned out much better than anticipated. Matters are, so far, progressing well in regard to canned tomatoes. The ruling price for corn is 75c. up from stock and 80 to 85c. for futures. Samples of new-pack corn have been shown during the past week, and the quality is pronounced to be excellent. Tomatoes are quoted at 80 to 85c. from stock and at 85 to 90c. for futures. The lowest quotation for peas is 80c.

Canned apples continue firm in view of the certainty of a light crop. The demand, however, is not brisk. Prices rule at $2.25 to $2.40 for gallons and 90c. to $1 for 3-lb. tins.

COFFEE.

There have been a few more transactions during the week on importation account, but importers are, as a rule, holding off in anticipation of lower prices. New York prices are, however, firm, and some lots which have been thrown on the market by bears have been quickly absorbed and prices have been maintained. The demand on retail account keeps fairly good with quotations as before. Green Rio, No. 7, 7¾c.; No. 6, 8¼c.; No. 5, 8¾c., and No. 4, 9½c.

See pages 37 and 38 for

John prices current.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Trade continues quiet in both syrups and molasses. Open kettle grades of New Orleans molasses are scarce and firm. Local quotations are unchanged.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

The usual steady trade is being done in both rice and tapioca. B rice is quoted at 3½c. per lb., Japan and Java at 5½ to 6c. Tapioca is 4¼ to 4½c.

SPICES.

The pickling season is now on, and a good trade is being done. Ginger is firm, with an upward tendency. Pimento has advanced on crop news.

SUGAR.

A little better demand has been experienced during the week, particularly on city account. Business is, however, still rather lighter than it should be at this time of the year. The outside raw sugar markets are dull and easier. Both beet and cane sugars are lower in Europe, and raws declined 3-16c. in New York last week. Holders in the latter city, however, prefer, as a rule, to store their sugars than to accept the figures now ruling, which are exceptionally low. In the United States, country dealers allowed their stocks to run down so low that a forced demand, according to Willett & Gray, sprang up last week, and it has been maintained. Prices locally are unchanged.

TEAS.

Local wholesalers report that a better demand has developed during the past week. It has been particularly noticeable in regard to Japan teas, induced, no doubt, by the better values that have been offered. There are Japan teas which last year sold as high as 22c., which can be obtained at 19c. this year. This, of course, permits the retailer obtaining a good tea to retail at 25c. Very little is being done in Indian and Ceylon teas this week. To what extent this may be due to the weaker markets cannot be said.

Mail advices from London, England, under date of August 23, say that at the auction, Indian tea, of good quality, sold well, while common and medium showed a decline of ¼ to ½d. per lb. In Ceylon teas prices were, on the whole, fairly steady, although some irregularity was occasionally noticeable.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS—Some weakness was experienced in currants early in the week, cables from Patras announcing a decline of 2s. per cwt. A cable, however, received in Toronto on Wednesday said: "Market for sound fruit is strong owing to rain." The prices ruling in Greece are still 2 to 3c. below the figures ruling here for old fruit. The local demand is being well maintained. Ruling local prices are 9c. for Filiatras, 10½c. for Patras, and 12½c. for Vostizzas.

VALENCIA RAISINS—The local market is much demoralized as to prices. Sales are being made in some instances at a loss of fully 3 to 3½c. per lb. Ruling quotations are 5 to 6c. for selected and 4 to 4½c. for fine off-stalk. A cable from Arguimbau, of Denia, says that very few orders are on the market, and that lower prices are expected.

SULTANA RAISINS—The crop of Sultana raisins, which was recently estimated at 32,000 tons, is now placed at 25,000 tons, owing to damage by hot, dry weather. Prices, however, have not, so far, advanced as a result of the reduced estimate.

PRUNES—Prunes are quiet and nominally unchanged in price. Californian prunes are quoted at the following: 30-40's, 8 to 8½c.; 40-50's, 7½ to 8c.; 50-60's, 7 to 7½c.; 60-70's, 6½ to 7c.; 70-80's, 6 to 6½c.; 80-90's, 5½ to 6c.; 90-100's, 5 to 5½c. French prunes, 3½ to 4c.

GREEN FRUITS.

There is no diminution in the activity on the fruit market. Peaches, pears, plums, apples, melons and tomatoes continue to arrive in large quantity. Grapes are becoming more plentiful. Bananas are offering more freely, but there is not the glut noted last week. Blueberries and lawtonberries are still coming in, but they are not as sound as former receipts. We quote as follows: Pears, 20 to 40c. per basket; peaches, 30 to 40c. for white and 60c. to $1 for red; plums, 25 to 40c.; apples, 25 to 40c.; blueberries, 75 to 90c.; tomatoes, 10 to 15c.; cucumbers, 10 to 15c.; gherkins, 35 to 45c.; peppers, 25 to 50c.; grapes, in 10 lb. baskets, 15 to 20c. for Champions and 25 to 30c. for Moore's Early and Moyer's; muskmelons, 25 to 35c. per crate of 12; watermelons, 15 to 25c. each; bananas, $1.75 for 1st and 75c. to $1 for eight-hands. New Verdilli lemons are offering at $3.75 to $4.25 per box, and late Valencia oranges are steady at $5 to $6.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS—The market is steadier, as the demand is somewhat improved. The receipts continue large. From 12 to 12½c. is the usual quotation.

BEANS—There is little doing in a local way, but, on account of the stiff feeling in the growing districts, the quotations reported last week, $2.25 to $2.40, are still given out by jobbers.

HONEY—The market is stronger, and prices are 1c. higher for extracted. We quote: 8½ to 9½c. for extracted clover and $1.35 to $1.50 for No. 1 clover comb.

DRIED APPLES—There is still practically nothing doing, and dealers refuse to acknowledge a basis for this season's production. Some exporters predict high prices, but there is no certainty of that as yet. Evaporated apples are stiff, but there is little doing. From 7½ to 8c. is a fair range, nominally.

POTATOES—The market is steady, and, though the quality coming to hand now is superior to previous shipments, there is no change in quotations. We quote 55 to 65c. per bush.

DRESSED POULTRY.—There is a fair trade at steady prices. We quote: Chickens, 45 to 50c. per pair; hens, 45 to 50c. per pair; ducks, 60 to 70c. per pair.

LIVE CHICKENS—The Canadian Produce Co., 36 and 38 Esplanade east, Toronto, will pay until September 19, for spring chickens, not less than two lb. each, 5½c. per lb. For ducklings, not less than four lb. each, 4c. per lb. For hens (including last year's birds) 4c. per lb. These prices are for live weight on arrival. Crates shipped free and express paid up to 50c. per 100 lb. of chickens.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER—The market, especially for dairy grades, is decidedly dull. There is a moderate demand for creamery for export, but dairy is not wanted and is accumulating. We quote as follows: Dairy prints, 17 to 18c.; best tubs, 16 to 16½c.; seconds, 11 to 13c.; creamery prints, 21 to 22c.; boxes, 20c.

CHEESE—Owing to the large holdings and the little indication of improvement in the export demand the market is certainly dull. Prices are unchanged, however, at 9½ to 10c.

FISH.

There is a liberal supply of all fresh fish, and prices are steady. We quote as follows: Fresh fish—Spanish mackerel, 12½c.; codfish, 6c.; whitefish, 7 to 7½c.; trout, 7½c.; halibut, 15c.; sea salmon, 20 to 25c.; haddock, 6c.; herring, 4c.; perch, 4c.; British Columbian salmon, 20c. Smoked fish—Ciscos, $1 per basket. Prepared fish—Dried cod, in 112-lb. bundles, $4.75 per cwt.; flitched cod, $5 to $5.25; boneless cod, in bricks, 5 to 5½c. per lb.; steak cod, 6½c. per lb.; shredded cod (2 doz. n box), $1.80 per box; boneless fish, loose, in 25-lb. boxes, 4 to 4½c., and 5-lb. boxes, 5c. per lb. Live lobsters are worth 15c. per lb.

VEGETABLES.

Sweet potatoes are now on the market. Lettuce is scarce. There is an excellent demand for practically all lines. We quote: Carrots and beets, 20c. per peck; turnips, 15 to 20c. per peck; lettuce, 20 to 30c. per doz.; radishes, 15 to 20c.; watercress, mint and parsley, 20c.; cauliflower, 75c. to $1.25; celery, 40 to 65c.; cabbage, 30 to 50c.; corn, 6 to 8c.; cucumbers, short, 10 to 15c.; tomatoes, 10 to 20c. per basket; butter beans, 20 to 25c. per basket; dry onions, $1.25 per bush.; new potatoes, 75 to 80c. per bushel; gherkins, 50c. per basket; egg plant, 30 to 35c. per basket; sweet potatoes, $4.25 per bbl.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES—There is a good demand. We quote: Cowhides, No. 1, 7½c.; No. 2, 6½c.; No. 3, 5½c. Steerhides are worth 1c. more. Cured hides are quoted at 8½ to 9c.

SKINS—The market is steady and unchanged. We quote: No. 1 veal, 8-lb. and up, 9c. per lb.; No. 2, 8c.; dekins, from 55 to 60c.; culls, 20 to 25c.; sheepskins, 90c. to $1; lambs and pelts, 40c.

WOOL—Prices are unchanged, and the market is fairly active. Our quotations are: Combing fleece, washed, 12 to 12½c., and unwashed, 7½ to 8c.

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN—The wheat market continues firm, as in fact are all grains. Manitoba No. 1 hard is quoted at 85½c. grinding in transit, or 83½c. Toronto and west. Ontario wheat is quoted at 70c. at outside points, middle freights. More activity is noted on the Toronto street markets, where prices are steady as follows: Wheat, white and red, 71½ to 73c.; goose, 67 to 69c.; oats, new, 36 to 37c.; rye, 52c.; barley, 49 to 51c.

FLOUR—The demand keeps brisk at steady prices. We quote on track, Toronto (bags included) as follows: Manitoba patents, $4.15; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.85; Ontario patents, $3.70 to $3.80; straight roller, $3.40.

BREAKFAST FOODS—There is a fair demand at unchanged prices. We quote: Standard oatmeal, $3.70 in bags, and $3.80 in bbls.; rolled oats, $3.60 in bags, and $3.70 in bbls.; rolled wheat, $2.35 in 100-lb. bbls.; cornmeal, $2.75; split peas, $4; pot barley, $4.

MARKET NOTES.

Honey is 1c. per lb. dearer.

Sweet potatoes are on the market—$4.25 per bbl.

Canned salmon is lower on the Coast on other than well-known standard brands.

The estimate on the crop of Sultana raisins has been reduced to 25,000 tons. The estimate was formerly 32,000 tons.

Early in the week currants declined 2s. per cwt. in Patras, but a later cable announces that the market is firm on good, sound fruit.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

MONTREAL, September 5, 1901.

GROCERIES.

As a general rule, good business is reported for the past week, and the fall demand seems to be opening up in a fair style. While sugar remains steady there are several notable changes this week. Among the chief is a decline in canners' prices of Fraser River sockeye salmon, due to the unexpectedly heavy pack which the market could not support. Currants are also cabled lower this week, the decline amounting to 3s. 6d. from the highest point. The situation in canned vegetables is becoming acute, and there are those who are sanguine that we shall see $1 vegetables before the turn of the year. This week most houses have advanced tomato quotations 2½c., and there is talk of the canners withdrawing quotations on tomatoes and corn for the time being till it is decided just how large the pack will be. One canning firm writing to a local house this week prophesies a 50 to 60 per cent. pack of last year's. Gallon and evaporated apples are very stiff, the factories declining to quote on the former and asking 9c. for the latter. Peaches are 25c. per doz. higher, although some houses have not changed in sympathy yet. Red pitted cherries are also higher, while strawberries are said to be cleared from first hands. Pork and bean prices have been raised by the canners, 2-lb. plain now being worth 80c., and with sauce 85c. Coarse salt has been raised 2c. per bag. Tapioca is dearer at primary markets, and pearl brown sago is ¼c. higher. Corn beef has declined 10c., while lard and pork are both higher.

TEAS.

Sales of teas from primary hands have been disappointing, so far as the local trade is concerned. There is still no animation to the market. Latest advices from Yokohama say that rates have ruled weak throughout the interval under review, and at the close it is possible to make a still further reduction in quotations for grades below finest.

In regard to Indian and Ceylon teas, the primary markets continue to show some improvement, and medium grades are bringing better prices.

SUGARS.

Since our report of last week, there has been little new to note in the sugar market. Prices in the foreign market for beet sugar have fluctuated between 8s. 3d. and 8s. 4½d. for August, and the latest cable to hand reports the feeling rather easier. European reports say that invisible supplies are undoubtedly much heavier than they were last year. Of course, the course of the market from now out depends upon the progress of the new crop, but, so far, this promises well. Should the outturn be equal to last year's, plus the acreage, there will certainly be low prices on raw sugar. The New York market has ruled fairly steady, with sellers of centrifugals, 96 test, at 4c. The condition of the local market has not materially changed. Refiners still complain that the amount of business is not up to the season, but now, as the market is more settled, buyers will not likely be so limited in their requirements. Prices are unchanged at $4.40 for granulated and $3.65 to $4.30, according to quality, for yellows.

MOLASSES.

Naturally, there is not much business being done in molasses, but, nevertheless, a firm tone is to be noted. Round lots are offered at not less than 28½c., while the wholesale price in small lots is still 29c. Antigua molasses is offered in round lots at 21 to 21½c.

CANNED GOODS.

During the past two weeks there has been a much better business done in canned goods, both on spot and in futures, due to the very strong tone that is pervading almost the entire canned goods market. The most marked advances are in gallon apples, which are not to be had for immediate delivery under $2.25, while factories will not quote for futures. English importers are offering $2.70 and the New York price is $2.50. Evaporated apples are quoted at 9c. f.o.b. factory. Canadian red pitted cherries are also higher, and a fair value now would be $2.30 to $2.35, although all the wholesale houses have not taken advantage of the rise as yet. It is said that the canners are about cleaned out of strawberries. Vegetables, too, are seriously affected. It is estimated now by competent authorities that the pack of peas was only 60 per cent. of that of last year, while the prospects indicate even a lighter pack of tomatoes and corn. We have seen confidential advices which talk of $1.00 vegetables before the turn of the new year. While this description of the situation may be extreme, there is no doubt that the outlook is for an exceptional market. Most dealers have advanced tomatoes 2½c. this week, quoting 85 to 90c. Corn is worth 75 to 80c. and peas 80 to 85c. We have already noted the important changes in the fruits. The idea as to prices is: Strawberries, $1.50; raspberries, $1.40; gooseberries, $1.40; pears, $1.55 for 2's and $2 for 3's; Lombard plums, $1.20; greengages, $1.30; yellow peaches, $1.90 for 2's and $2.65 for 3's; sliced pineapple, $2.30, and $2.45 for grated; 3-lb. apples, 90c.; red pitted cherries, $2.00, and whites,

$2.15. Corn beef has declined about 10 per cent., Clark's 1 lb. tins now being worth $1.45, and 2's, $2.70.

The result of the exceptionally heavy pack has been the offers of several Fraser River brands at $4 per case, a decline of 60c. on opening quotations. New Northern river red sockeye has come to hand this week and is selling at $4.80. Fraser River goods will be quoted hereafter at $5. It is said that several contracts made for Rivers Inlet salmon will be partly filled with Fraser River goods.

Pork and beans have been advanced by the canners and fair quotations from wholesalers now are 80c. for 2-lb., plain, and $1 for 3-lb.; 85c. for 2-lb., with sauce, and $1.10 for 3-lb. Some houses are selling below these figures yet.

SPICES.

There is quite a movement going on in spices at steady prices. We quote: Nutmegs, 35 to 65c. per lb., as to size; Penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 20c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole, Cochin, 14 to 16c.; Japan, 10c.; Jamaica, 20c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16c.; Jamaica, 25c.

RICE.

Advices from Singapore indicate a much firmer market for tapioca, and higher prices are warranted. Local dealers are selling at 3½ to 4½c. Sago has been advanced ¼c., pearl brown now being worth 3½ to 4½c. We quote in combine district: B rice, in bags, $3.10; in ½ bags, $3.15; in ¼ bags, $3.20; in pockets, $3.25. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $3 in bags; $3.05 in ½ bags; $3.10 in ¼ bags; and $3.15 in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4¾c. per lb.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRENTS—Advices from Greece indicate a weaker market for currants, the decline amounting to 3s. 6d. from the highest point. At this price dealers are buying with confidence, the orders placed being fully equal to those placed a year ago. On spot currants are worth 9 to 10c. for fine Filiatras. New crop for delivery the first half of October are quoted at 5¾ to 6¼c. for fine Filiatras, 6¼ to 6¾c. for Filiatras cleaned, in half-cases; cleaned in 1-lb. cartons are worth 8c.

VALENCIA RAISINS—Valencias are easy both on spot and at primary markets. Spot goods are offered at 3½c. for fine off-stalk, while Trenor's blue eagle fine off-stalk is cabled at 18s. 6d. f.o.b. Seeded raisins have been advanced from 8c. to 9½ to 10c. per box.

SULTANA RAISINS—The trade is beginning to make its purchase of Sultana raisins at slight reductions from last week; in fact, prices have declined about 4s. from the highest point touched. Prices on new goods will range about 12, 11 and 10 cents for 2 star, 3 star and 4 star.

MALAGA RAISINS—Quotations have been received, namely 7s. 3d. f.o.b., Montreal, per box of Connoisseur clusters, but shippers advise to wait for lower prices by first direct steamer.

FIGS—Comadre figs remain about steady. Comadre figs to arrive are worth 3¾ to 3½c. in tapnets, and Eleme figs in 10 lb. boxes $1.05 to $1.10.

DATES—Advancing; the quotation for Hallowe dates this week being 3¾ to 4½c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—The market is very strong. Spot goods are worth 8c., full, while packers are said to be asking 9c. at the factory.

NUTS.

Grenoble walnuts are steady and low and will sell at about 11c. Tarragon almonds remain at about last week's quotations and will probably be offered at 11c. Shelled almonds to arrive will be worth 26 to 27c. Filberts are a little firmer at an advance of some 6d. per cwt. on the week's transactions.

GREEN FRUITS.

Business is reported quiet, considering the quantity of fruit that is coming forward. Immense consignments of peaches, pears, plums and grapes have been received and are moving off only fairly well. We quote: Californian Valencias, $5 to $6 per box; Messina lemons, 300's, $3.25 to $4.50; 360's, $3.25 to $4.25 per box; Verdill lemons, $3.75 to $4.75 per box; pineapples, 20 to 30c.; Canadian apples, 20 to 30c. per basket; Californian plums, $1.50 to $2 per box; peaches, $1.75 to $2; limes, $1.50 per box; Ontario peaches, 30 to 50c. per basket; Ontario plums, 35 to 60c.; cocoanuts, $3.25 per bag of 100; Californian Bartlett pears, $3.25 to $3.50 per box; blackberries, 8 to 10c.; watermelons, 20 to 25c.; bananas, No. 1, $1.75 to $2.25, and eight hands, $1.35 to $1.50; Canadian pears (baskets), 30 to 50c.; Bartlett pears (bbls.), $3.50 to $4.50; Clapp's Favorite (bbls.), $3 to $3.75; Ontario muskmelons, 50 to 60c. per crate.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS—The market is firm both here and in the country, and prices have an upward tendency. Straight lots as they arrive are worth 11½ to 12c., while as high as 13c. has been paid for candled eggs. The export demand has improved, and sales are being made at 7s. 2d. and over for 15-market, and Eastern,  $9\frac{1}{4}$  to  $9\frac{3}{4}$ c. The outlook is not encouraging.

MONTREAL NOTES.

Tapiocas and sago are advancing.

Pork and beans has been advanced.

There has been a break in the price of Fraser River salmon.

Pure lard is  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. higher. It is now worth \$2.40 to \$2.45 a pail.

Canned peaches have been advanced quite materially by the canners.

Seeded raisins in pound packages have advanced from 8c. to  $9\frac{1}{2}$  to 10c.

Corn beef has declined from 5 to 10 per cent., both Canadian and American.

Canary seed has advanced, and is now worth 3 to  $3\frac{3}{4}$ c., a rise of  $\frac{1}{4}$ c per lb.

Coarse salt has been advanced 2c. per bag, the quotation now being  $47\frac{1}{2}$  to 50c.

A cable says the Spanish onion crop has been exhausted, and acting on this assumption, dealers have raised their prices 10c. to 90c. per crate.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE CANADIAN GROCER.

ST. JOHN, N.B., September 5, 1901.

THE week has been a fairly busy one. The matter of chief interest has been the introduction of the new sugar agreement. It starts out with every chance of success, having the support of almost the entire wholesale grocery trade of the Maritime Provinces. And from the point of self-interest those who are parties to the agreement are interested in seeing its terms strictly complied with. The consumer will notice little if any difference in prices. In markets little change is noted. Cream of tartar has ruled rather lower as regards first cost. Fish is rather easier. Butter is higher.

OIL—In burning oil prices are unchanged. The low prices are leading to large business. The buyer is very safe, as he will get the advantage of any further decline, while he has the chance of reaping the benefit of any advance. There has been no change in prices for some weeks. Lubricating oils are unchanged and business is light. Paint oils are also dull. In cod oil prices are quite firm, though lower than earlier in the season. Supplies are about all in.

SALT—Two part cargoes of coarse salt were landed during the past week. Prices of Liverpool coarse salt are rather higher. The demand has been very large. Further arrivals are shortly due. In Liverpool fine salt sales are light. Canadian fine salt moves freely. There is still a small demand for English and American table salt.

still a quantity of low-priced goods here. Fruits have been freely bought and are firmly held, particularly peaches and apples. Nova Scotian packers have advanced the latter. Pears, particularly 3's, are offered quite low, but the sale is limited. Blueberries will be scarce. Salmon have a fair sale. The only goods here are the spring fish. Oysters tend higher. Local-packed fish is firm. Sardines are the only large pack.

GREEN FRUITS—Californian pears, peaches and plums are about done. In pears, owing to high prices, sales have not been as large as usual. Georgia peaches, which are much liked, are also about out of the market. Canadian are shortly expected. In pears good stock is rather hard to get. Bananas have been more scarce than usual at this season. Californian oranges have a fair sale at full figures. Lemons are rather easier. Apples are lower, and quality of fruit is improving. The sale is for New Brunswick stock, though some American is still offered. A few melons are still sold. In grapes there is little doing.

DRIED FRUITS—Dealers who are fortunate to have evaporated apples on hand are making nice profits. New goods are expected to open high. Dried are firmly held. In raisins, the American market is higher on both loose and seeded old goods. Prunes are also firm. Small sizes are rather hard to get. In new goods, little has yet been done. Dealers are slow to buy Valencias. Prices quoted are quite reasonable. Currants are rather easier on new to arrive. Package dates at the low prices sell quite freely. In onions, American still supply the trade, but Canadian should soon be offered.

DAIRY PRODUCE—In butter, prices are higher, the supply being light, and much more so than west. In cheese also the output here is likely to be short, particularly late makes. It is said there is a large output west. The English market is hardly as firm. While eggs are rather firmer, there is little change in price.

SUGAR—Prices are rather higher, owing to the merchants not cutting prices to obtain business. This is due to the new agreement which went into force this week. Now the dealers all quote the same price, delivered at any one point. The agreement also prevents those who are parties to it from buying foreign sugars.

MOLASSES—A large cargo of Porto Rico landed this week. There is quite a large stock now held here. The low prices continue. There is a fair stock of Barbadoes held. Very little of any other grade is offered.

FISH—A few smoked herring, new, are to hand. Prices are unchanged, but they are hardly as firm. The supply will, it is thought, be larger than last year. Pickled herring are also more freely offered, and are of much better quality than last season. Prices are rather easier. In dry cod, there is the same feeling. It is yet early for much movement in these lines. Fresh fish, except cod and haddock, are scarce. The catch of shad has been disappointing. Pickled shad will be scarce. We quote as follows: Large and medium dry cod, $3.50 to $3.60; small, $2.50 to $2.60; haddies, 5 to 5½c.; smoked herring, 12 to 13c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.50 to $1.60 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2.00 to $2.15 per half bbl.; Canso herring, $5 per bbl., $2.75 halves; Shelburne, $4.50 per bbl.; $2.25 per half bbl.; shad, 10 to 12c.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL—In flour the markets are unchanged, though some millers hold Ontario flours very firm. In feed there is none offering. Oatmeal is still high. New will soon be offered. In Prince Edward Island new oats are offered. In beans the high prices continue. The outlook is for high figures. Blue peas are scarce. Split peas are high. Peas are "buggy" again this year. Barley shows little change. Cornmeal is rather higher. We quote as follows: Manitoba flour, $4.60 to $4.70; best Ontario, $3.90 to $4.00; medium, $3.60 to $3.70; oatmeal, $4.25 to $4.30; cornmeal, $3.00 to $3.10; middlings, $2.20 to $2.3; oats, 48 to 50c.; hand-picked beans, $2.50 to $2.55; prime, $2.40 to $2.45; yellow-eye beans, $2.80 to $3.00; split peas, $4.10 to $4.15; barley, $3.90 to $4; hay, $12 to $14.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

WINNIPEG, September 2, 1901.

THE week has brought few changes as to either price or situation. All prospects continue excellent. Eighty-five per cent. of the wheat harvest is cut and a very large proportion of that is in stack. Many threshing gangs are already at work, and next week threshing will be general. These conditions tend to improve trade and business in all lines is good, and, although money is still somewhat tight, the stringency of the past month is visibly relaxing.

CEREALS—This market presents no change for the week. The Ogilvie oatmeal mills are expected to open in about two weeks. Rolled oats, $2.25 to $2.30. Beans very firm at $2.75. Cornmeal, $1.75. Split peas nominal and in poor demand.

FLOUR—The only change for the week is a drop of 5s. on Ogilvie's Imperial XXX which is now quoted at $1.15. The demand is good.

EVAPORATED FRUITS—So far as apples are concerned the situation is intensifying. Firms here are paying 9c. for evaporated apples in Ontario, which means they will sell for at least 10c. here, and there is every prospect of their going still higher. Apricots and prunes continue at the quotation of last week with a reasonably firm market.

DRIED FRUITS—Although quotations of Denia fruit have been received there is little or no news, as it is generally believed that later quotations will be lower. The amounts purchased so far are very small.

CANNED GOODS—Apples have stiffened again since last week and are $2.75 for 3 lbs. and $3.25 for gallons. Peas, tomatoes and corn remain without change.

SUGAR—Sugar market is weak and uncertain at $5.15 for granulated and $4.40 for yellows.

CURED MEATS—Market is firm, and in fact the supply here is scarcely equal to the demand. There has been from ½ to 1c. per lb. advance on many lines. Smoked hams, 14 to 15c.; B. B. bacon, 15c.; breakfast bacon (backs), 15c.; shoulders, 10½c.; long clear bacon, 12c.; shoulders, 10c.; smoked, long clear, 13c.; lard, in 20-lb. pails, pure, $2.35.

GREEN FRUITS—The supplies are now very fair and prices have probably reached their lowest point. Peaches (freestone), $1.50. Plums, Washington, $1.60; Californian, $2. Pears, Washington, $3; Californian, $4. Ontario tomatoes, arriving in mixed cars with pears, 70c. per basket. Ontario pears, $1. Apples, per bbl., $6. Watermelons, lemons and oranges without change.

BUTTER—Creamery butter is firmer in tone, and with slightly more demand. The price continues 16 to 16¼c. at factory. Dairy butter coming in slowly, and quality rather better at 11½ to 12c. net Winnipeg, is the outside figure for round lots of choice yellow butter.

CHEESE—Little is coming in at the present. Prices are rather firmer, and the demand is better. 7¼ to 7½c. is quoted, and 8 cents has been paid for some small quantities.

EGGS—These are arriving in small consignments, and the quality is far from satisfactory. Good candled stock is worth 13c. Winnipeg. There is a decided tendency on the part of country merchants to hold eggs too long, and they frequently arrive in the city with a musty flavor owing to too long keeping in damp cellars.

NOTES.

Mr. E. B. Nixon, of The Hudson Bay Company, is on his usual fall trip, and is in Toronto this week.

The new clearing association projected in connection with the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, is now completely organized, and will commence work on Tuesday morning next.

The terrific hail storm which descended on Winnipeg last Wednesday afternoon surpassed in violence anything that the oldest inhabitant can remember, and all present inhabitants devoutly hope that they may never see another. Considering the duration and violence of the storm, the damage was very small. The area of the storm was simply the central portion of the city. Even the market gardens half a mile out were untouched.

Winnipeg has had what is for this city a unique exhibition this week. One of the large retail store windows has been filled with a magnificent display of apples and crab apples, all grown in Manitoba, and and some very fine samples of native grown plums. The people who have said apples could never be grown in Manitoba are now lying low and keeping dark. Some of the apples are 3½ to 4 inches in diameter, and all are of excellent quality. Mr. A. P. Stevenson, of Nelson, has more than 30 bushels of one winter variety.

POINTS ON ADVERTISING.

One of the most interesting contentions in this business-like book, "The Individual Advertising Department," is, that advertising sense is as common as horse sense—that the business man is the best advertising manager for his own business, and that copy, pictures, etc., can be bought as easily and as satisfactorily as one sends an order to a shirtmaker who has one's measure in his books. The ways and means of conducting an advertising campaign will be read with interest by the man who has money to invest in advertising, and with equal interest by the man who has not.

A MONTREAL MAN IN SWITZERLAND.

WHEN Queen Elizabeth, if I am not mistaken, lost Calais, the last town on French territory in possession of the English, it is said that she was so overcome by grief and mortification that she exclaimed: "When I die, you will find the word 'Calais' engraved on my heart."

Now, if I should be overcome by fatigue before returning to Canada, the word "Cook" will be somewhere on my anatomy, or, more probably, as we live in a practical age, on my boots.

Cook's motto is to show you as much as possible for your money. Take one drive in Geneva, for example. The interpreter, Mr. Louis Van O.S. (OS), a splendid fellow, courteous to a degree, very attentive and ready at all times to answer the innumerable questions we would put to him, turned us over to the local Cook guide, who was a cross between a platform lecturer and a go-as-you please mountaineer.

Monsieur Leatherlungs could speak English, French and German fluently, and he would jump from one to the other without pausing for breath.

With 20 passengers on a coach drawn by six beautiful horses we started amidst the blowing on the horn, the cracking of the whip and numerous exclamations of "Au revoir" and "Bon voyage" from the hotel staff at the Metropole. We might have been going on a tour to the North Pole in Santos Dumont's air ship, there was such a hearty sendoff. In addition to the usual crowd of onlookers, we had farewell bows from the proprietor, the maitre d'hotel or manager, the head waiter, two garçons, or underwaiters, the pretty Suisse young lady in the desk—[Aside: How can one dispute his bill with such sweet creatures to deal with?—and the concierge, or head porter, in gorgeous array and imposing livery. Well, we started. Viewed the magnificent electrical establishment worked by water power from the magnificent Lake Geneva—a divine sheet of water—which has been sung, preached, written and raved about in all languages. And a glorious lake it is, too. Passed houses made historic by Calvin. Saw the hall where the Alabama Commission met. Gazed at the petite chalet, which, at the moment, is the home of Dreyfus, who is living in quiet retirement with his wife and family. Drove up a steep hill to get a view of Mont Blanc and the country generally. There at our feet was the mirror-like Lake Geneva. Steamers were passing to and fro. Italian feluccas, with their extraordinary, but picturesque, sails, were dreamily sailing along. The shores are beautifully wooded, and chateau and chalet are pointed out, from the sweet, romantic chateau nestling amid delicious terraced vineyards to the more imposing castle of the Baroness Rothschild. With the glass may be seen the Castle of Chillon, made famous by Byron and immortalized in his "Prisoner of Chillon."

We clamber up to our seat and drive on. The roads are good. Not a loose stone or piece of rough macadam to be seen anywhere, and the peeps of richness which greet one at almost every turn are inexpressibly delightful.

Now we come to a mansion in the suburbs of Geneva, which was bequeathed to the city by the generosity of the late owner, and we pass from room to room filled with rare collections from all parts of the world. Pictures innumerable, bric-a-brac rich and driver had a loaf, half a Swiss cheese and a bottle of Munich beer, and I must draw a veil upon what the interpreter and the writer, now boon companions du voyage, consumed. The horses were not overlooked. The Swiss waitresses, so fetching in their crisp, "not-to-be-touched," immaculate dresses, were remembered. We raised our hats to M'sieu Boniface and Madame Embonpoint, and rattled off back to the Hotel Metropole, where a good 8 o'clock dinner awaited the party. Here one of the first to greet us was Mr. Gibbons (of Gibbons & Harper, London, Ont.), the well-known K.C.

"Good hevings," he cried, "is that you Evans?"

I thought for a moment, I must be in the Tecumseh House, London!

Ben Jonson or Dean Swift, in their palmy days, never sat down to a meal where there rare. Articles de vertu from every quarter of the globe. We wound up this visit with sore feet, tired eyes and craned necks. Says one lady from Boston, "I declare I be more played out than when I climbed the Mauvais Pas and visited the Mal de Mer on mule back at Chamounix." She meant the Mer de Glace (sea of ice) but none of us smiled—too tired.

"En avant. Sil vous plait," cried our guard of many tongues. "Excelsior," I replied, and we mounted the comfortable coach and sped away to the grounds of the Baroness de Rothschild, who kindly allowed us full access and, for one hour, we walked, talked and drank in the beauty of the enchanting situation.

Next we make a halt just in time to save our lives at the Trois Caouronnes (Three Crowns), and never did refreshments taste sweeter. The ladies had five-o'clock tea, the gentlemen took—ahem! cold tea. The was more hilarity. And when a Cornishman said, "I always decline hors d'oeuvres (appetizers), because I do not care for steak from a worn out pony," a roar went around the table.

The Markets—A Scheme to Develop Cassava—Miscellaneous Notes.

A SCHEME TO DEVELOP CASSAVA.

PLANS are on foot for the organization of a big stock company of Chicago and Northwestern capitalists to develop the vast cassava-producing areas of Northern and Northwestern Florida.

Among the men most interested in the scheme are stock-raisers, to whom it has been represented that cassava is superior in every way to corn as a food for live stock. The Southern promoters believe that after the value of cassava has been fully appreciated the South will become the foremost stock-raising section of the country.

The Southern promoters are making their representations on the strength of records and experiments. Cassava grows under all conditions, and this fact, in view of the uncertainty of corn crops in the West, carries considerable weight to stock-raisers, who are now in a quandary as to how they will fatten their stock on Western ranches profitably.

MANY ACRES AVAILABLE.

Within the next few days the big men at the Union Stock Yards at Chicago, says The New York Commercial, will meet the promoters, who will dwell in detail upon the things they have to offer. There are about 500,000 acres of available land in Florida, a large percentage of which is in the control of the United States Government, which stands ready to grant homestead rights to settlers.

It is claimed that cassava contains more starch than any other product, not excepting either the Irish potato or corn. The promoters express a belief that it is only a matter of time until practically all of the starch used in this country will be produced from cassava grown in the South. They urge the Northern men to keep the root as a starch-producing product foremost in mind, holding that starch can be manufactured from it much more profitably than from corn or potatoes.

TWENTY TONS PER ACRE.

With proper attention, it is claimed, an acre of Florida land will turn out twenty tons of cassava as a crop. As a raw material for the manufacture of starch twenty tons of cassava produces 8,000 pounds of commercial starch, as against half that amount from an average acre-crop of corn. Besides cassava is a palatable and nutritious human food, capable of being utilized in numerous ways, and furnishing a desirable substitute for many imported articles.

In feeding pigs, it is said, meat may be produced from the root at a cost of 1 cent a pound. The average cost, under identical conditions, with other foodstuffs is a trifle more than 3 cents a pound. The cost of live beef weight produced by feeding cassava is 1.1 cents a pound.

RETAILERS FORCED TO A CASH BASIS.

Not long ago all the wholesale meat and provision houses in Springfield, Mass., issued an order that all bills against their customers must be paid cash every Monday morning, and not one cent discount from the face of the bill. Things are moving the same way in Pittsfield, Mass., where but one wholesaler now stands out, and will probably soon fall into line, and when that is accomplished the Westfield headquarters of the Swift Beef Company are expected to adopt the same weekly payment rule. This new phase of business has set the retailers thinking, and several of them will at once make a rule for their trade that all bills must be paid in cash as often as once a week or no more goods will be delivered. They are forced to this by the action of the wholesalers.

OUR EXPORT OF HAMS AND BACON.

The opinion has been freely expressed of late that the past year has been a comparatively small one in the export ham and bacon trade of Canada. The cause of the opinion, if traced to its source, would probably be found to be the frequently uttered statement by some of the larger packers to the effect that their pack had not nearly approached that of the last two years.

The Canadian Government returns for the year ending June 30, 1901, are, however, not as discouraging as this opinion would have led one to expect. The export of hams and bacon from Canada for the year were $11,793,214, as against $12,471,848 in 1899-1900; $9,953,952 in 1898-1899, and $7,294,750 in 1897-1898. It will thus be seen that while the past year has not been quite as good as in the previous ones, it has been considerably greater than in any year before that.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

A fair, steady business is being done. "You know," said a very large dealer this week, "that this is generally the time when prices weaken a good deal. Well, there has been a reduction of  $\frac{1}{2}$ c. in mutton and  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. in hogs, but there is every indication that there will be no further reductions for some time, though prices are at a high basis now. We quote: Dressed hogs, \$9.25 to \$9.50 per cwt.; mutton, \$5.50 to \$6.50 per cwt.; lambs, 8 to 9c. per lb.; beef carcasses, \$7.50 per cwt. for best and \$6 to \$7 for mediums; hind quarters, 8 to 9c. for best; fore quarters,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  to  $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. for best; calves, \$8 for best and \$6 to \$7 for mediums.

Pork products continue very firm. Lard is  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. higher. The indications of a few weeks ago that there would be a scarcity are being fulfilled. Stocks of many lines are becoming very small, but a good demand is still reported. We quote: Long clear bacon,  $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. Smoked meats—Breakfast bacon, 15c.; rolls, 12c.; small hams, 14c.; medium hams, 14c.; large hams, 13c.; shoulder hams,  $11\frac{1}{2}$ c.; backs, 15c. Barrel pork—Canadian heavy mess, \$20; Canadian short cut, \$21. Lard—Tierces,  $11\frac{1}{4}$ c.; tubs,  $11\frac{1}{2}$ c.; pails,  $11\frac{1}{4}$ c.

MONTREAL.

The situation in Montreal remains as strong as ever. Pure lard has been advanced about  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb., and pails are now worth \$2.40 to \$2.45. Mess pork is also higher, although in moderate request. Smoked meats are in fair demand. We quote: Heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, \$22.00; Chicago clear pork, \$24.00 for heavy and \$23.50 for medium; selected heavy short cut mess pork, boneless, \$22.00 to \$23.00; hams, 13c.; bacon, 15c.; lard, pure Canadian, \$2.40 to \$2.45;

ST. JOHN, N. B.

Prices in both beef and pork are high and firm and higher values are expected. Pork is particularly high. Dealers are, however, buying, as these goods are needed to go to the woods. Lard is still high, but there is a fair sale.

THE RESULT OF RETURNING GOODS,

THE constant returning of goods is a source of great annoyance and extra expense, requiring extra clerical service and more work in many departments, writes W. A. Given in Business Topics. It is also in many cases a source of positive loss, by reason of goods coming back in a damaged condition, or so long after purchase as to be unseasonable—and the wholesaler divides his feelings (?) between the fear of loss on the goods so returned and, on the other hand, the fear of losing a customer if he refuses to make the credit.

The retailer who is guilty of this practice, evidently does not realize that he is gaining an unenviable reputation in the business world, and that it affects his credit standing in a very great degree.

However, the wholesaler is very largely responsible in furnishing the excuse for the return of goods. Orders are frequently made out in a careless manner by the salesman, leading to mistakes in filling. Still more frequently are substitutions made in the hope that the customer will keep the goods when they are at his store, of course knowingly taking the risk of their very just return.

We must not overlook the fact that misunderstandings often occur in filling orders, and for all these reasons the customer is certainly justified in making returns.

By such faults of the wholesale house the customer falls easily into the habit of returning goods, and is then not always too particular about having good and sufficient cause for his action.

This is a case where reform must begin at home. Let the salesman use more care in taking the order and the house in seeing that it is correctly filled, and the annoyance of having goods returned will be much reduced.

The aggravated cases will then come more forcibly to the attention of credit men, who will find little trouble in appraising such actions at their true value.

SOME MERCHANTS' EXPERIENCE.

Solomon said in his haste: "ALL MEN ARE LIARS!" He didn't mean it. He was simply so mad with one man that he included all the rest.

Let us not fall into Solomon's mistake. We should take out of our experience the wisdom there is in it and stop right there!

Otherwise we are as stupid as the cat who sat down on a hot stove lid. She will never sit down on a hot stove lid again, and that shows good judgment. But she will never sit down on a cold one, either.

Now, some merchants have had hard experiences lately with coupon books that were represented to be absolutely correct in count and made up just as good as any other, but they were not, and you won't know what a perfect coupon book is until you have tried either Allison's Coupon Books or Allison's Coupon Pass Books. Both are good; one book suits some, while the other fills the bill with the rest of the merchants.

We are doing a lot of special engraved work now for merchants who use books in large quantities. Our books are carried in stock by jobbers. We will be glad to send you a free sample.

Allison's name on a Coupon Book is itself a guarantee of perfection.

ADVICE FOR SALESMEN,

F. A. SOUTHWICK.

TACT is a talent that should be continually cultivated, as it is the tactful man that is successful. A recent writer has said that it is superior to genius. You can hardly name a phase of political, commercial or social life where the man of tact is not ahead. Ability and brains have been relegated to the rear or kept in subordinate positions while the man with the hypnotic art forged ahead. Don't misunderstand me, without brains and ability no success is permanent, but with those for the charge and tact for the match, bullseyes are a sure thing. A recent number of The Industrial Journal contains a good essay on tact—read it.

If the salesman secures orders simply by the argument of lowest prices, then it matters little, and he need read no further in this article. But if his house is handling or making a good line, it should be his strongest argument that there is no competition on price. If his wares are equal to those of other makers they are of equal value, and in these days of combinations and gentlemen's agreements it becomes all the more important that the question of price be left out of any agreement. It is often observed that manufacturers attain to the highest rank by freely advertising a high price and a corresponding high quality. A failure on the part of their salesmen to secure the higher price was looked upon as a confession of failure and they were "allowed to resign."

Don't disparage competitors. It will take all your skill and ability to properly present your own line. Decrying the other fellow only advertises him, and wherever the salesmen of other people are found jumping on a company the latter should immediately cut down its advertising appropriation. You should be familiar with the points wherein your house considers its goods better than those of other makers, and if forced to compare, should honestly point out the advantages claimed. Even then avoid criticism or any inference of ignorance. Seek rather to bring your customer to look at the matter from your point of view. Make no statements of which you are not absolutely sure and which you do not yourself believe. Truth is ever convincing; the slightest untruth throws doubt upon the whole case. Many times has justice miscarried because some witness, in his enthusiasm, has drawn upon his imagination for his facts.

Do not ever attempt to discuss a subject on which you are ignorant with the assurance of knowledge. Cultivate a knowledge of uses of goods you handle and ascertain the technical meaning of the peculiar language of the craft. Absence of such knowledge will inevitably lead to some incorrect use of a technical word and thus immediately convey the impression that you are not master of your business. Then confidence is gone, and failure is sure to meet you. The correct and easy use of the terms of trade relating to the goods you handle will contribute largely to convey the idea that you know your business and your advice can be safely followed.

SHIPMENT OF NEW TOMATOES.

The first shipment of 1901 tomatoes was shipped by W. Boulter & Sons, of Picton. The firm shipped one carload new tomatoes on Tuesday, 20th ult., to Dillon Bros., of Halifax, and one carload new tomatoes on Thursday, 22nd ult., to The A. McDonald Co., of Winnipeg. These two shipments of 1901 tomatoes are the first that have been reported to the syndicate.

A GROCERY STORE IMPROVED.

Leslie McNutt & Co., Charlottetown, P.E.I., have just completed improvements which add much to the size and attractiveness of their store. By the removal of a partition they have annexed the adjoining premises, which are 30 x 12 ft. The counter, which was formerly on the left side of the main store on entering, has been removed and attached to that on the other side, forming a continuous counter about 35 ft. in length. The securing of more store room has admitted of a rearrangement of the goods, which are now placed so as to present a good display to the customer, and, at the same time, are within easy reach of the clerks.

OFFER TO SALMON FISHERMEN.

Mr. Wurzburg, who recently made an attempt to amalgamate the canneries of British Columbia, has submitted a proposition to the five fishermen's unions of British Columbia, offering to deposit $50,000 in the bank as a guarantee, which he will forfeit if he does not pay them for their fish a scale of prices, according to the pack, not less than 12½c., and not more than 25c.

The Vancouver unions have accepted the proposition, and, it is thought, the other unions will do the same. Mr. Wurzburg is now preparing an offer for all the canners on the Fraser to buy them out for so much stock and cash, and combine them under one management. Canners interviewed on the subject say they are surprised that the fishermen took the offer seriously.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch.

Your idea may be that all starch is starch and that your customers won't detect even a slight difference in quality. You may think that because there is a cent or two extra profit on "Mushroom" brands (that come and go), you can retain the confidence of your trade—it doesn't pay to trifle with the confidence that a customer has in you and your goods.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch is as staple as flour. In the name there is the fame of nearly half a century. In the making there is the skill of long experience combined with honesty of purpose and unequalled manufacturing facilities. Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch represents the highest type of perfection there is or can be in starch. # “One Object and One Aim.”

You remember the old saying, “It is better not to have too many irons in the fire at once.” One thing well done is far better than a dozen carried but half way to perfection.

Captain Austin, manager of the Thistle Haddies Company's Factory at Digby, Nova Scotia, has followed in the footsteps of his father before him, and is acknowledged absolutely unsurpassed as a fish curer. His “one object and one aim” has always been to put up the very best fish in the very cleanest way—to cleanse them properly, to cure them properly, and to pack them perfectly.

Captain Austin has had but one iron in the fire at once—he has devoted a lifetime to doing just one thing and to doing that well. The result is that the famous

“Thistle” Brand

Canned Haddies
Kippered Herrings

represent without exception the top notch of excellence in their various lines. The Thistle Haddies Company's Factory is the most perfectly equipped and the cleanest one of the kind on the Atlantic Coast. Its cleanliness is almost proverbial. The cast iron rules regarding the quality of the fish themselves bar out everything that falls below the standard that has made the name of “The Thistle Brand” famous everywhere.

The rich, natural, delicate flavor of the freshly caught fish is retained in its fullness in the “Thistle” Brand. It is the brand that connoisseurs buy exclusively. It is the “Thistle” Brand that “wins out” every time, because Manager Captain Austin has now and always has had but “one object and one aim” in life.

Buying, Handling and Selling Coffees.

ONE OF THE PRIZE ESSAYS.

By W. C. FORMAN (Coficus), Ingersoll, Ont.

FROM far-away Arabia, from some parts of teeming India, from the sunny shores of Africa in the distant East, from the lovely isles of Ceylon and Java in the still farther east and south, from Brazil and other countries in the great southern hemisphere of the western world, and from the beautiful isles of the West Indies, come to us the wondrous seeds or beans from which, after careful selection, roasting and grinding is brewed that nectar of the gods—coffee.

The records would seem to show that it is likely to Abyssinia or to Arabia that we are indebted for the introduction of coffee as a beverage. The knowledge of, and taste for, coffee spread but slowly, indeed. In time, however, it was introduced to the inhabitants of Constantinople, and coffee houses were established there. Later still, the people of France were favored with the knowledge of its captivating properties, and soon thereafter the olfactory nerves of the English were delighted with its aroma, and their palates tickled with its fine taste. Not long after coffee was used as a beverage throughout Europe, and from the Old World it ultimately found its way to the New.

The coffee plant or tree is in its natural condition an evergreen, growing to a height of 15 to possibly 18 feet, but in order that its seeds may be more easily gathered, under cultivation it is pruned and kept down to a height of from five to six feet, and its branches thereby encouraged to grow laterally. Its flowers are produced in clusters growing at the axils of the leaves and are followed by the fruit, which is a fleshy berry having an appearance like unto a small cherry, and when ripe is of a dark red color. Each fruit contains two seeds of a plano-convex form, of a bluish green color and of a hard, tough texture. These seeds, after being gathered and properly cared for, constitute the raw coffee, or green coffee as it is called, of commerce. A tree will bear from one pound to two pounds of these seeds in a year.

The berries, when mature, are gathered and conveyed to a suitable storehouse where they are pulped, thus freeing the seeds from their outside covering. They are then spread to dry, husked, winnowed, sized and hand-picked to free them from defective seeds. The coffee thus cared for is baled and is then ready for shipment.

THE SHAPE, SIZE AND COLOR OF SEEDS

all help to determine the commercial value of the coffee. Shape depends somewhat on which part of the plant the seeds are grown; size is often governed by the locality from which they come, and color depends on the degree of maturity when gathered—all of which points require consideration in wise buying of coffee.

Tough and hard as the raw seeds are, proper roasting changes them from green toughness to golden brown crispness. They contain a rich aromatic oil and a quantity of caffeine, which the process of roasting and grinding helps to free. The roasting of coffee is, therefore, a process requiring expert knowledge and entails exceeding nicety on the part of the roaster in order to produce uniformity of roast, and to stop the process at the exact time in order to conserve the greatest amount of the essential qualities at their very highest condition.

From the foregoing it will be seen how much study, knowledge and care the successful buyer of coffee requires to possess and exert, as to the country of growth, shape, size and color of the coffee, the different flavors and strength, the wise blending in proper proportion, the best appliances for roasting and their skillful use in order to bring out the very best the coffee contains.

My idea would be that the seller of coffee would require to do a large business to make it worth his while studying and knowing how to get the best material, how to best blend the different strengths and flavors and best bring out their qualities through roasting. If his business is not large enough for this he must depend on this being done for him, by someone who does know.

The large majority of the retail trade will find they must depend on others for the selection and roasting of the coffee they sell. To those I would say, select several coffee roasters of well-known reputation, who have a character to sustain, and secure from them samples of their well-known or registered brands of coffee (asking that they be freshly roasted and unground), with their prices. Arrange these samples according to their different prices for comparison; take those of the same, or nearly the same price by themselves in competition, grind them separately and brew them at the same time that you may be able to decide on the blend which will best suit your trade. The object to be gained in selecting a registered or well-known brand is to be better assured that will be fully kept up—a most important factor in conducting a successful trade in coffee.

Having decided on the blend of coffee you intend to sell, state to the roaster the quantity you expect to require for your trade and secure the very closest price and best terms and then buy in quantities so that you may have fresh roasted coffee as often as you conveniently can. Arrange with your roaster that your coffee shall be freshly roasted before shipment, and when ready, packed in tins which help to exclude contact with the air.

Having outlined the means to be adopted in the wise buying of coffee, the next important question is, how best to handle the coffee after it is bought. This, also, requires thought, care, and attention in order that all the advantages of wise buying may be conserved and accrue in delightful coffee to the consumer and profit to the retailer. First, select and decide on a proper place to keep your roasted coffee. Any place will not do. Let it be a place that is perfectly dry and free from all taint. On receipt of your coffee see if it is not in tins, that it is placed in them. Have your reserve stock at once removed to its proper place, leaving a tin or two in a prominent place in your store.

SELECT A BLEND NAME OF YOUR OWN.

such as "Nectar," "Aroma," "Perfect," or any suggestive name whereby your coffee shall be known and distinguished from all others. Keep this name prominently before the public so that when the good qualities of your coffee become known, they shall be known under your name and consumers desiring this coffee will have to come to you for it, and competitors desiring to secure it will not know where to look for it, and all the advantage there is in the coffee will be yours.

Having selected a name, erase any name or the name of any firm of roasters which may be printed or painted on the tins in which your forward stock of coffee is kept or displayed, and display in good, bold letters, in their place, your blend name. Have your coffee mill in a conspicuous place in your store, and from time to time through the day, if not grinding coffee for your customers, grind a small quantity so that the delicious aroma might fill the store and tempt lovers of good coffee to try your blend.

Have special bags made for holding your coffee when you are selling it. On the bags have printed in conspicuous letters the blend name of your coffee and call attention to its many excellent qualities, thus keeping the name prominently before the people until in your town and section it becomes a household word.

The wisest and most careful buying and the correct and proper handling of coffee are a success only in as far as they prepare the way and help in the selling of it, they being but means employed with that end in view, and we shall therefore now consider how we may best complete the good work begun and sell the coffee.

PUBLICITY A SELLING FACTOR.

A most important factor in the selling of any article to-day is publicity or advertising and the question is, having secured the best quality of coffee at the lowest possible price, having cared for in the very best way, and having supplied the best means whereby it shall reach the consumer's coffee pot at the very height of its perfection, how shall we let the people know?

I would make use of that quickest and best of all means to reach the public, namely, the press, and would advertise my coffee under my own blend name, calling attention to its excellent qualities and its price, laying particular emphasis on the quality, but not forgetting the price. This I would do continually and persistently through the daily and weekly papers in order to reach all classes of the people. I would have printed and distributed from house to house, time after time, neat dodgers telling the same story of my good coffee, thereby trying to reach those who do not take the papers and to still further impress those who have already been touched by my advertisements in the papers. I would keep a number of these dodgers continually in my store distributed at different points so as to be within easy reach, and instruct my salespeople to place one of them with every parcel or lot of parcels going out from my store, so that the continual dropping might wear away the stone of indifference or opposition and help to place my coffee in all the coffee-pots of the town and district.

I would, as the opportunity offered, introduce, and have introduced by my salespeople, the merits of my coffee to customers coming to my store for other goods. If the introduction failed to make a sale I would ask permission to requesting the customer to give it a trial and report the result, believing that far more can be accomplished in paving the way for future sales through this means than by indiscriminate sampling at the houses.

From time to time I would demonstrate to the people the quality of my coffee by having it properly made and daintily served at my place of business during special days, which I would have announced beforehand through the press and by dodgers distributed from house to house, extending a hearty invitation to all lovers of a cup of good coffee to call and enjoy the treat.

People who had not read my advertisements in the papers, who had been missed by the dodgers distributed at the houses, and who did not come to my store for other goods, giving me an opportunity to talk coffee to them, I would try and reach through my show windows by making from time to time showing possibly the green coffee, roasted coffee and ground coffee, or maybe sometimes coffee and the coffee mill, or, again, a coffee set spread for breakfast, or an afternoon coffee. In all cases I would use a neat, attractive card, or cards, calling attention to my special blend name and some of the excellent qualities of my coffee.

And so by making use of every means, taking advantage of every opportunity and keeping continually at it I would advertise, talk, introduce, sample, demonstrate and display my coffee until all the people knew of its existence and its good qualities, and those who appreciated a good thing were using it and I was successfully selling coffee.

WILL USE CUBAN SUGAR.

Press advices received from New Orleans, La., said: "It was made known recently that The Gramercy Sugar Co., owning the Gramercy refinery, just above New Orleans, and which is composed almost entirely of New York capitalists, had decided not to refine the Louisiana sugar crop in future, but to bring all the raw sugar used in the refinery from Cuba. To that end, it has just purchased for $3,000,000 the Constantia plantation of 65,000 acres, near Cienfuegos. The plantation produced 50,000,000 lb. of sugar just before the troubles in Cuba. The Gramercy company hopes to increase the production, and the raw sugar will be brought to the Louisiana refinery and refined here."

SO FAR notwithstanding the enormous SUGAR demand we have been able to promptly execute our orders.

We are still in a position to make shipments of all orders same day as received.

CANADA AT GLASGOW.

THE Scottish Trader, Glasgow, in its issue of August 24 gives a good deal of space to Canada and her exhibits at the Glasgow Exhibition. From the article, on the front page of which is a cut of Mr. W. D. Scott, the Canadian Commissioner, the following is an extract:

"Food in Canada is abundant and to spare. There is no struggle for it as here in the old country, and consequently Canada does already a very large trade in exporting food. At the exhibition held thirteen years ago Canada occupied one of the courts, and since that time illustrations have not been wanting, especially at all agricultural gatherings, to prove that the resources of that great colony are almost unlimitable. The Canadian Government have spared no expense. They were admirably supported, and their scheme has been well carried out by their commissioner, Mr. W. D. Scott, who has had the loyal support of a large number of representative men. There is no doubt, even after a cursory glance at the fruits of the field displayed, that farming, in the widest sense of the word, is the great industry of Canada. Everything is in favour of the production of food. Those two essentials—especially the soil and the climate—are of the very best, while products of exceptionally fine quality are raised in farm, garden, orchard and vineyard, with comparatively little trouble. Then the seas, lakes and rivers swarm with fish. To the credit of the Canadian farmer, be it said, he has thoroughly appreciated his many privileges, and has been quick to adopt every new method and every approved implement or hint that science has suggested. He has taken advantage of the improvement in the transport service, while the tinning of goods and cold storage has given him a practically unlimited market for the disposal of his goods. Further, large areas are well adapted for dairying, and travelling schools are in existence in order that practical instruction may be given in butter-making and the handling of milk."

CATALOGUES, BOOKLETS, ETC.

The Toronto Globe has issued a folder on "How to See Toronto in a Day." The front page shows a section of the city hall and its tall tower, and throughout the folder is prettily illustrated with views of places of interest. A map of the city, a street index and a street railway time table are features which greatly increase its usefulness. Merchants visiting the "Queen City" will find the folder helpful, and they should try and secure a copy.

A WINDOW-DRESSING BOOKLET.

A striking feature of the development of the art of window dressing is the attention now being paid to it by manufacturers. It has been recognized by many dealers that one of the most forceful methods of winning attention to their goods is by displaying them prominently and attractively. In order to interest their customers in displaying their soap, Lever Bros., Limited, have issued a booklet containing a score of cuts engraved from photographs of first-class display-windows. The matter of window dressing is also gone into comprehensively evidently being written by a window-trimmer of experience. The work is, from cover to cover, thoroughly high class, and should be of material assistance to grocers who desire to make attractive displays of such staple articles as soaps.

The grocery store of Mrs. Foster, St. John, N.B., was broken into at an early hour Sunday morning and $1.90 taken from the till. The party who did the act smashed in a large pane of glass and thus effected an entrance. Some articles were also removed.

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, which was held on Monday evening in St. George's Hall, was well attended, and proved to be a lively, interesting meeting. President Panter occupied the chair.

Mr. F. Lyons, Queen street, was admitted to membership.

Secretary McKinnon reported that at the meeting of the city council on Monday next the early-closing and trading-stamp by-laws would come up for their second reading.

J. S. Bond suggested that as this is the critical time for these by-laws it would be advisable to secure some one member of the council to champion them. It was moved by F. W. Johnson, seconded by T. Holmes, that W. J. Sykes ask Ald. Urquhart to look after the interests of the trading-stamp by-law, and that President Panter and D. J. Kelly be empowered to secure a champion for the early-closing by-law. It was also decided that each member of the association should make it a point to see what members of the council he knew personally, and to use every legitimate influence to secure their support to the two by-laws.

The secretary also reported that the chief of police had written the city council for instructions regarding the fruit vendors about the Customs House on Yonge street. The chief believes that these vendors have not the legal right to use the space on the sidewalk they now occupy, and he has asked the opinion of the council regarding the matter. On motion of F. W. Johnson, seconded by T. Clark, the secretary was authorized to send a letter to the council expressing the hope of the association that these fruit vendors be prohibited from taking up so much of Yonge street and making that important entrance to the city so dirty and unattractive.

D. W. Clark moved, seconded by F. W. Johnson, that the secretary be instructed to write the Minister of Agriculture, asking for a more thorough inspection of fruit in Toronto. This motion won unanimous approval, as practically every member of the association had suffered considerable loss during the season from buying fruit which had been filled in with inferior fruit and faced with a first-class article.

Another grievance which was discussed was the length of time the fruit market was open. The opinion was unanimous that there should be no market in the afternoon, as the grocers could not attend both morning and afternoon markets, and were under a serious disadvantage on that account, as after the grocers had gone, the balance of stock on the market was cleared out to peddlers at reduced prices. This matter will likely receive further attention before the beginning of next season.

The secretary reported that, as the Industrial Exhibition authorities had not got through removing goods from the Exhibition grounds, the race-track there could not be secured for the association's horse races.

R. B. Snow moved, seconded by R. Robertson, that the horse races, the quoit match and the relay match be postponed till a week later, Wednesday, September 18.—Carried.

D. W. Clark moved, seconded by W. J. Sykes, that the return baseball game between the association team and the wholesale fruiterers' team be played on Wednesday on other grounds than Exhibition Park.—Carried.

Alexander Boyd, tea merchant, Alexandria, Ont., dropped dead at the Exposition Grounds, Buffalo, on Wednesday of last week. Mr. Boyd was 43 years old. He was married, his wife and three children surviving him.

DO NOT SLANDER FELLOW CLERKS.

ONE of the worst things that can happen in a grocery store is jealousy among the clerks. In stores where half a dozen clerks are employed, and you find one man engaged in the dishonorable act of trying to oust another from his position on account of some wrong or fancied injustice, you have one of the most undesirable places for any man to be employed. My associations have been among young men in the grocery business. From my experience, I do not think them any worse than any other class of young men, but where there are men employed you will always find some full of plots and schemes for advancement and preferment generally, ever forgetful of the truth that the man who plots another's downfall is preparing for his own end. Every person who voices innuendoes and hints of wrong about another blackens his own character. For a time, he may seem to succeed, but the end is sure and certain—his own downfall. If you work in a store, I beg of you, speak ill of no one, and do not give credence to idle tales about others. Don't repeat stories about your fellow worker, even if you know them to be true. They may hurt him, and are sure to do you no good. If someone has spoken ill of another, do not be so foolish as to hope to curry favor by telling him of it. The tendency will be to embitter him towards that person who spoke ill of him, and thus create friction and trouble.

A clerk should never try to "stand in" with the "boss" by giving him reports of the doings and sayings of other clerks in the store. No man can ever succeed who hopes to get a better position by defaming or dragging down the reputation of another. There is only one way to win, and that is to do your work well. Speak ill of no one, not even as a matter of truth. Any other course leads a man astray from the path of advancement, morally, socially and spiritually. Let us be careful of what we say of others, for, as Bishop Begum said: "No man applies an epithet to another that cannot with equal truth be applied to himself."

A QUESTION OF REFERENCES.

"A.C.T." writes: Am leaving my present position to try and get a better one. Should I ask for a letter of reference, or do they carry any weight with a man looking for a clerk?

Certainly, have a letter of recommendation. The average merchant will pay attention to a letter from another merchant or a former employer, but not so much from a minister or a local politician. I have seen boys who, when they started out to look for a position behind the counter, had a string of letters from men engaged in law, politics and religion, whose opinions may be all right on other subjects, but certainly do not weigh with the man looking for a clerk. A few terse sentences from a former employer when you start to look for work will be very helpful to you in securing a place. Be clean, and respectful in your manners. Don't go in to see a man regarding a situation and be smoking a cigar at the same time. Have your smoke afterwards. I am not aware if you smoke, but I had a young friend who failed to get a situation a short time ago on that account. I do not want any other boy to make the same mistake. Do not expect too much on the start, but try and work up. Positions worth having want competent men who are able and willing to more than earn their salary. I hope you will soon obtain a position and shall be pleased to hear from you again.

ARTICLES "JUST SOLD OUT."

"McB." writes: Why do customers ask more frequently for an article when you are "just sold out?"

I don't know why, but it's so, and it always was a puzzle to me. The customers seem to know intuitively by some sort of mind reading that a particular line of goods is sold out, and for pure contrariness they must necessarily inquire if you have it, just to aggravate. There seems to spring up an increased demand, or it may appear that way, simply because the goods are not in stock. However, I have very frequently noted that inquiries come in when goods were out of stock much faster apparently than when you had them in stock.

OLD GOODS AND STOCK-KEEPING.

"A.O." says: I enjoy your column. Why don't you tell your clerks to sell their old goods first, instead of the new? The average clerk is not careful about the keeping of stock.

I think you are the man to tell your own clerks this. They will do it if you ask them. The selling of new stock is the outcome of their desire to serve their customers with the best and freshest goods.

At the same time, your interests must be considered, and you have a right to insist that they shall do as you say. I agree with you that unless a clerk is continually reminded by his employer he is often not careful about stock-keeping, which is equally important with stock-selling. It is the duty of every merchant to see that his clerks are careful to allow no goods to accumulate through neglect. This usually happens when goods are placed in out-of-the-way places. Then they become forgotten or overlooked, and as a result are injurious to the trade or worthless. No stock requires more constant watching than the stock of a retail grocery. When constant vigilance is exercised losses can be kept down, but where there is neglect money is very easily lost. A clerk is a valuable man to his employer just in proportion as he saves stock (which is money) for his employer.

A CLERK AND HIS WAGES.

"Charles" writes: A friend of mine, a grocery clerk, was owed a considerable sum of money by his boss, who was very "hard up." Finally, he was given some slow accounts to collect, and retain what was coming to him out of the proceeds. After repeated calls he has placed these accounts in court, and his customers and employer are down on him for so doing. Do you think he was justified?

Why, certainly he was! That was the only thing to do under the circumstances. It is hard when one has to get his wages in such a way. He should not have tried to get his money in this manner. It is all right for him to try and collect these accounts, but his employer should assume all the responsibility of such actions as may be required in order to effect collections. The influence of such proceedings is sure, under these circumstances, to be detrimental to the business.

M.B.—One can easily be too familiar with customers. Talk strictly business until they have been waited upon. Then, if you have a moment to spare, you may be social, but always place business first. Show your goods quickly and politely and be ever-ready to help your customer with a suggestion. Remember their likes and dislikes. They will appreciate this on your part. People, as a rule, are not attracted by too much gush and social talk on the part of a clerk. It is his business to sell goods first, last and always, and one can be friendly without being too familiar. You must know your customers thoroughly. One man may appreciate being called by his first name and another would resent it, so try and be wise in this and discriminate.

THE PEACH CROP.

THE difficulty of computing the size of the peach crop of Ontario is well illustrated by the developments of the past week. Ten days ago, it was freely stated and generally believed that the peach crop of Ontario was considerably smaller than usual. Towards the end of last week, a report was sent forth from Essex county to the effect that the crop in that section was much larger than an average one. This statement was immediately followed by a despatch stating it to be erroneous, and reporting that, while the crop in that section is fully up to the average, it is not larger than last year.

This week, the receipts of peaches in the Toronto market from the Niagara district have been so large that Toronto fruit dealers unite in the opinion that the crop in the Niagara district, while not being as large as last year, is better than was expected, and is not a great deal below an average crop.

The indications at present are that the total crop, while not being quite an average one, is large enough to supply the ordinary demand without much increase in prices, either for the fruit in baskets or in cans.

ENCOURAGE THE YOUNG MEN.

THE following, signed by "Canadian," appeared in Monday's issue of The Ottawa Journal :

"For 20 years I have been looking out for some one to explain adequately the causes of the emigration of our young men. The quantity of humbug I have been forced to read on the subject during that time accounts for at least half of my grey hairs.

"Mr. J. W. Patterson's article in Saturday's Journal is the first honest attempt to gain insight into the mystery that has come my way. I could give you a number of instances which corroborate Mr. Patterson's argument. Mindful of your space, let two suffice. Let us name the persons A and B. A was in business in New York. He had gone there after failures to get capital for an enterprise in Canada. (This enterprise, by the way, was subsequently carried out by rich men and has succeeded.) A had an interest in the New York concern acquired by his ability and industry. Family reasons necessitated removal west. The head of the concern, after vainly urging him to stay, consented to buy him out. A was let to name a fair price for his share. Next day he got a cheque for double the amount.

He was given a letter of introduction to a western capitalist in the locality of his new home. The western man at once acted on the letter and intrusted him with an important mission. He carried this out so well that within a year he cleared, as his share of the profits, $15,000.

"Consider B's case. Like a prudent man, he left Canada without first trying to get capital for any enterprise. When I knew him in Chicago, 10 years ago, he made a modest living as a teacher. He did some casual work for a railway magnate. His energy obtained him more. He was given opportunity to work for himself as well as his employer. There are not to-day in Ottawa 10 men as rich as he. Neither A nor B is yet 40 years of age. Neither is what you would call an exceptionally brilliant man; just possessed of average sense, honesty and industry. Without the 'leg up' which they got from perfect strangers they would be in the United States what they were in Canada, obscure clerks on a pittance. I know a considerable number of young employes of rich men in Canada. Not one, to my knowledge, is encouraged to do well for himself outside his employment. In fact, if any tried to do so they would be dismissed.

"Let Mr. Patterson continue his researches. He is on the right track. This persistent talk of our small market, our colonial status, our climate, our politics, etc., to account for emigration, is overdone. A more potent cause is the timidity and the selfishness of a large majority of our moneyed men."

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

THE American Chiclé Co. have discontinued the sale of premiums with the Adams "Tutti Frutti" brand of chewing gum. The 80 per cent. profit which the dealer gets on this brand of gum was the most solid premium possible the Chiclé company could think of to give to the trade.

W. H. Gillard & Co. have a full line of fruit jars in stock.

John Sloan & Co. report big sales of "Kincora" Ceylon tea last week.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol offer both dates and figs in pounds and halves.

John Sloan & Co. have a good stock of olives both in bottles and kegs.

W. H. Gillard & Co. state that they are offering exceptional value in finest selected Valencias.

Bottling wax may be procured from Lucas, Steele & Bristol, also pickling spice in pretty sugar bowls.

A. F. MacLaren Co., Limited, have a few boxes fine old white cheese, September 1900 make, to offer.

"Tea Rose Drips" is the name of a syrup in tins which The Imperial Syrup Co. is putting on the market. The Toronto agent is The A. F. MacLaren Co., Limited.

Since giving up the premium business, The American Chiclé Co. report greatly increased sales on their big brands of chewing gum. If Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock II. is as fast a sailor as Adam's "Tutti Frutti" is a seller, the cup race is all over but the shouting.

A FORTUNE IN CARMELS.

A FEW years ago a young fellow came to Topeka looking for a job, says Merchants' Journal. He thought it would be a great thing for him if he could get into the railroad offices as a clerk, but all the places were filled and he had to give it up. Then he went back east and went on the road as a commercial traveller. There was a Dutch confectioner in the Pennsylvania town where he made his headquarters, who had invented a particularly luscious caramel, and the young fellow who failed to get a job as a railway office clerk, sold the caramel as a side issue. He found that the bit of confectionery was a heavy seller and the Dutch baker concluded that the commercial man was making too much money on the deal. He shut off on his contract with the young fellow and undertook to sell his own caramels, but failed to keep the custom that the young fellow had worked up. Then he sent for the commercial traveller and proposed to sell him half the business. The price was $39,000 and the young fellow hadn't a dollar. He bought the half interest on time and went on the road for the firm at a salary. In three years he had made enough out of his share of the caramel business to pay for his interest. He and another man bought out the other half interest, and in a few years had paid for that out of the profits of the business. Then he commenced to work up a consolidation of the caramel business of the east and has nearly accomplished it. His holdings in the consolidated concern are worth nearly half a million, and his earnings per year amount to upward of $30,000. If he had secured a job in the railroad offices in Topeka the chances are that he would have been a clerk to this day, and a judgment against him would not have been worth a cent. It is mighty lucky sometimes to get turned down.

RICE FIELDS FLOODED IN CHINA.

Under date of Shanghai, July 25, 1901, United States Consul General Goodnow reports that the most disastrous floods are prevailing in the valley of the Yangtze River. He understands that they are the worst known by Europeans in that valley. All the towns in the neighborhood of Wuhu and Kiukiang are to a large extent under water. The farms, especially the rice-growing region about Wuhu, are so completely flooded that there is no hope for the crop this year. In addition to this, thousands of people have been drowned and unknown numbers rendered homeless by the overflow. The stoppage of trade is very serious. Not only is the local trade paralyzed where the flood exists, but the river is so far beyond its banks that navigation is difficult and dangerous. It is reported that five large river steamers plying between Shanghai and Hankau are out in the fields in different places. The destruction of the crops in vast regions, and particularly the probable destruction of the rice crop in the region of Wuhu—the great rice-exporting centre—will probably add famine in the Yangtze Valley to the other difficulties besetting the Empire.

CUMULATIVE RESULTS OF ADVERTISING

The advertising of to day or to-morrow cannot be fully accounted for by the sales of the day or the week, remarks an exchange. Returns often come in long after the appearance of any one advertisement. It is these belated returns which make up what in advertising parlance is known as the cumulative results. In the course of time they grow to such proportions as the after circumstances warrant. Thus, the mail-order advertiser who makes his advertising pay from the time his business is well launched—or started—may expect future returns to increase gradually as the cumulative effects of his advertising begin to appear.

Off His Guard.

One Monday morning bright and clear
In a grocer's shop not far from here
A traveller entered with his grip
And on the counter he did sit.
"In the list of births the other day
I see a son and heir has come your way
Now as you're getting low on gum
Buy it with a baby jumper, just for fun."

The grocer had a big broad grin
'Twas his very first child—the image of him
And it tickled his pride and vanity too
For the neighbors were fooled—they predicted two.
"Oh, I guess you had better send one along
"See it's a good one—well made and strong".
(To the brand of gum he gave never a thought 'Twas the jumper alone he really bought.)

The jumper and gum arrived in time—
The surprise to his wife was simply sublime.
"You dear old sweetheart" she fondly said
As she kissed his cheek and stroked his head,
"I saw one down town the other day
"But considered two dollars too much to pay."
The surprise on his face was not so sublime
As he turned the two dollars around in his mind.
"Twas listed at five, now just let us see "What that baby jumper did really cost me.

"Invoice six fifty plus the freight
"The traveller said gum would sell for eight.
"I could buy the gum in the regular way
"For three dollars and fifty-five cents we'll say.
"The jumper then cost two ninety five "Without the freight—I've been skinned alive.
"My trade demands these popular brands
"Tutti Frutti and Beeman's and Whites' Yucatan."

On Guard.

King System sat from morn 'till night
Perched on the counter in the light,
Where he could see his subjects work
And keep a tab on every clerk.

He made his edicts strong for all,
That a fractional pound, no matter how small,
Had its value; and, as King of Weight,
He annexed it to his vast estate.

His subjects—well, they learned at last,
That days of waste, and loss had passed.
They learned to love their King; and he Always maintained strict equity.

A DEPRESSED CHEESE MARKET.

THE cheese market is at present in a precarious condition. Although values range from 2 to 2½c. per lb. below those of last year, the English demand is decidedly flat, and there are many pessimists who fear that the depression which has set in will prevail throughout the fall season.

On the other hand, it would seem that it would not take much to place the market in a better shape. To date Montreal shipments of cheese are about 326,000 boxes behind those of last season, while the American decline brings the amount up to 400,000 boxes. This falling off amounts to about 30 per cent. of the total shipments from the United States and Canada. As yet the English demand is rigidly confined to actual wants, and has been so for weeks. It is now estimated that there are at least 400,000 boxes held in cold storage in Montreal awaiting a profitable turn of the market.

The trouble seems to be that the Englishmen are not anticipating their future wants as they generally do at this time of year. The policy proved disastrous last year and they are evidently afraid to make the venture again, at least under present conditions.

Very little June and July cheese is now moving, and the reason is not far to seek. They cost, on the average, 9½c. at country points, so that 10c. would have to be realized to let them out. This is equivalent to 47s. or 47s 6d., while fresh August goods are being sold at 46s. Considerable dealing is going on in Quebec goods at 8½ to 8¾c., and, at present, the best Ontario makes cannot sell over the wire at more than 9c. How buyers can afford to pay 9 to 9 3/16c. at country boards is a mystery. But they keep on doing so.

They must be depending upon statistical proof of better times ahead. There is a marked contraction in England on account of the drouth experienced in July and August, and the same circumstances must affect the output here. In addition, many factories have lately turned from the production of cheese to the manufacture of butter, which must also limit the Canadian output this fall. Reciting these facts, The London Times calculates that cheese must be dear next season. Certainly, if there should be a continuance of the usual consumption in England, the demand ought to come soon and with it better prices. But the question is: Has John Bull's consumption fallen off this year?

LOOKING AFTER WEST-INDIAN TRADE.

PICKFORD & BLACK, Halifax, advise THE CANADIAN GROCER by letter that they have recently established a bureau on each of their ships running to Bermuda, Barbadoes, Trinidad and Demerara for the distribution of literature about Canadian industries.

Manufacturers who have any printed matter relating to their products would do well to send a few hundred copies to Pickford & Black. There is a large trade to be done in such lines as flour, butter, cheese, oats, hay and other farm produce, biscuits, confectionery, boots and shoes, lumber and other manufactured goods, and with the steamship connection now established between Canada and the countries to the south, our people should avail themselves of the opportunities to enlarge their export trade.

CANADIANS AND MR. McKINLEY.

CANADIANS have not pleasant recollections of Mr. William McKinley as a politician. The United States tariff of 1890 which bears his name had some of its armament directly and designedly pointed against Canada. And although the results were more to our good than to our injury, on account of the energy it caused us to develop in regard to British trade, it has not by any means caused us to fall down and worship the tariff which Mr. McKinley and his fellow Congressmen set up in 1890.

But when the hand of the assassin laid him low the hearts of Canadians were scarcely less deeply touched than those of President McKinley's own people. Nowhere was indignation more pronounced than in Canada, and nowhere was there a more unanimous wish expressed that lynch law had not settled with the cowardly assassin before the recognized law of the United States had taken possession of him.

The people of the United States and Canada may not, perhaps, be brothers, but they are cousins, and a crisis like the present reveals it.

Whatever Mr. McKinley was in 1890, his course as President of the United States has greatly softened the feelings of Canadians toward him. He never acted the part of a Grover Cleveland, and in his two Presidential election campaigns the sympathy of the great majority of the people in this country has been with him. Now, when his life is in grave danger, and the nation stands trembling, Canadians feel almost as deeply as if they were direct sharers in the trouble which overshadows the neighboring republic.

THE SITUATION IN CURRANTS.

The currant market in Greece is about 6s. below the highest point; but prices now seem to have settled down, for the time being, at least, at the present basis.

There is a feeling, evidently well grounded, that the shippers in Greece have been unduly holding the market up. A good many buyers in Canada have consequently been holding off. Now, that prices have been reduced to a lower level, they have shown more disposition to operate, and some fairly good orders have been cabled from here during the past week or two.

WILL THERE BE RECIPROCITY ?

IT was significant that the day before President McKinley was shot he should have made a speech that attracted world-wide attention. We have reference to his speech on reciprocity.

The importance of the speech lay in its strong advocacy of the principle of reciprocal trade with the outside world.

"In these times of marvellous business energy and gain," he said, "we ought to be looking to the future, strengthening the weak places in our industrial and commercial systems, that we may be ready for any storm or strain. * * * We must not repose in fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy little or nothing. * * * The period of exclusiveness is past. * * * Reciprocity treaties are in harmony with the spirit of the times ; measures of retaliation are not."

For some months the commercial world has had an inkling now and then that the views of Mr. McKinley in regard to the commercial policy of the United States had become greatly modified since he, 11 years ago, launched the famous tariff bill which bears his name. And his utterance on Friday last more than confirmed these inkings.

Mr. McKinley, although President of the United States, is still a politician. And not only that but he is the high priest of the system of national trade exclusiveness which he himself acknowledges has served its day. Coming then from such an authority, it is folly to attempt to attach no importance to Mr. McKinley's new profession of faith.

It should also be remembered that Mr. McKinley is not alone in this matter. As we pointed out the other day the Chambers of Commerce of Boston, Chicago and other places ; the National Manufacturers' Association and the Business Men's Association of New York have all recently passed strong resolutions in favor of reciprocity. Only the day before the President made his speech the Executive Committee of the National Association of Manufacturers, at a meeting held in Philadelphia, passed a resolution calling for a national conference on reciprocity and appointing the officers of the association, with others, to be a committee to make arrangements for the same. Then the platform of Mr. McKinley's own party in Iowa contains a plank favoring "such changes in the tariff from time to time as became advisable through the progress of our industries and their changing relations to the commerce of the world."

A strong sentiment in favor of reciprocal trade with foreign countries is undoubtedly developing in the United States. And the recent speech of President McKinley is a reflex of it.

We do not believe that this conversion to reciprocity is born of sorrow for the sin of exclusiveness, which has been so strongly characteristic of the United States during the past decade. What it is more probably born of, is the threatened danger of retaliation by the foreign countries whose markets they desire to possess. "The period of exclusiveness is past," simply because the business men of the United States are awakening to the fact that it does not pay to perpetuate it.

To be convinced, however, "that the period of exclusiveness is past," and to be at the same time seized of the true underlying principles of reciprocity are two different things. To be candid, we do not believe that the people of the United States have yet become sufficiently educated in this particular. At any rate, if they have they must have made wonderful progress since the days when reciprocity with the United States was a desideratum which Canada sought with more earnestness than wisdom.

We fear that the reciprocity the majority of those in the United States are craving for is still somewhat of the jug-handled description. Until fruits more meet for repentance are shown than those yet exhibited, we do not look for many practical results from the new policy of President McKinley and others who are pulling with him in the same boat.

The subject is made all the more interesting to Canada from the fact that the Industrial Commission, which has for a year or more been investigating the trust question in the United States, has just made public the text of a statement on the subject of reciprocity with this country, in which it is asserted that Canada, considering her population, is the best customer the United States has in the world, but "that we are in danger of losing this important market because of our indifference and short-sighted independence. Last year," continues the text, "Canada purchased American goods to the value of $17.50 per capita of her population, while the United Kingdom, which is our next largest purchaser, took but $13.25. Germany took $3.60 ; Argentina, $3 ; Mexico, $2.65 ; France, $2.15 ; Italy, $1.10 ; Japan, 70c. ; and Brazil, 60c. The 6,000,000 people of Canada purchased of us last year more than the 60,000,000 people who live on the American Continent south of the Rio Grande."

The merchant who has not the courage of his own conviction is not likely to make much of a mark in the commercial world.

PRICE OF LARD ADVANCING.

REVIEWING the lard situation a month ago, THE CANADIAN GROCER ventured the prediction that stocks of lard might again show another increase this month, as the high prices being paid for live hogs would bring all available supplies to market, but that in September arrivals would again fall off and the market would be firmer than ever up to December.

The certainty of a stiff fall market for hog products has revealed itself even sooner than we expected. Instead of stocks of lard held at world's ports increasing during August, they have decreased from 229,029 to 208,259 tierces, a decrease of about 21,000 tierces. Stocks are over 50,000 tierces below those of last year and little more than one third of what they were reckoned to be on September 1, 1897.

Canada still feels the stringency. During the past month there has been a fairly heavy demand for lard and prices in Montreal have advanced from  $\frac{1}{2}$  to 1c. per lb., pail now being worth \$2.35 to \$2.45. At the same time compound lard is affected and prices have scored an advance of  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb.

At present the outlook is for a still stronger market. In spite of the high prices of hogs, the farmers are not marketing them freely and packers are compelled to pay $7 to $7.50 for good live hogs.

TRADE IN COUNTRIES OTHER THAN OUR OWN.

PRIVATE mail advices from Jamaica report the outlook for the coming crop of oranges as being very fine, with estimates placing the yield at 20 per cent. larger than was the case last year. Mail advices from Florida state that estimates on the coming crop figure up to 2,000,000 boxes, and Californian advices report a probable output of 25,000 to 26,000 carloads of oranges.

THE SITUATION IN RICE.

Wm. G. Hale & Co., writing from Saigon under date of August 1, say of rice: "Stocks in the interior are diminishing rapidly, and when the outstanding contracts with Java, Philippines and Europe, falling due to a great extent during this month, come to be fulfilled, there would not be much grain left for export. Owing to scarcity of supplies and a better inquiry from China, our prices are stiffening daily and dealers are reluctant to bind themselves for forward delivery. The weather has proved wet enough during the period under review and field operations are continued under more propitious circumstances."

NEW CROP SMYRNA FIGS.

Paddock & Fowler have received samples of the new crop Smyrna bag figs and report the same to be in good condition. It is stated that the first arrival of new figs is looked for about September 17. The second shipment will be about one week later. New figs, first arrival, offer at 12c. for 2-in., 13c. for 2½-in., 14c. for 2½-in. and 15c. for 2¾-in., in 10, 12 and 14-lb. boxes for layers. Bag figs, due in October, offer at 5c. for prime naturals and 5½c. for fine.—New York Journal of Commerce.

ALASKA SALMON PACK.

A despatch from Seattle says: "Some sockeye packing still continues and total Puget Sound spring pack, now including corrections, by your correspondent's private advice, will be 1,250,000 cases. The Pacific Packing and Navigation Co.'s three Puget Sound groups' canners have actually 482,000, including Ainsworth and Dunn cannery, 109,000 cases; Pacific American, 14,500; Fair Haven Canning Co., 58,500. Important Western Alaska advices to-day show heavy pack by all canneries. Humpbacks are running light on Puget Sound. The demand is reported heavy, low prices forcing consumption."

CANNED VEGETABLES IN THE STATES.

Fortunate will be the firm which manages to accumulate a stock of canned goods, because, outside of salmon, there appears to be absolutely nothing in tin that will not be in short supply for the average of demand during the winter. This condition of steady demand for each article in its season has put the packers who have been able to work into an excellent humor with themselves. Go where you will among the canning houses throughout the United States, wherever they have been able to get up any supply, they will tell you what an extraordinary demand there has been for their brands of goods. Many of them ignore the general scarcity, and attribute the demand to the special favor the public has shown for their special pack. Some sections believe there are plenty of peas, whilst the great pea sections of the United States are literally cleaned. Many of them would like to think that tomatoes are not at all scarce, but they are all afraid to take future orders, even at the prevailing prices of 90 to 95c. per dozen. Just here let us say that the situation of tomatoes in Maryland might be very deceptive to a young and inexperienced observer. Never did the vines look better or healthier, and they are fairly loaded with large green tomatoes; but an inspection of the plants discloses the fact that there are actually no blossoms, and the green tomatoes on the vines are ripening extremely slowly, so much so that they still continue to bring high prices on the market stalls, and the packing is reckoned by some as not yet having commenced. This delay in the ripening of the fruit, and also the absence of blossoms, is due to the amount of wet weather we have had and the considerable lack of much-needed hot sunshine. It is good weather for growing green tomatoes, but the poorest imaginable, except frost, for getting ripe ones. The serious consideration in the case is that, with the development of no new blossoms, we have an assurance of no new fruit; in other words, the crop of 1901 is virtually entirely in sight on the vines at this time, and it will be almost impossible to develop more tomatoes before frost arrives, as the absence of blossoms has virtually cut off the future supply. Under these circumstances, we have no hesitancy in saying that tomatoes have not yet reached their highest point in value, but we regard this condition as more of a disaster than an advantage, because it is merely the result of a curtailed pack and a general loss of the season's opportunity.—The Trade, Baltimore, Md., September 6.

A WEALTHY COLORED GROCER.

Topeka, Kan., has a negro grocer who rose from delivery boy to clerk and partner and sole manager of a grocery business that now amounts to $180,000 a year. His name is Clay Odell and he employs 15 clerks, and for two years has secured the contract for supplying all the State institutions of Kansas with groceries. How many white grocers would like to change places with him? A business of $180,000 a year is much larger than the average and out there in Kansas must loom particularly large.—New York Merchants' Review.

DISPENSING WITH THE SALESMEN.

WE hear nothing further of the progress making with the big wholesale grocery combination, with its almost fabulous capital, but the more we consider its chances of success on a non-salesmen basis, the more we feel that the thing is likely "to die a-borning."

What brilliant and ephemeral schemes have been born in the past of that self same delusion regarding the ease with which the services of salesmen could be dispensed with, and the profits to be made by doing so.

At about the time certain hired scribes and lobbyists of capitalists were preparing the way for the trusts, as they are commonly called, a number of articles appeared in print, telling how many billions of dollars were uselessly spent for drummers' services in the United States every year, and it was carefully pointed out how this vast sum of money could be saved by consolidating the management of the different industries. The consolidations became facts, but there has been no saving. If any travelling salesmen have lost their jobs, the trusts have pocketed the salaries, hence nobody has yet had a chance to test the brilliant theories of the writers above referred to.

But, in very truth, the difficulty of paralyzing the competitive spirit has been so great that nearly as many, if not quite as many, salesmen are needed to-day in the world of trade as were formerly required, and attempts to obstinately persist in doing business without their services only recoil upon the heads of the trust managers. Coming right upon a seemingly-luxuriant blossoming of the cooperative theory of buying goods, which also looks to the travelling man's overthrow, this jobbing combine is to many salesmen particularly distasteful and offensive, but we would reassure them. The salesmen will be doing business at the old stand long after the $100,000,000 jobbing combine has been forgotten.—New York Merchants' Review,

A five barrel petroleum well was discovered near Tilsonburg, Ont., some days ago, and a much stronger one has since been dynamited.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

If any reader wishes to know where any article can be purchased in Canada or abroad, a letter to the Editor will probably place him in communication with the seller.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, September 12, 1901.
GROCERIES.

THE travelers have again resumed their respective routes and business through them is again assuming its normal condition. No particularly striking features have developed during the week. A good business is being done, particularly in sugar. Yellow sugars are 5 to 10c. per 100 lb. lower. Raw sugars are dull and easy in the outside markets. A good deal of interest is still centred around canned goods. There have been some transactions in canned vegetables during the week and the tone of the market is steady. In regard to canned salmon a great deal of uncertainty prevails as to prices and very little business is being done. Currants have shown further decline in the primary market, but values are steadier at the present basis. Valencia raisins are still weak. Prunes are dull and unchanged. Spices rule firm and a steady business is being done. Teas are still attracting but little attention and coffees are quiet.

CANNED GOODS.

There has been no material change in the situation since last week. There have been some transactions in round lots of canned tomatoes during the week, both on syndicate and non-syndicate goods. Although the weather continues favorable for packing operations, the fact that the syndicate packers have covenanted to put up 30 per cent. less than they did last year is undoubtedly giving the market a steadier tone than it would otherwise possess. Some of the packers appear to have already sold their allotted output of tomatoes, buyers having been notified to that effect by certain of them. Very little buying is being done by retailers, business being largely of a sorting-up character. The ruling price for tomatoes is 85c., for peas 80c. up, and for corn 75c. up. The feeling is still rather weak in regard to canned salmon. The well-known standard brands remain unchanged, and in spite of the large pack on the Fraser, a local wholesaler who tried to get his order for a certain standard brand increased by a few hundred cases at the original price was informed by the packers that they could not accept any more business. As we stated last week, low prices are being quoted on private and other than standard brands. Prices are weak in England, and this week a Toronto house was asked to make an offer on 3 000 cases of unlabelled goods lying in Liverpool. Very little business is being done in canned salmon on the local market. Fraser River sockeye on spot is being quoted at $1.50 to $1.75, according to brand, and Northern sockeye at $1.40 to $1.50. Quotations on futures are: Fraser River sockeyes, $1.42½ for 5-case lots and over, and $1.45 for less quantities; Northern sockeye, $1.25 to $1.30; pink salmon, 95c. to $1; cohoes, $1.05 to $1.10. The demand for canned meats is falling off, but there is still a fair business being done.

See pages 31 and 32 for
Toronto, Montreal, and St.
John prices current.

COFFEE.

There is not much doing. It is difficult to get desirable green Rio coffees of good color on the primary market, and stocks here are in consequence getting light. The outside markets are dull and easy. We quote: Green Rio, No. 7, 7½c.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8½c.; No. 4, 9¼c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There has not so far been much improvement in the demand for syrups. Some new lines of syrups in tins are being put upon the market this season. In molasses business is, if anything, a little better than it was.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Business continues steady in both rice and tapioca. We quote B rice at 3½c. per lb. and Japan and Java at 5½ to 6c. and tapioca 4¼ to 4½c. per lb.

SPICES.

Pepper is held firm and stocks are gradually declining in the primary markets. In New York stocks are getting low in all kinds of spices except cloves, which are easy, although without quotable change.

NUTS.

Tarragona almonds are slightly easier than a short time ago, and in nuts generally there is not much disposition to operate on account of the uncertainty as to price.

SUGAR.

The demand during the last week or ten days has been quite heavy. Some country retailers have even ordered sugar forward by express. The refineries have pretty well worked off their surplus stock, and some difficulty is now being experienced in getting prompt shipment. Certain grades of soft sugars have advanced 5c. per 100 lb. in New York during the week, but granulated sugar is without change. In Canada, yellow sugars are 5 to 10c. lower. The raw sugar market is dull, and beet sugars are, at the time of writing, quoted at the lowest price on record, namely, 8s. per cwt. After touching that figure the price recovered a little, but a subsequent reaction brought the quotation again to 8s. At 8s. the price is on the parity of 4c. for 96 per cent. centrifugal at New York, where sales of the latter class have been made at 3¾c. per lb., although cargoes since arriving are held at 3¾c. Stocks of raw sugars in importers' hands in New York are heavy, being at the end of last week over 49,000 tons, as compared with nothing the same time a year ago. The meltings in the United States last year were 36,000 tons, against receipts of 17,543 tons. The demand for raw sugar in the United States is active, and the refineries are two weeks behind with their orders.

TEAS.

There has been, perhaps, a little more inquiry for Indian and Ceylon teas, but transactions are still few. The market is, however, a little steadier for Ceylon teas than it was. According to the latest mail advices from London rather more animation was noticeable in the market, and all teas sold at firm prices, especially the higher grades. This improvement is held to be due to the better quality of many of the arrivals. The advices from London in regard to Indian tea say that although the quantity brought forward was much smaller the market showed little disposition to purchase at current prices. The auction consequently passed slowly with a further slight decline, even good teas meeting with rather less competition.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS—Although the primary market has shown further evidences of weakness, prices appear to be fairly steady at the present basis. Prices are now down about 6s. per cwt. from the lowest point. The first direct steamer for Canada, the Escalona, sailed from Patras on Wednesday. The demand continues fair, although of a hand-to-mouth character. Fine Filiatras are being offered by the wholesale houses to arrive at 7 to 7½c., and Patras at 7¼ to 8½c. Ruling prices from stock are 9c. for Filiatras, 10½c. for Patras and 12½c. for Vostiazas.

VALENCIA RAISINS—Are held firm in the primary market, but goods on spot here are still weak, with holders anxious sellers at 4 to 4½c. for fine off stalk and 5 to 6c. for selected.

PRUNES—Very little doing. Californian prunes are quoted at the following: 30 40's, 8 to 8½c.; 40 50's, 7½ to 8c.; 50 60's, 7 to 7½c.; 60 70's, 6½ to 7c.; 70 80's, 6 to 6½c.; 80 90's, 5½ to 6c.; 90 100's, 5 to 5½c. French prunes, 3½ to 4c.

GREEN FRUITS.

The past week has been one of the most active of the season. Peaches, plums and pears are arriving in large quantities, and, as the demand keeps brisk, the market is active. Grapes are not yet coming in as freely as they probably will soon, but there is already a big movement in them. A few lawtonberries are still selling. Blueberries are done. Watermelons, canteloups, etc., are still offering freely. The first arrivals of Jamaica oranges are noted this week. They are of good flavor and color, and readily bring $6.50. Sweet potatoes are now offering at $4 per barrel. Apples are steady at from $2 to $3.25 per barrel. We quote as follows: Pears, 20 to 40c. per basket; peaches, 30 to 40c. for white and 60c. to $1 for red; plums, 25 to 40c.; apples, 25 to 40c.; egg plant, 20 to 25c.; tomatoes, 10 to 25c.; cucumbers, 10 to 15c.; gherkins, 35 to 45c.; peppers, 25 to 50c.; grapes, in 10 lb. baskets, 15 to 20c. for Champions and 20 to 25c. for Moore's Early and Moyer's; muskmelons, 25 to 35c. per crate of 12; watermelons, 15 to 25c. each; bananas, $1.75 for 1st and 75c. to $1 for eight-hands. New Verdilli lemons are offering at $3.75 to $4.25 per box, and late Valencia oranges are steady at $4.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS—Owing to the arrival of many bad eggs the market is dull, except for the best stock, which is worth 13c. per doz. Other grades range from 8c. per dozen up, and are hard to sell.

BEANS—The high price is affecting sales, but, as the offerings are none too large, the market is well sustained at $2.15 to $2.25.

HONEY—Prices are stiffening as the demand has proven to be liberal. We quote:

9 to 10c. for extracted clover and $1.75 to $2 for No. 1 clover comb.

DRIED APPLES—There is practically nothing doing in a jobbing way in dried apples, and little in evaporated. The latter are still quoted from 7½ to 8c. nominally.

POTATOES—The market keeps firm, as the demand absorbs all offerings at from 60 to 65c. per bush.

DRESSED POULTRY—There is not much doing. Prices are steady. We quote: Chickens, 45 to 50c. per pair; hens, 45 to 50c. per pair; ducks, 60 to 70c. per pair.

LIVE CHICKENS—The Canadian Produce Co., 36 and 38 Esplanade east, Toronto, will pay until September 26, for spring chickens, not less than two lb. each, 5½c. per lb. For ducklings, not less than four lb. each, 4c. per lb. For hens (including last year's birds) 4c. per lb. These prices are for live weight on arrival. Crates shipped free and express paid up to 50c. per 100 lb. of chickens.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER—The market continues dull, especially for dairy grades. There is practically no demand for inferior grades. We quote as follows: Dairy prints, 17 to 18c.; best tubs, 16 to 16½c.; poor to medium grades, 12 to 15c.; creamery prints, 21 to 22c.; boxes, 20c.

CHEESE—The market is even easier than a week ago, and it is now difficult to get more than 9¼c. for finest cheese.

FISH.

The demand for prepared fish is improving as new cod is on the market. A report from Newfoundland states that the catch of cod has not been up to the average. Prices are unchanged, however. Fresh fish is in steady demand at unchanged prices. We quote: Fresh fish—Spanish mackerel, 12½c.; codfish, 6c.; whitefish, 7 to 7½c.; trout, 7½c.; halibut, 15c.; sea salmon, 20 to 25c.; haddock, 6c.; herring, 4c.; perch, 4c.; British Columbian salmon, 20c. Smoked fish—Ciscos, $1 per basket. Prepared fish—Dried cod, in 112-lb. bundles, $4.75 per cwt.; flitch cod, $5 to $5.25; boneless cod, in bricks, 5 to 5½c. per lb.; steak cod, 6½c. per lb.; shredded cod (2 doz. n box), $1.80 per box; boneless fish, loose, in 25-lb. boxes, 4 to 4½c., and 5-lb. boxes, 5c. per lb. Live lobsters are worth 15c. per lb.

VEGETABLES.

Sweet potatoes are 25c. cheaper. Citrons are offering at 30 to 35c. per doz. Otherwise there is no change. We quote: Carrots and beets, 20c. per peck; turnips, 15 to 20c. per peck; lettuce, 20 to 30c. per doz.; radishes, 15 to 20c.; watercress, mint and parsley, 20c.; cauliflower, 75c. to $1.25; celery, 40 to 65c.; cabbage, 30 to 50c.;

corn, 6 to 8c.; cucumbers, short, 10 to 15c.; tomatoes, 10 to 20c. per basket; butter beans, 20 to 25c. per basket; dry onions, $1.25 per bush.; new potatoes, 75 to 80c. per bushel; gherkins, 50c. per basket; egg plant, 30 to 35c. per basket; sweet potatoes, $4.25 per bbl.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES—There is a good demand. We quote: Cowhides, No. 1, 7½c.; No. 2, 6½c.; No. 3, 5½c. Steerhides are worth 1c. more. Cured hides are quoted at 8½ to 9c.

SKINS—Lambskins and pelts are 5c. higher. Otherwise there is no change. We quote: No. 1 veal, 8 lb. and up, 9c. per lb.; No. 2, 8c.; dekins, from 55 to 60c.; culls, 20 to 25c.; sheepskins, 90c. to $1; lambs and pelts, 40c.

WOOL—Prices are unchanged, and the market is fairly active. Our quotations are: Combing fleece, washed, 12 to 12½c., and unwashed, 7½ to 8c.

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN—There is little change. Manitoba No. 1 hard is quoted at 85½c. grinding in transit, or 83½c. Toronto and west. Ontario wheat is quoted at 70c. at outside points, middle freights. More activity is noted on the Toronto street markets. Wheat is ½c. lower, but oats are 2 to 3c. dearer. Peas are now quoted at 68 to 70c. We quote as follows: Wheat, white and red, 71 to 73c.; goose, 67 to 69c.; oats, new, 38 to 40c.; rye, 52c.; barley, 49 to 51c.; peas, 68 to 70c.

FLOUR—A decline of 10c. is noted in Manitoba flour. We quote on track, Toronto (bags included) as follows: Manitoba patents, $4.05; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.75; Ontario patents, $3.70 to $3.80; straight roller, $3.40.

BREAKFAST FOODS—There is no change, but rolled oats and oatmeal are decidedly stiff. We quote as follows: Standard oatmeal, $3.70 in bags, and $3.80 in bbls.; rolled oats, $3.60 in bags, and $3.70 in bbls.; rolled wheat, $2.35 in 100-lb. bbls.; cornmeal, $2.75; split peas, $4; pot barley, $4.

GROCERIES.

THERE is a satisfactory expansion going on in the wholesale grocery business, and the markets seem to be uniformly steady. Sugar is locally 5 to 10c. lower on yellows; granulated is unchanged. Foreign raw markets continue to decline. There is a better demand reported for Japan teas with trading active in last year's importations. China greens are rather scarce and eagerly sought for. The canned goods market presents nothing new this week. Wholesalers are firm in their views, and canners continue to report short pack, and the likelihood of further shortages. The standard brands of Fraser River sockeye salmon are still quoted at $4.60 and $5.10 f.o.b. Coast, but private brands have sold at the reduced figure this week. The foreign dried fruit markets are steadier this week except in the case of currants which have declined another shilling on the week's cable offerings. Valencia raisins are steady, while the better grades of Sultanias have advanced 10d. Shelled almonds are 2s. per cwt. higher. There is some cheap tapioca, pearl and seed, being offered for delivery at the beginning of October. Halloween dates are higher, and dealers have raised their prices on goods to arrive to 4¼ to 4½c. There is a fair movement of spices, with nutmegs easy and gingers firm.

TEAS.

We have again to report an improved inquiry for Japan teas, ranging from 16 to 18c., first cost, but it seems that there are very few third-crop teas offering, and the probability is that good teas of this class will be scarce. There is more inquiry for last year's teas up to 20c., as their style is better than that of this season's growth. Wholesalers are selling them at a loss, however. As for siftings and fannings, it seems impossible to get them, although some sales of fannings have been reported at 7c.

One of the features of the tea trade at the present moment is the active demand for China greens. During the past two weeks several lots have been shipped to New York, and all good grades appear to be desirable property, both here and in the west. The primary market opened 20 per cent. higher this year than last, and as the crop is short people are beginning to be afraid that they will not be able to fill their wants. The latest despatch from Shanghai, dated August 8, says that Congous have received more attention from American buyers, and values have advanced considerably in consequence. "It now looks as though the Chinese teaman would be able to dispose of all his teas this year, which at one time seemed improbable." Pingsueys remain steady; a large business continues to be transacted in lines at firm rates. Hysons continue in strong demand, while medium Moyunes can be quoted a tael lower than opening prices. Settlements of Coventry and Pingsuey teas to date amount to 71,542 half-chests, as compared with 102,083 last season. Exports of green amount to 3,165,402 lb., against 4,455,987 last year, and of Congous, 7,486,768, against 14,157,769 last year.

SUGARS.

Since our last report, foreign markets for raw sugar have weakened, and yellows are 5 to 10c. lower locally. Raw beet is cabled at 8s., a decline of 3 to 4½d., while centrifugal, 96 test, is offered in New York at 3¾c., a decline of ¼c. This turn of the market is supposed to be in sympathy with the likelihood of a heavy crop of beet and cane. Montreal refiners are selling at $4.40 for granulated and $3.65 to $4.30 for yellows. The demand is seasonably fair.

MOLASSES.

There is nothing new to interest in the molasses market. The jobbing price of small lots remains at 29c., and goods would seem to be good value at that price, as the market is quite firm.

CANNED GOODS.

An important Ontario canner who was in the city this week corroborated our various reports in regard to the shortage in the pack of all kinds of fruit and vegetables. "In the spring abundance was promised in almost every line. First the crop of strawberries fell off and the pack was disappointing. Raspberries came next in turn and here again the pack was very small. Currants and gooseberries have been a very poor crop, and peaches have turned out to a half crop. The apple crop is almost an entire failure. Peas at first looked well but turned out extremely poorly, and now the chances of a full pack of tomatoes and corn grow poorer every day." Dealers are growing firmer every day in their ideas on canned goods. Tomatoes are quoted at 85 to 90c., corn at 80c., and peas at 80 to 95c. We quote fruits as follows: Strawberries, $1.50; raspberries, $1.40; gooseberries, $1.40; pears, $1.55 for 2's and $2 for 3's; Lombard plums, $1.20; greengages, $1.30; yellow peaches, $1.90 for 2's and $2.65 for 3's; sliced pineapple, $2.30, and $2.45 for grated; 3-lb. apples, 90c.; red pitted cherries, $2.00, and whites, $2.15. There is no change in the salmon situation. On standard brands such as "Clover Leaf" there has been no reduction in price announced, while one broker received a letter this week saying that the canner's syndicate had reduced prices by 60c. per case. Fraser River sockeye is quoted at $1.45 for talls for future delivery, and $1.60 for flats, while Rivers Inlet sockeye is offered at $1.32½ in small lots. There are private brands of Fraser River fish offered at $5.00 a case, and Rivers Inlet at $4.80.

SPICES.

The primary nutmeg market is reported easy, otherwise there is no change to report. Business is fairly good. We quote: Nutmegs, 35 to 65c. per lb., as to size; Penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 20c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole, Cochin, 14 to 16c.; Japan, 10c.; Jamaica, 20c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16c.; Jamaica, 25c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Tapioca, pearl and seed, is being offered for delivery at the beginning of October at a price less than 3¾c., affording a splendid opportunity to get in a cheap stock. We quote in combine district: B rice, in bags, $3.10; in ½ bags, $3.15; in ¼ bags, $3.20; in pockets, $3.25. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $3 in bags; $3.05 in ½ bags; $3.10 in ¼ bags; and $3.15 in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4¾c. per lb., and tapioca, 3¾ to 3¾c.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS—The currant market keeps on gradually declining, until now it is 1s. below last week's figures. The ss. Escalona, with the first direct shipment of currants on board for Canada, left Greece for Montreal on Wednesday. Spot currants maintain their former level at 9 to 10c. For future delivery, fine Filiatras are quoted at 5¾ to 6¼c., and cleaned, 6¼ to 6¾c.; cleaned in 1-lb. cartons, 8c., and finest Vostizza currants, in half-cases, 7¾ to 8¼c.

VALENCIA RAISINS—The Valencia raisin market is steady for new fruit, no change being reported this week. Spot goods continue to be slaughtered at 3½c. for fine off-stalk, and 5c. for selected.

SULTANA RAISINS—To arrive first half of October, Sultana raisins, good medium, are quoted at 9¼ to 10c. This week the primary market shows a slight advance of 9d. on better grades, common remaining unchanged.

FIGS—Comadre figs to arrive are worth 3¾ to 3¾c. in tapnets, and Eleme figs in 10-lb. boxes $1.05 to $1.10.

DATES—Hallowe dates are higher again, and jobbers are now quoting 7¾ to 8¼c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—The market remains firm and shows no change this week, spot goods being worth 8 to 8½c. What the new pack will be worth is not yet determined, but 9½c. will probably be asked.

PEELS—English peels for late delivery are quoted at 10 to 11c. for lemon, 10½ to 11½c. for orange, and 14½ to 15½c. for citron peel.

NUTS.

Pure Mayette Grenoble walnuts to arrive, in 220 lb. bales, are quoted at 11 to 12c. Sicily filberts in 220-lb. bales are offered at 8½ to 9½c., and Tarragona almonds, in bags of 110 lb., are offered at 10¾ to 11¾c. Shelled almonds will be worth 26c.

GREEN FRUITS.

The demand is not very active, and, indeed, the light demand for pears has caused an overstock. Other fruits are moving freely. We quote: Californian Valencias, $5 to $6 per box; Messina lemons, 300's, $3.25 to $4.50; 360's, $2.75 to $3.50 per box; Verdilli lemons, $3.75 to $4.75 per box; pineapples, 20 to 30c.; Canadian apples, 15 to 25c. per basket; Californian plums, $1.50 to $2 per box; peaches, $1.50 to $1.75; limes, $1.50 per box; Ontario peaches, 30 to 50c. per basket; Ontario plums, 35 to 50c.; cocoanuts, $3.25 per bag of 100; Californian Bartlett pears, $3.00 to $3.50 per box; watermelons, 20 to 25c.; bananas, No. 1, $1.75 to $2.25, and eight hands, $1.35 to $1.50; Canadian pears (baskets), 30 to 40c.; Bartlett pears (bbles.), $2.00 to $4.50; Clapp's Favorite (bbles.), $2.00 to $3.75; Ontario muskmelons, 25 to 60c. per crate.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS—A fairly good demand is being experienced from the other side for fresh Canadian 15-lb. stock, sales of which have been made over the cable at 7s. 6d. c.i.f. There has also been some inquiry for pickled goods at prices ranging about 6s. 10d. Up to date, exports have been 8,079 cases less than for the corresponding period last season.

HONEY—There is still a good demand for white clover honey in comb, which sells at 10 to 10½c. Extracted white clover honey is not much inquired for, and prices are easy at 7½ to 8c.

POTATOES—The market is quiet with a downward tendency, but prices are irregular. At Bonsecours market, sales are being made at 75c. per bag. On track, they are quoted at 60c. per bag.

ASHES—Receipts are light; first pots are worth about $4.25 to $4.35, and second pots around $3.90 to $4.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR—The market is quiet on the whole with an easier feeling. Spring wheat flour is quoted at a wide range of prices with an easier feeling all around. We quote as

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER—The market is steady for choice fresh and fancy creamery, but the great bulk of the offerings are dull and hard to dispose of. The quality of butter coming forward has certainly been inferior, on account of the drought. Some Manitoba creamery has come to this market and has sold at 17 to 17½c. It is solid boring, but poor flavor. Local fancy creamery is worth 20½ to 21c., and second grade, 19 to 19½c.

CHEESE—A year ago finest cheese was worth 11½ to 11¾c. on this market, and was active at the price; to-day it is slow, at 9¾ to 9½c. The country markets have mostly gone at 9 to 9¼c. Stocks in the city amount to about 400,000 boxes.

OFFICE OF THE CANADIAN GROCER.

ST. JOHN, N.B., September 12, 1901.

THERE is fair business. Markets are firmly held with but few exceptions. The new system of selling sugar continues to be a matter of interest. As it only went into force on September 1 it is early to speak of results, but the movement has many strong supporters. These feel that as the plan has been worked for years in the United States and Ontario markets successfully it can be worked with equal success here. In prices the more marked change of the week is in barley, but many lines are higher, such as gallon apples, evaporated apples, butter, cheese and barrelled pork and beef. The weather continues warm and dry.

OIL—In burning oil sales are very large. This is perhaps the busiest season of the year; at least it is as far as the salesman is concerned. Prices are lower than last fall. Market is steady. In lubricating oil this is the quiet season. Values are firm. Cod oil holds quite high, prices being higher than at this time last season. The receipts are at least no greater than last year, when there was not enough to last, so the high prices will likely hold. Candles and wax are unchanged. Candles are rather lower than last year.

SALT—In Liverpool coarse salt there is a fair stock held, but some 7,000 bags are shortly due. No further shipments are expected for some time. Prices are rather firmer. There has been a particularly good demand. Fine salt is unchanged. We quote as follows: Liverpool coarse, 56 to 58c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1; Canadian fine, $1 per bag; cheese and butter salt bulk, $2.40 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $2.85 to $2.90 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.70 to $2.75 per bbl., 20 lb. wood boxes, 22c. each; 10-lb. wood boxes, 14c. each; cartons, $2 per case of 2 doz.; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per doz.; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

GREEN FRUITS—Bananas have been out of the market for a few days, but dealers are again supplied. Owing to the many other fruits offering there is rather less demand. The first West Indian oranges were received during the past week. The quality was good. In Californian fruits, receipts are small. A few oranges, pears and peaches are being received. Eastern barrel pears arrive freely, but much of the stock is very poor. For best goods full prices are asked. Some good Nova Scotian stock has been received. Canadian peaches are to hand. Stock is rather ripe and prices are quite high. Ontario grapes are freely received, and prices tend lower. In plums, Nova Scotian stock supplies the trade. Prices are quite low. American and New Brunswick apples have the sale. Nova Scotian stock is not yet received. It is said the crop there is about 75 per cent. Owing to a shortage west prices will be high.

DRIED FRUITS—Raisins are the topic of interest. Some new Valencias are daily expected. Dealers have done very little in regard to fall stocks. A few Malagas, 3-crown loose 50 lb. boxes, have been bought. prices are quite low. At present quotations they will cost about 2c. less than Californian 3 crown did at the opening price of last season. Californian prunes will be higher than last year, particularly small sizes, which are used here. Evaporated apples are very light and high prices are expected. Dried are firmly held.

CANNED GOODS—There is little of interest. In vegetables, prices are quite well maintained, considering the old stock held. Prices, however, show no profit, either on the cost of last year or of new goods this year. While peas are higher in the west, local prices are little changed. In fruits, pears are freely offered. Strawberries are unchanged. Peaches are higher. Gallon apples are much firmer, and higher prices are looked for. Blueberries are scarce. In lobsters, the market is hardly as firm. American meats are somewhat easier, though bacon has been advanced. Salmon and local fish are unchanged.

PRODUCE—Eggs, while rather firmer show little change. Both receipts and sales are light. The warm weather affects business. Butter is coming in rather more freely as price advances. The output in New Brunswick will be light. In cheese, factories complain very much of a shortage of milk. Prices are rather higher.

SUGAR—The selling of sugar on the card price, which means all Canadian sugar offered by the different dealers, quoted the same at any point for the same grade, causes a firmer market and rather higher figures. In yellows, but two grades are offered.

MOLASSES—In local market the situation is unchanged. The bulk of the stock held is Porto Rico, and some further arrivals are expected. Sales are light. Some Barbadoes is offered, but little of any other grade is here.

FISH—In dry cod, prices are rather easier. The higher figures earlier in the season caused too free receipts for present demand, and prices went off. Season is yet early. Dry pollock are dull. New smoked herring are quite freely received. While prices are about as for sometime past, the tendency is easier. It is expected the supply will be better than last year. Pickled herring are rather lower, but stock is good. In pickled shad, the supply will be very small and price high. All fresh fish is scarce. We quote: Large and medium dry cod, $3.25 to $3.50; small, $2.50 to $2.60; haddies, 5 to 5½c.; smoked herring, 12 to 13c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.50 to $1.60 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $1.75 to $1.85 per half bbl.; Canso herring, $5 per bbl., $2.75 halves; Shelburne, $4.50 per bbl.; $2.25 per half bbl.; shad, 10 to 12c.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL—In flour there is but a fair movement. There is little change, but prices quite firm. Cornmeal is held at the high prices and does not move as freely. In oats, new are quoted rather below prices which have ruled. Oatmeal is also rather easier. In beans, new are offered well under present prices, and local market is dull. Sales are light. Barley has advanced and split and blue peas are held at high prices. We quote as follows: Manitoba flour, $4.60 to $4.70; best Ontario, $3.90 to $4.00; medium, $3.60 to $3.70; oatmeal, $4.15 to $4.20; cornmeal, $3.00 to $3.10; middlings, $22 to $23; oats, 45 to 48c.; hand-picked beans, $2.50 to $2.55; prime, $2.40 to $2.45; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3.00; split peas, $4.50 to $4.55; barley, $4.10 to $4.20; hay, $12 to $14.

J. Hunter White, representing Jose Segalerva, Malaga, is offering loose muscatels and other grades of Malaga fruit at low figures. The firm feeling causes the opinion that Californian raisins will open quite high, and leads to business in the above.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

WINNIPEG, September 9, 1901.

THE weather has been fine all week, with a few local showers, but nothing to hinder the finishing of harvesting or threshing operations. Wheat is being delivered at country elevators at the rate of 100,000 bushels per day, but in a day or so these receipts will be double. Sufficient threshing has been done to settle the question of the amount of crop, and grain men are now confidently figuring on 50,000,000 bushels. The price is also good, being 67c. at closing to-day for number 1 hard. Nearly two-thirds of the wheat already marketed has gone No. 1 hard. There is a marked contrast between the tone of business to day and that of a corresponding date last year, when almost every mail brought cancellation of orders or curtailments. Now repeat orders are coming in every day and wholesale houses are working overtime to fill orders. The large number of cattle being shipped is also putting a lot of money in circulation. There are few changes of price to note for the week.

FLOUR—A good trade has been done all week and prices remain firm at last week's figures: Lake of the Woods, Five Roses, $2.00; Red Patent, $1.85; Medora, $1.45; XXXX, $1.15. Ogilvies, Hungarian patent, $2; Glenora patent, $1.85; Alberta, $1.65; Manitoba, $1.50; Imperial XXXX, $1.15.

CEREALS—Demand in all lines is normal and no change in prices. It is to be noted, however, that white beans are easier in tone, no change having taken place in prices.

DRIED AND EVAPORATED FRUITS—New Valencia raisins (Denia fruit) are due to arrive in 10 days. Price for first shipments will probably be $2.25 per box for fine oft-stalk, but the crop is plentiful, so that lower prices may be looked for. It is probable that Valencias will be cheaper than muscates. New currants will not arrive for another three weeks. Late reports indicate a large crop of a better sample than at first estimated.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Have made another advance, and are now quoted at 10½c. Supplies are scarce.

CANNED GOODS—Market in all lines is firm. Raspberries have advanced, and are quoted at $3.25, being an advance of fully 20c. per case on the opening price here. We quote: Strawberries, $3.25; corn, $1.95; peas, $1.90; and tomatoes, $2.20 to $2.25 per case.

SUGAR—Very active demand and prices firm and unchanged.

CANNED SALMON—New salmon is expected to arrive shortly and prices are not so high as at first quoted. It now seems fairly certain that prices will not be as high as at first predicted. Sockeye talls will probably open at $6 and cohoes at $5, while for humpback salmon $4.50 will be the idea.

GREEN FRUITS—The market is fairly well supplied and sales average about two cars per day of mixed varieties. There is an especially active demand for all classes of preserving fruits. Ontario plums are arriving in very unsatisfactory condition, but the tomatoes and pears in 20 lb. baskets are good, and find ready purchasers. A few Ontario grapes in 10-lb. baskets arrived by express and are in excellent condition. Prices are about as follows: Oranges, $4 to $6, according to variety; lemons, $6; peaches, $1.50 per crate; Washington plums, $1.35; Californian silver prunes, $1.75; gross prunes, $2; Tokay grapes, $4; Ontario grapes in baskets, 75c.; Ontario pears, in baskets, 75 to 90c.; Ontario tomatoes, in baskets, 50c.; Ontario apples, in bbls., $5; Washington pears, in boxes, $3; Californian pears, $4.

VEGETABLES—Owing to short crop in United States, American buyers are making vigorous bids for potatoes, one firm asking for the tender of 30 car loads. Our crop here is good, but not abnormal, so the price of "murphies" is likely to rule high during the coming winter.

BUTTER—Creamery butter is plentiful and not in very active demand, prices still ranging from 16¼ to 16½c. at the factories. Nearly all purchases are going through to Montreal. In dairy butter the supply is liberal and the quality inferior. Prices range from 11 to 11½c. net Winnipeg.

CHEESE—The demand is fair and the supply rather small, for the time of the year. Prices run from 7¼ to 7¾c., according to quality, while 8c. was paid for two lots during the week. This was for immediate local consumption.

EGGS—The supply is fair, but the quality is inferior. Price, 13c. Winnipeg.

NOTES.

Mr. T. Brough, formerly with Scott & Chambers, Hamiota, has taken a position of manager in charge for Fairly Bros., of Carberry.

Much sympathy is felt here for Mr. J. S. Jones, manager for the McCredy Manufacturing Co., on the sudden death of his wife during his temporary absence from the city. They had been married less than a year.

Mr. W. S. Lazier, salesman for the District of Alberta for the National Cash Register Co., returned from an extended holiday in the east on Saturday and leaves for the west on Tuesday.

HOW HE RATTLED THE CONDUCTOR.

A BIG, good-natured-looking Irishman boarded a street car and took a seat far in the front. He showed evidences of being a hard-working citizen in his clothing and the smudge on his face and hands. In his mouth he wore his treasure, a black, short pipe, which showed evidence in its color and in its pungent odor of months of tender nursing and petting.

The conductor saw the pipe. The rules said: "Three seats in the rear for smokers." The man with the pipe was three seats from the front. The ire of the transit company's retainer rose accordingly. He was a bit of an Irishman himself.

"D'y know th' rules of the company?"

"Oi do not."

"Can't ye read?"

"Oi kin not."

"No schmokin'."

"Who's a schmokin'?"

"Ye've yer poipe in yer mouth."

"Oh, have Oi! Oi've me shoes on me fate, too, and Oi ain't walkin'."

"The conductor retired temporarily defeated in the battle of wits. Presently he came back to the assault.

"Did Oi get yer fare?"

"How do Oi know if you got it or dhe company? Shure Oi didn't hear ye ring up."

The conductor was so "rattled" this time that he rang up four transfers instead of the four nickels that he had collected.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Innes, of The Simcoe Canning Co., was calling upon his Montreal customers this week.

S. Davis & Sons, cigar manufacturers, Montreal, are opening a branch factory at 56 Colborne street, Toronto. Only high-class cigars will be made.

The grocery store of Arthur Coulbeck, Brantford, Ont., was entered last week, the safe opened and goods scattered about generally. The thieves secured little cash and did not take away much goods.

PROPER HANDLING OF HAMS AND BACON.

WHERE hams are to be wrapped in paper, it is important that a careful selection of the wrapping material be made. All papers, although they may have the glazed appearance when applied, do not show the same result. A little experience might illustrate this best. On a visit to one of our distributing stations in Portland, Me., I found the workman busy picking small pieces of paper from the hams, the pieces being the size of a dime, on the average, and tightly embedded into the meat surface to such an extent that rubbing them with a cloth did not remove them, and the picking off of each individual piece was necessary. On a consignment of 200 or 300 hams this was

A SERIOUS QUESTION.

It was found that this was from the paper wrapped around in the packing house. A new brand of paper, which was supposed to be a great improvement over the old kind, was introduced. We took an ordinary piece of paraffine parchment and tried it in grease, and found that it would go to pieces the same as it had done on the hams. While water produced no effect on the paper, when grease came in contact with it, it was destroyed after a few hours' contact.

A SERIES OF EXPERIMENTS

were started to see what paper could be used, and the result was that fully half the paper offered for the purpose was useless. Finally a paper was found that was quite soft in its make up, and would resist the action of grease from the hams. I regret that I do not know the brand of this paper, but it stopped a large amount of labor at the receiving end of the shipments, and the writing of many sharp letters from the sales end.

THE MAKING OF PICKLE

for curing hams and bacon is an important part of the industry. A tank of from 240 to 400 cubic feet capacity is filled with salt, through which a stream of water is kept running. An overflow pipe, which has its connection an inch or two from the bottom, permits the brine to flow away. The law of specific gravity, which carries all liquids at their level, due to their own weight, brings the brine of the greatest strength to the bottom of the tank, and from here it flows into a second tank, clear brine. There is another law of nature, which is not generally known, and that is that water at 60 degrees temperature, Fahrenheit, takes up its greatest amount of salt, and as it varies from this, either hot or cold, it deposits the salt in the bottom of the receptacle; therefore, when we wish the brine to stand at 100 degrees on "Baume" scale of solution we must have a temperature of 60 degrees Fahrenheit. We cure hams at a temperature of 40 degrees Fahrenheit; therefore, use a salt solution of 84 degrees "Baume," as all salt that has been held above this amount has precipitated and settled to the bottom.

After the brine solution is complete and has settled into the second tank, it is strained to take out any particles of dirt held in suspension, and then sugar is added to make the sweet pickle. Formerly fine granulated white sugar, such as we are familiar with on our tables, was used; but within a few years the introduction of saccharine has been made, and has driven out to a great extent the use of sugar. One of the chief reasons that saccharine was successful was on account of its economy. After the pickling has been completed there is a large quantity of the water left; in fact, all the water, with a reduction of probably 25 per cent. of the sugar and salt originally put therein. This brine becomes "ropy," and if used too long will become sour. It may be used again by reboiling and then cooling it. One packing house which is more advanced than its neighbors, has erected for the cooling of this brine. Starting with a temperature of 180 deg., the brine is brought to 70 deg. in one cycle through the blower, and thereafter it is cooled to 40 deg. by being brought in contact with coils in which ammonia gas is being circulated. During this clarifying and cleansing process the brine must necessarily be brought to its original strength, both of salt and sugar. Usually this brine is used the second time for the curing of bacon, and finally it finds its last resting place in the sewer, still loaded with sugar and salt, and in addition thereto the germs which produce the serious fungi growth which is so harmful in its results to the packing house industry. Cleanliness in all this operation is imperative. I believe my readers comprehend that does not come from the love of keeping clean, but from the necessity of checking any possible chance for germinating the fungi which come in a thousand different forms and mean destruction to the product being manufactured. The germinating seeds can easily be destroyed, either by washing with hot water or by a generous use of whitewash made of strong slaked lime and water; this to be applied to the ceilings, walls, posts, and a good, liberal spitting on the floor. The tanks or hogsheads holding the pickled meat receive a good scrubbing with a brush and water in which a strong solution of washing soda has been placed. This cleaning process should be done at the terminating of each pickling before a new lot of meat is put into the tanks or pickling vats. In preparing bacon, care must be taken to have the pieces all of one size, so that they may be sliced and the pieces put into paper boxes holding 1 lb., each package being wrapped up in paraffine paper.

THE SLICING

is done by machine knife, and all strips of bacon brought to one size by a power press operated by air pressure. Bacon prepared in this way will bring 5 to 8c. per lb. more than when sold in strips, principally because the householder does not want to trouble himself to slice the meat, and also because all pieces of bacon so sliced become of even thickness and are cooked in the pan uniformly.

In shipping hams before being wrapped, the branding machine comes in place, and the strips of bacon, which are sold in large pieces, are also branded. To the uninitiated this seems to be an advertisement, and unquestionably a great benefit comes from it, but to the owner and superintendent more importance than advertisement attaches to this branding. The question of being able to identify their own product is an important one. In all cases where there are manufactured goods of a perishable nature, it is customary for the maker to guarantee his goods, and if a piece of bacon becomes or a ham becomes filled with "skippers," the pieces are returned with a blessing from the purchaser. Boston and New York packers have repaid many a ham or bacon sale where the meat was shipped from a western house. The long time of shipments gave a chance to change the meat and a dealer who would swear point blank that these hams came from an eastern house, the house, rather than lose a customer, would refund the amount of money laid out in the sale. The branding machine stopped this abuse, and placed the loss where it belonged. It is needless to say that the branding of meats originated in the eastern cities.—Francis H. Boyer in Ice and Refrigeration.

The contract for the new million-bushel elevator which the Montreal Harbor Commissioners propose erecting in Montreal harbor has been let to J. O. Jamieson, of Montreal, for $642,000.

TEA AND CASTE.

A CORRESPONDENT of Commercial Intelligence writes: "One of the forms to be taken by Lord Curzon's movement for extending the sale of Indian tea, we are told, is the creation of a taste for it among over 160 million native railway passengers. The tea offered them must obviously be ready for immediate use, it must be in the cup, or, to put the matter differently, cooked. Now this is where the difficulty comes in. The Indian, so long as his provisions are raw, takes little heed of the hands through which they pass, and is content to know that nothing he considers unlawful is mixed with them; it is only when they approach the fire that he surrounds himself with precautions, dictated to him by his caste. The hawker of Cashmere shawls, for instance, sends his coolies to buy his flour and curry-stuffs where they please; but the moment he sets about making his chupatties ready for cooking he orders the men to stand off lest they should contaminate his food. So it is again with the meal given in the South to all comers on the occasion of religious festivals; while pariah women may sift the rice and peel and cut up the raw vegetables, none but high caste persons must approach the seething cauldrons under penalty of the dole being refused by everyone save the lowest of the low. You may also see a free drink of boiled milk or whey offered to all and sundry at a railway station, but by Brahmins alone. It would be a mistake fatal to the success of the industry if the usual refreshment-room attendants, naturally drawn from the classes that serve Europeans, were employed to press cups of tea upon natives. Machinery is to be erected at Delhi to show that there is nothing contrary to caste notions in the compression of brick tea, which, after all, is sold uncooked in the bazaars. It is far more necessary to render tea in the cup acceptable at the stations by entrusting its distribution to high caste men."

HANDSOME NEW QUARTERS.

This week, Mr. E. D. Marceau has moved into his new quarters that he has been having fitted up for him at the corner of St. Paul and St. Gabriel streets, and we are not diverging a particle from the truth when we say he now has one of the neatest and most convenient warehouses on Montreal's famous wholesale street. The renovation that has gone on under Mr. Marceau's supervision has made this warehouse thoroughly modern, light and cosy in appearance and supplied with all the conveniences such a business can require. It is a four-storey building with a basement. With the trade, we wish Mr. Marceau all success at his new address, where, no doubt, he will sustain his reputation of being one of our most enterprising tea and spice merchants.

John R. Jackson, who has for some years been head clerk in The City Grocery Co.'s store, Vancouver, has bought out John Ker, 626 Westminster avenue, Vancouver.

THE PROVISION TRADE.

The Markets—Good Meat at Two Cents per Pound—Miscellaneous Notes.

GOOD MEAT AT TWO CENTS PER POUND.

ONE of the most promising branches of business in Paraguay is that of cattle breeding, because of the splendid quality of the pastures and because the country is one of the best watered in the world. The northern part of the republic is especially promising for starting cattle farms, as land there is of good quality and cheap. The cost of one square Spanish mile of land measuring 4,300 meters on each side is $1,000.

Meat is cheap, perhaps cheaper than anywhere else on earth, since a bullock four years old is worth only $10 in gold. The hide, tallow and grease being valued at one-half that sum, there remains say $5 as the value of from 300 to 350 pounds of meat, being less than two cents per pound for meat of the best quality without bones. Under these circumstances, it is evident that it would be a most profitable business to establish a meat preserving factory for the manufacture of extract of beef, and of salted beef for the Brazilian and Cuban trade, where many thousands of tons of the last-named article are consumed annually by the native people.

Because of such an abundance of cheap meat, and desirous of encouraging the meat preserving industry, the Government of Paraguay has lately passed a law providing for the introduction, free of duty, of all things necessary for equipping such a factory, provided for the small export duty of 15c. gold on the finished product of each bullock or cow. Wages are exceedingly low. The present pay for a good laborer is but $5 gold per month, or 15c. per day, including board.

ROAST MUTTON, RAW IN 2-LB. CANS.

The cans used for this are generally 2-lb. tall cans and are prepared with pressure by water process.

The mutton for canning is prepared by removing all the large bones from it, but leaving small bones with the meat, these bones being in pieces sufficiently small to allow their being stuffed into cans. When the fresh meat is placed on the tables preparatory to putting into cans, a small quantity of salt is sprinkled over the fresh, raw meat. In small cans, such as the 2-lb. the mutton is stuffed into the cans raw while for the larger cans, as the 6-lb., the meat is blanched for five or six minutes. The cans are capped after filling, the centre vent being left open as usual. The 2-lb. cans are then processed in the retort for one hour at 1c.-lb. pressure. The pressure is allowed to exhaust after the required period for processing, the cans withdrawn on the trays, and the vents quickly stopped.

The cans are again returned to the retort and are boiled off for one hour at 12 pounds' pressure.

In handling this article care should be taken not to open the cans too soon. Like canned roast beef, the cans are showered with cold water in the shower room until cool, after which they are put through the usual washing process, etc. The same care must be exercised here, as in the case of the roast beef cans, regarding having good, strong cans and caps.

The meat is stuffed into cans in the same manner as the raw beef, in canned roast beef, a machine operated by foot-power being employed. In this canning where a strong pressure is used, it is necessary and very essential to have the retort cover or door well and evenly bolted down tight.—National Provisioner.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

We quote as follows: Dressed hogs, $9.25 to $9.50 per cwt.; mutton, $5.50 to $6.50 per cwt.; lambs, 8 to 9c. per lb.; beef carcasses, $7.50 per cwt. for best and $6 to $7 for mediums; hind quarters, 8 to 9c. for best; fore quarters, 4½ to 5½c. for best; calves, $8 for best and $6 to $7 for mediums.

Almost every line is from ¼ to ½c. higher, and the market is firm since the advance. We quote: Long clear bacon, 11½ to 12c. Smoked meats: Breakfast bacon, 15c.; rolls, 12½c.; small hams, 14c.; medium hams, 14c.; large hams, 13c.; shoulder hams, 12c.; backs, 15c. Barrel pork—Canadian heavy mess, $20.50; Canadian short cut, $22. Lard—Tierces, 11¼ to 11½c.; tubs, 11¾c.; pails, 12c.

MONTREAL.

"Anchor" brand of compound lard was advanced another 5c. this week, which gives one an indication of the tendency of the market. Its strength is its chief feature. The demand remains fairly active for smoked meats. We quote: Heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $22.00; Chicago clear pork, $24.00 for heavy and $23.50 for medium; selected heavy short cut mess pork, boneless, $22.00 to $23.00; hams, 13c.; bacon, 15.; lard, pure Canadian, $2.40 to $2.45; per pail; refined lard compound (Fairbank's), $1.92 for 1 to 24 pails; $1.90 for 25 to 49 pails; $1.88 for 50 pails and over; Snow White and Globe compound, $1.65 per pail; Cottolene, 9½c. per lb. in tierces, and 10½c. in 26-lb. pails, and 10¼c. in 50-lb. boxes, for Quebec.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

Barrelled pork is very firm at high prices. Sales are light. They are governed by actual needs. Beef is also rather higher, but has not advanced equal to pork. Lard is still very high, with the sale fair.

WINNIPEG.

Cured meats are very firm at last week's quotations. Lard advanced 10c. the 20-lb. pail, and is now quoted at $2.45.

The new canning factory at Brooke, Ont., will probably start operations this week.

A new grocery and provision store has been opened in Georgetown, Ont., by L. Spence.

Ed. Kelly, grocer, Sarnia, Ont., has given up his retail business and will engage in a commission business.

John Woodman, an employe of The Somerville Canning Co., Hamilton, was caught by the police in an attempt to give away some of the company's goods to two of his friends.

TORONTO CATTLE MARKET.

The sub-committee of the Property Committee of the Toronto City Council have prepared a report advising improvements and enlargements to the Toronto Cattle market, which are estimated to cost over $25,000. The report states that the cattle market at present comprises eleven and one-half acres, with accommodation in the annex for 1,000 cattle and 2,500 hogs, and in the market proper for 2,246 cattle and 2,500 sheep, or altogether a storage capacity for cattle on market days of 164 cars. The largest receipts on any day this year were 104 cars.

The report recommends that four additional acres be secured and large sheds be erected thereon, giving room for 1,000 more cattle. It is also proposed to make new arrangements for keeping the market clean; that the weigh scales be removed to a more central location; that the present offices and caretaker's cottage should be removed to the north side of Wellington avenue, thus giving room for 100 more cattle, and that proper receiving yards be constructed alongside the G.T.R. The committee, in conclusion, recommended that an interim appropriation of $10,000 be made to proceed with the work.

COURTESY TO CUSTOMERS.

IN this boasted and boastful age when by-products of every sort are being converted into cold cash, a man ought to investigate himself occasionally to see if anything is going to waste which might be utilized. Courtesy has a commercial value as much recognized and sought after as capital, and yet some men are not cultivating it but let the opportunity go to waste, while they are growling at fortune's scanty favors. In fact, courtesy has a value above cash, for you cannot go into the market and buy it with money or its equivalent. If the commercial agencies rated men correctly they would invoice their moral and mental qualities just as much as their stock, fixtures and accounts.

The entries might appear something like this in the scale of 100:

Honesty, 75 per cent.

Executive ability, 90 per cent.

Courtesy, 95 per cent.

And so on through the list of attributes which make up a man's character.

It is a fact that a man's reputation for honesty and ability enters largely into his rating, and justly so, and yet I know men with a fair amount of both and a stack of dollars on top of them, who failed because they were cranky, or crabbed, or unpleasant to deal with.

Courtesy in business ought to be regarded as much of an asset as honesty, and among employes it ought and does in many places command a premium in the shape of higher salary or advancement in position.

I know of a popular restaurant, made so not because they serve better or more appetizing dishes than others, but the proprietor is a brisk, genial man, welcoming his guests with an appreciative word, and his waiters are polite and pleasant and really seem to belong to the same race of people as yourself, while the cashier is so affable that all through the meal you anticipate the pleasure of paying her.

It is evidently no accident that these people are associated in business together, but the proprietor knows that people come again to a place made pleasant and attractive by courteous treatment. The general public will even go to considerable personal inconvenience and overlook many objectionable features for the sake of dealing with one who succeeds in pleasing them. I knew a man whose business did not seem to suffer in the least because of his sharp practices because he had such a frank, friendly manner that people would rather be swindled by him than treated fairly by his less courteous competitors. Now, this is not an argument for winning manners and dishonest practices, but an illustration of what can be, done notwithstanding a known reputation for trickery. Add to the courteous treatment the most unimpeachable honesty and the combination is doubly strong.

As an illustration of how much the ladies are influenced by the bearing of those who serve them, two women sitting near me in a railroad car were telling their troubles. The older lady was complaining, apparently with some cause, of the treatment she had received from the ticket agent and the inconvenience it had caused her. On account of that the entire system from section hands to general manager was condemned, a boycott declared, and when she reached the home of her friend, who was an official of the road, it was promised that the offending ticket agent should be punished in a manner befitting his offence! And the younger woman opined that such employes ought to lose their positions. It is a "dead" certainty that the railroad or the store which allows its employes to be disobliging to its patrons is going to lose its patronage and the lady patrons will be the first to go.

It may be that a railway company can exist without its lady patrons, I don't know about that, but I do know that a merchant who loses his lady customers may as well close his doors. The women are the principal buyers of merchandise, whether they hold the purse or not.

I have often seen that demonstrated. A man may look at goods and partially select what he thinks necessary, but if he does, he will usually say, "I will have my wife call and look at them before you send them up," and when he comes with her to show her what he has selected, she will say with the utmost unconcern, "O, that isn't what I want at all," and calmly proceed to make her own selections. It is because ladies are the largest patrons of the store and because they are easily attracted or repelled by the manner of the salesman, that no merchant can afford to ignore the business value of courtesy.—Uncle Reuben in Furniture Journal.

VISIT FROM A KINGSTON GROCER.

Mr. W. Hobart Dyde, president of the Retail Grocers' Association, Kingston, Ont., and a member of the firm of James Redden & Co., of that city, has been spending a few days at the Pan-American and Industrial Expositions. He left Toronto, on his return home, on Monday night. Mr. Dyde is an enthusiastic association man, and while in Toronto spent some time interviewing officers of the local association with a view to exchanging ideas on association work. The Kingston association, which is in its first year, is doing fairly, but Mr. Dyde believes it can do better. If it does not it is not likely to be any fault of his.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch.

Your idea may be that all starch is starch and that your customers won't detect even a slight difference in quality. You may think that because there is a cent or two extra profit on "Mushroom" brands (that come and go), you can retain the confidence of your trade—it doesn't pay to trifle with the confidence that a customer has in you and your goods.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch is as staple as flour. In the name there is the fame of nearly half a century. In the making there is the skill of long experience combined with honesty of purpose and unequalled manufacturing facilities. Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch represents the highest type of perfection there is or can be in starch. Kegs of 100-lbs.—handsome enamelled horse-shoe tins holding 6-lbs.—handsome 1-lb. packages that give a touch of life and color and "go" to a grocer's shelves.

A Good Story

We haven't any funny yarn to spin, but we think there is a pretty good story for every grocer to know about Tillson's Pan-Dried Rolled Oats. They are at present sold in bulk only, and any grocer can build up a trade on bulk sales, which he can secure no other way and make more money, too, if he will.

It cannot be done by substituting some other kind and trying to palm them off as Tillson's, or "just as good."

It is possible for an enterprising grocer to make his store famous as the place in his town at which good cereals can always be procured.

Are you not yet convinced that Tillson's "PAN DRIED" ROLLED OATS are in a class by themselves? Let us submit some evidence—there is more to this story—it will be continued.

DON'T RUN CHANCES

of losing the trade of good customers by offering for sale teas claimed to be just as good as Japan. The standard tea of the American and Canadian people is Japan Tea. It is perfectly natural that it should be, and that tea experts should pronounce it to be the purest, most invigorating, and most refreshing tea grown in the world---the soil of Japan has been favored by nature to produce this kind of tea. The dealer who keeps his trade year in and year out sells Japan Tea because it satisfies. Don't run chances of losing trade that might as well be continuously yours by offering substitutes for Japan Tea.

Buying, Handling and Selling Coffees.

ONE OF THE PRIZE ESSAYS.

By HERBERT LE ROY, Tabor, Morris Co., N.J.

THERE is no more fascinating business than trading in coffee. There is about the fragrant bean an atmosphere of romance and sentiment which, coupled with its benificent qualities, tend to win popular favor for coffee as a beverage. He who would become a successful dealer in the article must himself be a lover of coffee—a devotee, or, as some would say, enthusiast.

“Who drives fat oxen should himself be fat.” Therefore the first requisite is that the buyer should have coffee on the brain; coffee on the heart; and coffee to delight his palate.

EXPERIENCE IS THE BEST TEACHER

and where that is lacking the buyer must place confidence in someone having that qualification and trust his judgment until confidence is won in one's own ability to purchase.

As nine-tenths of Americans are fond of having the palate tickled, and seeking its gratification without regard to cost, it follows that quality must be the first consideration.

STYLE IS A FACTOR WHICH

enhances the commercial value of green coffee, but, as style is largely lost in roasting, it would be ruinous to allow it to influence the buyer too much when brought into relation with cup quality. The final test or verdict lies with the consumer, and, therefore, the retail buyer must ever keep in mind giving satisfaction to those who use coffee as a beverage. And this forces all middlemen to adopt a like policy.

It frequently happens that coffee lacking in style; off in color and irregular in size will, when roasted, possess and hence the buyer should test offerings by roasting samples; especially if coffee is purchased for merit rather than for name. A fine, well-seasoned, large bean Mexican may drink as well as a choice Mandheling Java, costing half or two-thirds more. A fine Bogota may have cup qualities surpassing East Indian growths that cost 30 to 40 per cent. more.

One of the greatest experts in the United States when asked at what price he could supply a coffee that in all respects could, when roasted, drink as well as a Padang Interior, then worth 25 cents per pound, replied, “About 14 1-2 cents.” Hence the buyer must be familiar with all growths, their style, roasting and cup qualities.

VALUE OF STYLE.

Individuals place different estimates on the value of style, which includes color and size. One may be so partial to a certain style of bean that he willingly pays 1 to 2 cents per pound more than others are willing to pay. Thus at the present moment, green Cucuta, grading good, is worth in invoices 8 1-2 cents, and yet there are invoices which command 10 and even 11 cents by virtue of superior quality and style, while not grading better than good Cucuta when cup quality is considered.

QUANTITIES TO PURCHASE.

The buyer should seek to purchase in as large lots as possible and upon the closest terms. The exception to this rule would be when the market was excited or regarded unduly high. If the buyer is a direct distributor to consumers he should buy heavily enough to have his green coffee become well seasoned and grades kept uniform. If, however, he buys roasted coffee only, then he must purchase from those jobbers or importers who appreciate quality enough to carry a large and varied stock and have retailers supplied—daily if possible with fresh roasted coffee.

VARYING STYLE AND QUALITY.

Every country and every district in every coffee-producing country produces coffee of varying style and quality. The products of no two seasons are exactly alike. Climate, soil, temperature, methods of cultivation and curing all have decided effects upon the bean, and therefore constant study and watchfulness is demanded of the buyer. All attempts to classify coffee so that buyers could purchase by simply designating grades have failed. As good a description of the different sorts as has yet been framed will be found in The Standard Dictionary, but no buyer can do justice to himself or his customers whose knowledge is not comprehensive enough to make him an independent judge.

THE ROASTING OF COFFEE.

Unless the retailer has experience in roasting it will be cheaper and results more satisfactory to employ a professional roaster. A well-seasoned bean, solid and oily and from one to two years old makes the finest roast. Avoid coffee with white, dead, sour or black beans. The use of water to give weight to the bean and improve its appearance has its advocates and enemies. It has many advantages, and no few disadvantages. The advocates of the dry roast claim the process secures finer flavor.

HANDLING COFFEE.

The buyer of green coffee must be careful to store coffee in a cool, dry place, and where it does not come in contact with articles of a pronounced flavor, as the raw bean is quick to absorb foreign flavor. The dealer in roasted coffee must buy often and keep the bean in steel bins and not have the article exposed to atmospheric influence. It should be ground as wanted, and therefore the retailer should encourage consumers to buy the whole roasted coffee and grind it as required. This insures fine flavor.

Where the roasted coffee is light in body, as Java, it should be blended with some heavier-bodied coffee, and, if possible, of similar sized bean. Blends are matters of experience and must be adapted to the taste of the community served. Tastes differ, and so much so that the lover of one sort is unsparing in condemnation of some other kind, although commercially it may have a much higher value.

This opens a great opportunity for the retailer to study varieties and their possibilities, and to provide blends which meet special requirements.

SELLING COFFEE.

If a retailer have the coffee department one of the most attractive and prominent in the store and fitted with the best steel bins, the finest mill and counter equipment. If it is desirable to display samples of the different grades use bins with a false bottom, so as to expose to the air the minimum quantity of roasted coffee. With the raw bean this precaution is not so urgent.

buyer, while he may criticize cost, will not let it stand between him and the full gratification of appetite and the reputation of his table—particularly so if he is entertaining guests, holding a reception, or giving a grand dinner.

ADVERTISE THE DEPARTMENT.

This means the dissemination of literature which will educate consumers in those things in which you should pose as an expert. This teaches consumers to appreciate the differences which establish market values so far apart as 10 and 45 cents for roasted coffee at retail, and 5 and 35 cents for the green bean.

KNOW THE TASTES OF PATRONS

and so designate the stock that buyers are practically sure to receive the same grade and at the same price every time. The retail cost should not be changed at every slight fluctuation in the wholesale market, as consumers acquire the habit of associating quality and price and become suspicious at frequent changes. When there is a break of two, three, or four cents and low prices seem likely to continue, then is the time to revise retail prices and thoroughly advertise the change and the reasons therefor.

DEMONSTRATION COUNTER.

It pays to have a demonstration counter connected with the coffee department, where coffee fresh made is served with cut sugar and pure cream. A nominal charge is better than having it served free. Serve only such coffee as is kept on sale. Then, if it is perfectly made and tickles the palate of the user, the dealer insures himself against complaints and places the consumer in a position, where, if the home-brewed coffee is unsatisfactory, suspicion is placed on the cook and not on the coffee.

CAR SHORTAGES.

As The Railway Review sees it, the frequently recurring shortage of cars during the time of heavy grain movements is most inexcusable. "It is admitted that properly employed there is an abundance of equipment in the United States to meet all the requirements of traffic, and what is true of the railroads as a whole is largely true of them as individual companies. Some few roads may be short on equipment, but, generally speaking, the roads are well supplied. The difficulty is that during the past years many practices have been allowed because of competition which were recognized as illegitimate under ordinary circumstances. Chief among these in connection with the grain traffic is the permissive holding out of cars at the markets for various purposes instead of having them immediately unloaded. This is the direct result of the sharp competition among the lines for business, and the roads now find it very difficult to abolish it. If it were possible to have car service rules impartially applied to all such traffic, a distinct advance in the proper direction would be made; or if the per diem instead of the mileage system could be adopted as between roads for the use of cars, it would go far toward wiping out the practice. A railroad would not long hold cars upon its tracks free of charge to the shipper when it was paying out a stated sum per day for thus holding it, but inasmuch as under the present system no direct money loss in the way of payment is involved less attention is paid to it; or, at least, less determined methods are in use to overcome it."

A GROCER'S TRIP TO THE YUKON.

R. J. McMILLAN, of the firm of W. J. McMillan & Co., wholesale grocers of Vancouver, returned Monday from a business trip to the Yukon Territory which extended over five weeks. Mr. McMillan left Vancouver on Monday, July 21, by the Islander. He spent 17 days in Dawson, and eight at White Horse, the latter on the way back, so that he had ample opportunity to study the prospects of the country from a trade standpoint.

In the course of a conversation with a representative of The Budget, Mr. McMillan said that Dawson had just now a population of about 4,000, composed of all kinds of people, and as for supplies, was at present overstocked. He added: "It is not satisfactory for the wholesale shipper to ship there just now, as there is a lack of confidence in buying. Many of the laboring classes are coming out to avoid the severe winter. This exodus is likely to continue annually at the close of each season, while the immigration into the country will usually begin in March and April. The only mining done in the country during the winter will be by those who have got means to carry on the work. At the time I was in Dawson several good strikes were reported in the Salmon River district. To get to this district the miners go up the Yukon and the Hootalinqua rivers and then across the divide a distance of about 20 miles to the Salmon. Nearly all the miners going there have already been in other parts of the country. There is no saying whether the miners are making much or not, as I found a tendency prevalent to keep things close. The Salmon River district is between 300 and 400 miles from Dawson City. Dawson, in my opinion, will be a good town for a number of years to come. It has already taken on the aspect of a permanent place."—British Columbia Trade Budget.

THE DELICATE COCOA TREE.

A traveler in Venezuela, where the cocoa tree is now largely cultivated, speaks of the great care with which the young plants have to be protected from the sun, which, if very strong, is fatal to them. To secure this protection the planters shield them by banana trees and plantain trees, the broad leaves of which give them the needed shade. And even when they are fully grown they need protection, which is given by trees known as "immortels," or, as the planters call them, "the mother of the cocoa." Thus, the whole cocoa plantation has a sort of canopy. The fruit of the cocoa is a pod, resembling a cucumber, which grows on the trunk or the large branches and looks as if it were stuck there by artificial means. The seeds, which are the "beans" of commerce, are like big lima beans, embedded in pulp.

RETAILERS AND CANNED GOODS.

Editor CANADIAN GROCER,—I understand the canners' combine have put a limit on the pack. Canning factories must pack only a limited quantity, a certain percentage less than last year, and if they put up more than the stipulated quantity must sell it out of the country or give it to the combine at a very reduced rate. I am not sure of the figures set down by this monopoly, but I think they intend allowing the packers 62½c. for corn and peas and 67½c. for tomatoes and 10c. per dozen less for any packed over the limit.

This sort of forced business seems to me of the cattle-driving nature, and I think retailers should discourage it all they can.

The wholesalers get their orders and the retailer is advised by the latter to hand in his order for future supply, 50, 100, or 200 cases, as the combine will advance the price every month. Thus, the retailer's capital is absorbed and he is not able to secure his discounts; gets overstocked; gets anxious; cuts prices, and perhaps finally goes to the wall.

It is not in the canned goods line alone, but in many lines that the system of overstocking occurs. Many retailers carry enough stock to run a wholesale house. And it is one of the greatest evils in the retail trade, and yet seems unavoidable. Such tempting prices, if certain quantities are taken, and if you don't buy now you will have to pay more first of the month, etc.

Retailers in Canada, I think, will do well to look into this matter. If we do not buy ahead, and the combine has to hold the stock, we will not lose by it.

They will certainly try to frighten us, but we have nothing to dread. Purchasing ahead only encourages a system that is injuring our business and every retailer should fight anything that is detrimental in a general way to the good of the retail interest.

A WATCHFUL CLERK.

Editor CANADIAN GROCER,—The article, "A Montreal Man in Switzerland," which appeared in your issue of September 6, begins with a remark which the author says was made by Queen Elizabeth. Now, for the sake of the high standing of your paper, would it not be well to correct this error? It was Queen Mary, not Queen Bess, who lost Calais, England's last French possession, and it is also to the "bloody monarch" that the famous remark quoted is attributed.

A sub-committee of the Indian Tea Association has been appointed to consider and report on the feasibility of inducing growers to manufacture green teas resembling Japans, without any mineral facing, and to make arrangements for such being bulked in Calcutta to insure greater uniformity and to enable orders to be duplicated. It seems to us that Mr. H. Drummond Deane has, singly, answered the very question that this sub-committee is to consider!—Planting Opinion, Madras.

AMONG TORONTO RETAILERS.

Cleanliness Desirable.

I had occasion to wait in a grocery store this week for about 15 minutes. The proprietor was a keen, courteous business man, who has done well. His good-nature has contributed largely to his success, but he has added materially to his net profit by careful buying. Yet his business is not what it should be. There is a class, and in many respects the most desirable class, of buyers who seldom enter his store. Why? Because his store is not nearly as attractive in appearance as several of his neighboring ones. It bears many evidences of carelessness, not only in keeping package goods, but in handling such lines as fruits, meats, cheese, etc. Much of his fruit was scattered about the floor. This, in itself, was not objectionable, as it did not interfere with the movements of either clerks or customers. But several of the baskets nearest the door contained fruit which was far from attractive, and which was offered at a low price. Such a display as this might appeal to some customers, but it could hardly fail to have a contrary affect on others. His cheese was uncovered, and several small pieces, which had hardened since they became detached, gave it a rather uninviting appearance. On his front counter were displayed two lines of package goods. One line showed considerable evidence of the fly season; the other packages were soiled in another way. The contents of these packages may have been in first-class condition, yet they, on account of their appearance, would not commend themselves to a housewife who was at all particular. And it is the particular customers who prove the good ones as a rule. Altogether the air of the store was not clean and inviting. The proprietor has about every other quality that contributes to success in the grocery business, but through the lack of care of the appearance of his store and stock he cuts himself off from a big class of good customers.

A Retailer's
Tea Room.

The reference to the tea room at Brown Bros.' store in a recent issue of this paper aroused my curiosity, and I straightway went up to have a look through it. And I was glad I did so, for the visit has served to impress upon me the importance and magnitude of the tea trade in a grocery store. Brown Bros. have a large room above their store set apart for teas exclusively. Here all their bulk and package teas are stored. I was surprised to notice what a large portion of the total stock was bulk tea.

"What proportion of your tea sales is in bulk tea?" I asked Mr. Hudson, who looks after this department.

"I should judge that from 70 to 75 per cent. of our total sales is in bulk tea," was the reply.

"How do you account for such a large proportion?" I again inquired.

"We mix our own blends, and by pushing them continually have built up an especially good trade in bulk teas. We mix our best grades in this bin (a tin about 1 foot deep and 4 by 3 feet in diameter) and the lower grades on the floor here. You see we keep everything thoroughly clean here. The few utensils employed are never used anywhere but in our tea room. Our blends are kept of uniform flavor and strength. After they are mixed they are always put in a tin and kept at least ten days so that the different grades which have been blended together will have been thoroughly assimilated. When it is ready for sale we push it. When customers want package tea we have it for them, so are generally able to please all of them. The result is that we have a good tea business to-day."

HINTS FOR MEN WHO ADVERTISE.

ADVERTISING THE OPENING OF A STORE.

TO a careful observer there can be no doubt that money invested in advertising pays enormous dividends, writes Edward L. Shaub in Grocers' Criterion. However, as in all matters, there is a certain limit that must be observed in order to secure the greatest possible benefit for the money expended. This limit is variable, depending entirely upon the nature of the business, prominence of the business man, competition, locality, etc. Our subject restricts us to the best means of advertising the opening of a grocery store.

Now, in the first place, the method would vary with the acquaintance a man had in the place. If one were well-known and had many friends an important point would be: Mr. A. will open a grocery store. Were one a stranger, the method would obviously differ. Then, again, the method would vary with the locality. What would prove most effectual in one place would hardly be practical in another. Were one to locate in a large city, circulars, billboards, handbills, etc., would prove of very little service, as but little attention is given them. Even newspaper advertising would not pay unless one were to do business on a very large scale. The sales of the large department stores would remove any inducement that might be given in regard to prices. Under these circumstances, an attractive window decoration, with large signs announcing the opening, and streamers bringing the prices of various articles to the notice of passers-by, would prove most effectual for the amount of money expended. It might be emphasized in this place that appropriate decorations should always be found, no matter where the location. Even in country stores it is essential, unless there were no competition, and even then we regard the money and labor advantageously expended; for there the artistic effect lends a pleasing contrast to the mere routine of business. There is not only the commercial, with its nervous hustle for gain, but the aesthetic, which certainly is a great attraction for city trade and cultured people generally.

In a smaller city, to the window and other decorations should be added advertisements in the local daily. The advantages are manifest. It is an index of the intelligence and zeal of the man. It identifies the business with the town, to a certain extent, at least: it brings the fact of a new store into the notice of those who live near enough by to patronize it, etc.

Thus it is clear that methods must vary as the conditions, and therefore it is only possible, in a consideration of this kind, to make a few general statements, which would apply universally, but especially to the business of a smaller town, with its country trade: and this, after all, is what constitutes the marrow of the grocery business.

1. Have an opening sale—not so much on luxuries, incidentals, or fancy goods, as on staples. Always call attention to the quality and price of such articles as tea, coffee and butter. Emphasize the fact that you carry a full, fresh, and unadulterated line of staples. Sell a man his necessities and the chances are that you gain his other trade also.

2. Some souvenir might be given, and let that also be a useful article, as well as one that is constantly before the people, i.e., a dust pan, tea caddy, coffee can, etc.

3. It would be well to give some premium for a certain amount of goods bought. I do not refer so much to the giving of tickets, which shall be redeemed by certain premiums when the amount is traded out, for good as the idea is, it would, strictly speaking, not come under the head of advertising an opening; but give some small, yet attractive present for a small purchase, say of $2 or over.

4. It would be a great attraction, and yet not much of an expense, to provide a free lunch for farmer customers. So many of them start from home early in the morning, yet hardly feel like going to a hotel or restaurant for dinner, and the fact is indisputable that the seat of good humor of many people lies in the stomach.

5. The foregoing have all been drawing cards, which must be made universally known to bring results. How best to do this? While fence and advertising billboards, etc., have their place, we do not think that they would prove very effectual for advertising an opening. The newspaper is good, and still something of a more unusual character would be better. A man might be sent out to distribute bills, but so few of them reach their destination, and unless someone can be sent who has an interest other than the immediate wages, they do not serve their purpose, but serve only as a cushion for fence posts or playthings of the winds. It would be far more effectual, and no more expensive, to send printed letters by mail, quoting prices and making known your inducements. Coming through the mail it would have much more of a personal character than any other method.

Some might conclude from the foregoing that that we do not appreciate newspaper advertising. Such is not the case. We believe it to be practicable and advisable in all cases where it comes into the hands of those who do not live too far from the business advertised. Nevertheless, we would not rely on it exclusively for an opening sale, but make use of the given suggestions.

SOME FACTS ABOUT CUTS.

These terms are applied to duplicates or original engravings.

Electrotypes are made of a kind of type metal, the surface covered with a copper to make it wear resisting. A mould is taken of the original engraving in wax, the mould covered with plumbago, polished and then a copper shell deposited on it by means of a dynamo. This shell is removed from the wax, backed up with metal, shaved down and mounted. It is usual to mount on wood, but for some purposes they are mounted on metal.

For stereotype a papier-mache mould is made of the original: this is dried and then placed in a casting box, where metal is poured on it, and in this way one or more casts are made. These casts may be made type-high for metal-base cuts, or in thin plates that are afterwards mounted on wood to give the required height.

Electrotype duplicates, except on very fine half-tones, are as good as the original cuts, as even the finest lines are preserved. Stereotypes are much less desirable for ordinary work than electrotypes, because the copper surface of the latter makes them wear several times longer than stereotypes. It is advisable to have electrotypes made of valuable cuts of any kind, and use the electrotypes for printing purposes and preserve the original engraving to have other electrotypes made from in case of accident. Electrotypes must always be ordered for wood engravings, as it is not possible to do printing in any quantity from the original wood cuts without ruining them. Printers find electrotypes a profitable investment. In long runs electrotypes of type forms are an inexpensive means of cutting down presswork or composition. The plates are then on hand ready for repeat orders, which can be turned out expeditiously and at even greater profit than the first. Selected.

THE BEAN MARKET.

The phenomenal rise in the price of beans has had a peculiar effect on some of the growers of this district. As a rule growers are not in a hurry to thresh; as the opening prices are generally weak, and growers prefer to wait for cold weather and the better prices which usually obtain. This year the situation is reversed. When old beans touched the two dollar mark it was a great incentive for growers to market the new crop, lest a slump in the market would occur. This hurry is a mistake and a serious one. The chances are ten to one the price of the new crop will be considerably higher than it now is. The United States bean crop is very light, and the winter price will be correspondingly high. Buyers are shy of handling the new crop, for if barreled so soon after harvesting and in warm weather the chances are a considerable percentage will spoil. It will pay growers to curb their impatience, thresh at the usual time, hold for the later market, and reap a full return for their crop. — Ridgerton Plaindealer, September 13.

CONAN DOYLE ON EARLY CLOSING.

The matter of shorter hours for shop assistants is one in which I take the deepest interest, believing that, in a country which has no compulsory military service, physique and well-being of members of the class to which you allude can only be guaranteed by a universal adoption of short hours and frequent holidays. Personally, I do not feel that this end can be altogether gained by legislation, but I think that the constant ventilation of this subject and the continued education of the public will prove in themselves a sufficiently irresistible force to oppose to the few remaining opponents of progress in this direction.

Yours faithfully,

A. CONAN DOYLE.

Our readers will be pleased to read the opinion of such a distinguished novelist on a question which has always been of importance to grocery clerks. A friend from England sends me the above, where they have had considerable agitation on this question, and, as a result, the grocery clerks have in many places been favored with shorter hours. They are most unfortunate over there in this respect, for the clerks work much longer than we in this country.

COUNTER CHECK BOOKS.

"P. McA." writes: Are you in favor of the use of counter check books in grocery stores?

They frequently save mistakes and most customers like to have a bill of the goods purchased. Sometimes people think they order an article from you when they really forgot to mention it, with no bill of their purchase. A week later, they come in and tell you they are sure they paid for it. Now, when they have a duplicate bill they can see for themselves just what they bought and how much they paid for each parcel. When taking orders out of the store they are almost absolutely indispensable, as they combine a bill and receipt for the customer and a check for the store.

A PATENT CHEESE KNIFE.

"George C." wants to know of a patent cheese cutting knife which cuts the exact quantity required.

I do not know of any knife of this kind. If there is one made, I should be pleased if any of our friends would inform us.

CLERKS STARTING BUSINESS.

"Grocer" says: Do not urge young men to start in business for themselves; there is not one clerk in a dozen fit to run a store, even if he had the capital. It's easy to get started in business, but mighty difficult to make it pay. These truths are becoming more apparent every day, yet they appear to be overlooked by our young men.

Our good friend will permit me to remark that this "Corner" has never advised young men to go into business until they were qualified by experience first, and capital secondly. A clerk in starting a grocery store must learn the proper way to manage a store, just as one learns anything else, and the most effective lessons are those which cost him money. He does not forget them quickly when the loss comes out of his own pocket. He finds the truth of the old expression, "experience costs money." It is admitted there is a rush of young men and others into business, and the weeding out continues to go on, and it will continue, leaving only those who are best equipped to succeed.

In The Saturday Evening Post an interesting series of letters from a Chicago pork packer to his son are appearing. The father, in telling his early experience, writes: "We started in a mighty different world, and we were all ignorant together. The Lord let us in on the ground floor, gave us corner lots, and then started in to improve the adjacent property. We didn't have to know fractions to figure out our profits. Now a merchant needs astronomy to see them, and when he locates them they are out somewhere near the fifth decimal place. There are 16 ounces to the pound still, but two of them are wrapping paper in a good many stores. There's just as many chances for a fellow as ever, but they're a little gun shy, and you can't catch them by any such coarse method as putting salt on their tails. Thirty years ago you could take an old muzzle-loader and knock over plenty of ducks in the city limits, and Chicago wasn't Cook County then, either. You can get them still, but you've got to go to Kankakee and take a hammerless along."

You see the point—the changed conditions require modern, up-to-date methods to succeed. That which answered the purpose years ago is now useless. It keeps us all agoing to try and keep pace with the rapid changes that come so quickly in all lines of trade.

THE NAMES OF CUSTOMERS.

"N.M." tells me of a bad mistake made by him which was caused by having two customers trading at the store of the same name.

Great care should always be taken where there are two or more families of the same name trading at the one store. The initials of the name must be distinctly written, and the delivery boy must be instructed which customer the goods are for, otherwise the order will probably go astray and cause annoyance and trouble, if not the loss of a customer.

STUDY FOR WINTER MONTHS.

"F. C."—After the summer's pleasures comes the fall and winter's work. Every young man should take up some branch of study for the winter, plan it out, arrange your line of work or reading, and, with the few spare hours the average clerk has at his disposal, he will be delighted with how much has been accomplished when spring comes. Some boys are planning to learn another language—French or German—others, music—any line, only do something to improve yourself and profitably employ the spare moments. The young man who is thus employed is not likely to go wrong.

REGARDING TEA AND COFFEE.

"M. G." writes: Is tea and coffee healthy?

Certainly they are. Properly made, they are most refreshing and healthful, all the faddists and cranks to the contrary, who tell you every time you drink tea or coffee you shorten your life. If we followed the dictates of these people where would we end? Some of them preaching against meat; others on all manner of fads pertaining to both eating and drinking. Be sensible, temperate in all things, even in eating and drinking. The public generally place the proper value on these things. Thus, you find the consumption of tea and coffee increasing, and the health of the public becoming better, the length of life also being prolonged. Those who sell the new health drinks now in the market seem to think it needful to abuse tea and coffee in order to sell their preparations. Most people see the game and are not misled thereby. Tea and coffee do not need our defence. The public know a good thing, and from present indications they intend to continue to drink the "cup that cheers."

BUSINESS IN MIDLAND.

Mr. Sneath, of Stafford & Sneath, of Midland, was in town this week, and had a short chat with THE CANADIAN GROCER. He reports Midland to be making great advances, and trade there is good. During the past season the tourist business of the vicinity has been more profitable than ever.

DECLINE OF 73 PER CENT. IN INDIAN TEA EXPORTS TO CANADA.

TEA exports from India to Canada direct, so far this season, were only 300,428 lb., as against 1,145,752 lb. last year.

This means a decrease of 73 per cent.

The chief cause is undoubtedly the determination on the part of the shippers to curtail the quantity of tea consigned to the Canadian market.

As everyone in the trade knows, shippers have been consigning to this market quantities of low-grade tea which were out of all proportion to its consumptive requirements. This led to teas not only being sold at a sacrifice, but being sometimes sold to people who were unable to pay for them.

One result of the losses which have been sustained through selling to irresponsible people is the fact that the banks in India now demand on drafts on Canadian account 25 per cent. of their value before they will issue them.

EARLY CLOSING AND TRADING STAMPS.

The by-law amending the Toronto early-closing by-law and the proposed trading-stamp by-law in the same city, both of which were to come up for their second reading at the meeting of the City Council on Monday, were not touched at that meeting because of the stress of other business. The Council sat from 4 p.m. till 8 p.m., without an adjournment for lunch, and so many members then left the room that an adjournment was compelled by the lack of a quorum. Both by-laws will probably come up on Monday next.

TORONTO GROCERS' HORSE RACES.

The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association has been "up against it" in their attempts to secure Exhibition Park for their horse races. The first proposal was to have the races on Wednesday afternoon, September 4, but as the Exhibition authorities were not through with the grounds they could not be secured for that date, so the races were postponed till Wednesday this week.

On Monday and Tuesday, the racetrack was covered in many places with boards from the fence about the racetrack, which the military authorities are taking down to prepare for the Duke of York reception, and it was again thought advisable to postpone the event. This time the postponement is indefinite.

SOME VIEWS ON BRITISH TRADE.

MR. J. H. MAGOR of Frank Magor & Co., Montreal, was in Toronto last week. He returned the previous week from a three months' trip to Europe, where he combined business with pleasure and had an enjoyable time.

"In my opinion," he said, when questioned by THE CANADIAN GROCER, "the fruit trade is much better looked after in Canada than in Great Britain. Fruits there are almost a luxury; here they are a necessity.

"The British manufacturers are by no means as dead as some people would have us believe," he continued, "a great many of them are very much alive. Keen's people are making an addition to their factory at a cost of £8,000. Carr & Co. have recently nearly doubled the size of their factory. The Cadbury people have put on an enormous addition to their factory."

Mr. Magor's visit to Toronto and the west was in the interest of Southwell's, Keen's, Lazebny's and Cadbury's goods, and it appears he booked some good orders.

REGULAR FISH AND OYSTER SUPPLIES.

The F. T. James Co., Limited, who recently fitted up in a modern style a large fish warehouse at 76 Colborne street, Toronto, have also completed arrangements which will enable them to supply the trade with fresh fish and oysters every day or, in fact, several times a day. The fresh-water fish come from their own fisheries, located on Georgian Bay, Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and the Manitoba lakes. Their oysters are the "extra standard" Baltimores. Though this firm is practically a new one they have already developed a large connection, and are likely to get a good share of the fish and oyster trade this winter.

THE SANCTITY OF THE CONTRACT.

WE have had drawn to our attention this week a case of wilful backing down from a contract, on account of an adverse turn of the market subsequent to the making of the bargain. Of course, the man was called a "wretch" and an "irresponsible, despicable coward," on whom must be exercised the force of the law before he will transact business squarely. To all this we might add a little of our own vituperation, were it of any use, but, as everybody knows everybody else's opinion of such a "quitter," we will refrain. Perhaps a little reason may appeal to members of such a class.

Speaking generally, the "contract" is so sacred that, either in its verbal or written form, it is recognized by law. It is illegal to steal; it is illegal to break a contract; from which men deduce that he who breaks a contract will steal. Let him who thinks of violating his contract then consider whether it would not profit him more to drop a little money than to lose his reputation. That should be the primary consideration. Men will work and advertise for years to acquire a reputation, and that man is a fool, nothing less, who will damage what assets of this kind he has for the sake of earning, in a mean way, a few paltry dollars.

He wrecks not only his own personal standing, but also that of his country. In these days of international commerce there is such a thing as national credit, as our importers well know, and it is one of the tenderest, and most easily-injured properties we have to guard. What then must our Canadian reputation suffer when one day a Canadian merchant cables an order, and 24 hours afterwards refuses the goods because the market has gone slightly contrary to his expectations? What excuse can be offered for his conduct? Simply his meanness of spirit, and, somehow or other, the whole group of importers will be stigmatized, more or less, with the false character. It's a drop of ink in a bottle of distilled water.

The sanctity of the contract is one of the fundamental principles of business, and every man of affairs, however ignorant or unbusinesslike he may be, should know enough to respect it. The contract represents a decision arrived at, and when put into this tangible form it is as irrevocable as the Roman decree. By entering into an engagement, he leads the second party to do the same and it upsets all the other's arrangements should one fail to come to the mark. It's a case of mutual confidence in which each acts as the other's keeper.

Reason, then, as well as honesty dictates the rigid observance of the contract, and we trust that any delinquent we may have on our Canadian market will see the error of his ways.

A BAD VALENCIA RAISIN SEASON.

It is to be hoped that the Valencia raisin trade for the season which has just opened will be more satisfactory for the grocers of Canada than that which it succeeds.

One of the first setbacks was the late arrival of the fruit, a great deal of it not coming forward in time for the Christmas trade. Then, consumption was checked by the high prices that ruled, so that late in the season wholesalers found themselves with heavier stocks on hand than was desirable.

And the depressing effect which this had on quotations was accentuated by shipments of low-priced fruit which was imported by some of the houses.

Prices have since been tumbling down, until to-day old fruit is being sold at figures which mean a clear loss of 85c. to $1.25 or more per box.

FRUIT INSPECTION.

IT is not surprising that at the meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association on Monday evening, there was a general expression of desire for a more thorough inspection of fruit coming into this city.

The retailers have been long-suffering indeed. From the first week when strawberries began to arrive in abundance until the present, the fruit received here has borne testimony to the diversity of the genius for deception possessed by many of the fruit packers who send fruit to Toronto. Yet there has not been a single conviction.

The sale of fruit in this country is on an altogether wrong basis. A bushel of grain or of vegetables weighs a certain amount, and authorized standards are used for measuring them. If bread and butter are sold under weight, and the seller is found out, judgment falls surely and swiftly. But what is the weight or measure for selling berries or currants? And what for peaches, pears or plums? What for canteloupes or tomatoes? The buyer must see what he is buying before he knows what is meant by the term basket. And even when he has seen it he cannot be sure of what he is getting unless he turns it upside down and sees the quality of the interior. There is absolutely no guarantee that the interior of a basket of fruit offered on the Toronto market is of the same quality of fruit as that shown on the face of the basket.

The Fruit Marks Act, which went into force on July 1, was designed to enforce honest fruit packing. But up to date nothing has been accomplished by it. On Saturday last, Professor Robertson and a number of fruit inspectors who have recently been appointed to enforce this Act, visited the Toronto wholesale fruit market and found without much searching several flagrant cases of facing: It is stated that the inspectors have instructions to deal with such cases severely.

If that be so, the sooner the better. Moreover, the volume of business done on the Toronto market is so large that an inspector should be permanently located there.

TRADE CONDITIONS IN CANADA.

THERE is very little in the trade conditions in Canada that is not of an assuring character, and nothing that need cause alarm. That which is unsatisfactory is rather local than national in its influence.

The wheat crop of Manitoba, with its size and quality, imparts to the trade conditions in that Province a brightness particularly gratifying.

From the poor crop of 1900 Manitoba emerged in a manner more gratifying than the most optimistic could have expected. A repetition of 1900, however, would have been a blow which would have done a great deal of harm to not only the "Prairie Province," but to the commercial interests of the Dominion as a whole.

It is probable that the wheat crop is very little short of 50,000,000 bushels. This alone is expected to yield the farmers at least $25,000,000 to $30,000,000. This is a large sum for one Province, with a population such as that of Manitoba, to put in circulation. But then there is besides the oat and barley crops, the latter being in the neighborhood of 6,400,000 bushels, and the former 30,200,000 bushels.

As our Manitoba correspondent pointed out last week, new wheat is coming into the country elevators at the rate of 100,000 bushels per day, while nearly two-thirds of the wheat so far marketed grades No. 1 hard, which was quoted at 69c. on Wednesday at Fort William. On the Toronto market it is quoted at 81c. at the time of writing.

In Ontario, both the cereal and the fruit crops are rather light, but, taking it all around, the agricultural conditions in Ontario are by no means discouraging. The hay and clover crops are enormous, something much to be desired in view of the heavy demand there is for live stock at highly remunerative prices.

The mining industry in British Columbia is in an unsatisfactory condition, largely on account of the labor trouble. This is having a depressing effect on trade, particularly in the Kootenay country, where the mines are practically shut down. But in spite of this, the shipments of ore from Rossland during the first six months of the year were double those of the same period in 1900, the largest previous year.

But, while the mining industry in British Columbia is unsatisfactory, there is some compensation to be found in the enormous pack of salmon that has been put up in that Province this season. At a moderate estimate the pack is worth $4,500,000.

The coal-mining industry of Canada is in a good condition, particularly in Nova Scotia. The home, to say nothing of the foreign, demand is greater than a year ago on account of the increasing requirement of our iron industries. The increase in the export trade of coal last year was $839,300, the total being $5,438,903, against $4,599,602.

Lumber is in good demand on home account, and the quietness and low prices ruling on the British market naturally have a depressing influence upon the trade here. The imports into the United Kingdom during August from all countries showed a marked falling off. From British North America the arrivals were nearly one-half less than during the same month last year. Fearnworth & Jardine, Liverpool, in their letter of September 2, say that while stocks of lumber are reduced to a moderate compass, but little change in values is to be reported.

The various manufacturing industries throughout the Dominion are busily employed, and in many of the staple lines the demand exceeds the supply. With the manufacturers busy the merchants are in a like condition as a rule.

One of the best evidences of the activity in trade in Canada is to be found in the earnings of the railways and in the clearances of the banks. These are most gratifying. The gross earnings of the Grand Trunk during the first six months of the year were larger by $724,140 than the same period a year ago, and those of the Canadian Pacific showed an increase of $402,362. That the earnings are being well maintained is evident from the returns for August, the increases compared with the same month last year being $488,000 for the Canadian Pacific and $207,295 for the Grand Trunk.

Turning to the bank clearings we find that for August they were $147,435,177, against $125,548,592 the same month in 1900. For the eight months they were $1,204,874,362, against $1,025,449,539. The latest returns we have are for the week ending September 12, and they show, compared with the same week last year, an increase of 40.5 per cent.

The export trade is still brisk. Although the total for the two first months of the fiscal year is slightly below that of the same period in 1900 in the products of the forest, agricultural products and in manufactured goods, there is an increase. The following shows at a glance the increases and decreases in the exports for the two months ending August 31 :

|--------------------------------|-------------|-------------|
| The mine.....                  | $9,611,227 | $8,015,934 |
| The fisheries.....             | 1,759,035   | 1,608,460   |
| The forest.....                | 6,735,208   | 8,112,148   |
| Animals and their produce..... | 10,438,723  | 10,101,234  |
| Agriculture.....               | 2,496,836   | 2,609,793   |
| Manufactures.....              | 1,885,759   | 2,380,715   |
| Miscellaneous.....             | 29,062      | 5,989       |

Total merchandise....$32,955,850 $32,834,273

The increase in the imports of dutiable goods was nearly $1,000,000 for the two months, the figures being $31,409,414 and $30,485,747, respectively.

TO WEIGH CHEESE AT FACTORIES.

DURING the last two or three seasons, the inspection and weighing of cheese for export has caused much trouble between the factorymen and the Montreal buyers. The custom, as is well known, has been to buy the cheese at country boards subject to weighing and inspection in Montreal. The trouble has largely been caused by the claims for shrinkage made by the dealers in the latter city, which have been considered by the factorymen to be, in many cases, exaggerated.

The Brockville Cheese Board, which took up the matter on behalf of the factorymen in the spring, sent a deputation to Montreal to look into the matter. This deputation, while agreeing that the Montreal dealers had reason to expect certain allowance for shrinkage, were not convinced that the present system of inspection and weighing was entirely satisfactory.

As a result of the agitation for a more satisfactory system, one Montreal exporting company has given out that next season it will probably send a capable man out empowered to inspect, weigh, buy and pay for cheese at the factories. This might be satisfactory to factorymen, but it would be a big undertaking for the exporting house.

TRADE IN COUNTRIES OTHER THAN OUR OWN.

LOS Angeles mail advices on oranges report the market weak and lower, most of the fruit showing losses. "There is," the advices state, "practically no demand f.o.b., most of the fruit being shipped going to the auction markets. The supply remaining is estimated at about 75 carloads of Valencias and a scant 25 carloads of other varieties. Almost all of these are controlled by three or four firms. A good market is looked for toward the end of the month."

A decline of 5s. per cwt. in new Sultanhas has been established in London, Eng., since the first arrival, and a distinctly better demand from the country is apparent in consequence. The decline has not extended to the same extent in old fruit, for which, however, the market is also in buyers' favor.

CANNED SALMON ON THE U. S. COAST.

Regarding salmon, The Trade Register, Seattle, in its recent issue says: "At Seattle there is a decided feeling that the market is strong and is likely to be higher. The low figures put out by some concerns on salmon have, of course, caused large sales, but those who have not forced matters on the low basis say there is no reason for it; that salmon will be strong in the spring; that next year there will not be a heavy run, and this year's pack unsold can be carried into next year and money made. In fact, it looks as if the cannery would be the speculator and not the buyer this season. The pack on Puget Sound is growing bigger, sockeye still being caught, and 1,250,000 cases will not more than cover the total spring pack. The Pacific Packing & Navigation Co. has packed fully 480,000 cases on Puget Sound. Alaska direct advices indicate a full pack to the west and a less prosperous condition to the southeast. Movement of new season salmon to the east commenced late last week."

CANNED FRUITS IN CALIFORNIA.

Referring to can fruits, The Fruit World says: "The most notable feature of the season in this line is the absence of British or foreign demand, owing to the large purchases and their late arrival in those markets last year, which practically turned purchase into advances for this season. There is, therefore, a possibility of some later purchases by that market to fill, but only a possibility. Probably the bulk of the demand for Californian canned fruits has been met this year, but there will be considerable trading yet. The temporary rise in the price of apricots has receded, but peaches are firm."

CALIFORNIAN RAISIN SITUATION.

A press despatch from Fresno, Cal., says: "The outside raisin packers continue buying on basis of 3½c. and declare they will continue doing so. Association interference to the contrary, notwithstanding. The directors of The Packers' Association are holding an important meeting. They assert that the growers' acreage secured is but 37 per cent. of 75 per cent., or 22 per cent. of the whole. It is understood that The Growers' Association is inclined to abrogate the existing contract with the packers, so the latter are proceeding to protect themselves. Association directors are now more sanguine. They say the percentage of signatures has increased. There seems no doubt the association will continue. No buying is probable until after the meeting on September 19."

CURRENTS IN LIVERPOOL.

The new season's trade in currants commenced late in the afternoon of Tuesday, the 3rd inst., and the time for doing business was so very short that, in the anxiety to get a small variety to offer in the country, dealers in several instances paid above the value of the fruit. This was shown by the course of the market on the following day, when prices quickly settled down, and, as the response from the country trade was distinctly below expectations, holders pressed sales, with the result that the poorer qualities now show a decline of quite 4s. from the opening. Medium Vostizza is from 2 to 3s. cheaper; the finest qualities are practically unchanged, and specialties are in request at full prices. Much of the fruit is very good in quality and appearance, but in the lower grades there is a considerable proportion of rain-damaged.—Produce Markets' Review, September 7.

CANNED SALMON IN ENGLAND.

The improvement in the demand for salmon continues, and quotations, if anything, are a shade easier. Although the new pack is a large one, it must not be overlooked that shipments to any extent will not arrive here before next March, and as available stocks on the spot are less than they have been for years, it is a question whether prices have not already fallen lower than what the position warrants. Quotations at the present moment are most reasonable and tempting, and reliable brands are certainly worth attention. Unfortunately, there is considerable quantity of inferior goods being offered at the present time, and buyers would be well advised to use extreme caution when purchasing, and not be led away by a quotation which, although appearing exceptionally cheap, would, in many instances, bring trouble and dissatisfaction to the buyer.—Produce Markets' Review, September 7.

CONDITION OF CANNED GOODS IN THE U.S.

If Europe, however, counts upon America for any export of canned vegetables and fruits this year, she will have to be prepared to compete with our home consumers for what she gets. There will be no surplus of anything this year for exports. Even in the two great staple crops of the industry there will be a national shortage this year. As we stated last week, the entire promise of the vines in this section is now in sight, and the outlook, and even its present receipts are so far below the requirements of the canning factories that the Baltimore packers are causing dismay on the Peninsula by buying all the tomatoes they can get sight of at such high prices that the Peninsula pack will be curtailed, and yet they do not get enough for the daily demands. The condition of tomatoes is being studiously watched at present, and, strange to say, the situation out there is exactly the reverse of what it is here. Whilst prospects in the West depend altogether upon promises, and, as correspondents write us, if the weather lasts long enough they will get a fair crop; here in the East there is virtually no promise, and the ripening of the green stock on the vines is about all that can be expected this season.

The situation in respect to canned corn is slightly improved over previous reports, and the packing season is now at its height throughout the country. Maine reports doing very well in some sections; corn in the western part of New York, especially, is said to be very fine, and the pack will be a full average, but west of the Alleghenies the reports become less satisfactory until we get beyond the Missouri, when they are of really very little consequence; but in the light of present indications we judge that the corn crop will be one-half of the average pack of the last ten years, and it will require every case of corn in carry-over stock to supply the country's need till the next season opens, even though the high prices will somewhat lessen the demand.—The Trade, Baltimore, Md., September 13.

BRITISH TEA TRADE FOR AUGUST.

The following, in regard to the tea trade of London during August, is from McMeekin & Co.'s circular:

Indian.—The offerings at London public auctions were 87,000 packages, against 103,000 packages in the same month of 1900. In the earlier part of the month there were some teas of very good quality from Assam and Darjeeling, but from Doorgas, Cachar and Sylhet the general run of the quality was poor. Throughout the month there was a good deal of irregularity in the bidding, and, although really good liquoring teas were in strong demand during the earlier sales, they were not so keenly bid for as the month advanced, and at the close there was a declining tendency for everything. The average of public sale prices for the month was 8½d. per lb., against 8¼d. per lb. for the corresponding month of last year. The imports were 12,850,000 lb., and the deliveries 9,483,000 lb., leaving in stock on August 31, 32,343,000 lb.

The increase in the deliveries is a satisfactory feature, as it shows that Indian tea is going more freely into consumption, although unfortunately the export demand has been, to some extent, checked, owing to the higher prices that were current for the lower grades. The advance in deliveries and the falling off in imports point to the probability of an improvement in the position from the producers' point of view, provided the determination to keep down the total of the crop is adhered to; but the amount exported from Calcutta and Chittagong during the month of August is returned at a figure very much in excess of the rate of current consumption. To realize such in the rapid manner in which many producers appear now to be compelled to do, cannot fail to prove a severe strain on the purchasing powers of the trade, and, as a great deal of the supply is known to be teas of very inferior character, it is probable that for such very low quotations will be made.

Ceylon.—The offerings at London public auctions were 98,000 packages, against 137,000 packages in the same month of 1900. A number of teas offering showed some improvement in quality, and, as there was a good demand throughout the month, the auctions went at fairly steady prices for all kinds, with some advance in quotations for the lower grades. The average public sale prices for the month was 6½d. per lb., against 7d. per lb. for the corresponding month of last year. The imports were 8,281,000 lb., and the deliveries 9,663,000 lb., leaving in stock on August 31, 27,629,000 lb.

The shipments from Colombo to London are still on a diminishing scale, the direct trade of that port having increased so much that the surplus available for London is materially diminished. This feature, if continued, should soon give relief to the congestion of offerings of all teas in London, and may ultimately lead to the level of the market being such as to give satisfactory results to producers generally.

ABOUT CEYLON TEAS.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, September 19, 1901.
GROCERIES.

WHILE trade is not as brisk as it was a week ago, there is, nevertheless, a fair sorting-up trade being done. The falling-off is principally in sugars, and it is worthy of note that the demand for sugars in the United States has also fallen off. As far as prices are concerned, they are much the same on general groceries as they were a week ago. In canned goods of all descriptions, business is of a waiting character, neither wholesalers nor retailers now being disposed to make further purchases, except for immediate requirements, until something more definite is known in regard to the pack. The weather has so far continued favorable for tomatoes and corn, and a fair pack is practically certain. The situation in regard to canned salmon remains unchanged, the lower prices only being quoted on other than standard. There is a fair trade being done in coffees, and the market is rather firmer than it was. The demand for syrups and molasses is still quiet, and a moderate business is being done in rice and tapioca. In spices the market continues to rule steady. There has been quite an interest taken in the tea market during the past week, on account of a firmer tone which has developed in the Indian and Ceylon descriptions. In Japan teas, on the other hand, the tone of the market is rather unsettled. Nuts, as a rule, are steady in price, but naturally very little business is being done. Further weakness has been shown in currants in the primary market. Valencia raisins are steady according to advices from Denia, but spot goods are weak. Some business is being done locally in new season's mat figs to arrive. Wholesalers are beginning to book orders for candied peels, and prices are slightly higher than a year ago. The general outlook for trade continues to be of a promising character.

CANNED GOODS.

Nothing particularly new has developed in the canned vegetable trade during the past week. The weather continues favorable for the tomato and corn pack, and there is a general indisposition on the part of both the wholesale and retail trade to operate further until the packing season is over. The little that is being done in spot goods is for immediate requirements only, and there is no disposition whatever, to speculate. Prices on all kinds of canned vegetables are steady. It seems to be a foregone conclusion that throughout the coming season there will be little or nothing done in the way of anticipating requirements, particularly as there has been quite a little canned vegetables carried over from last season. The ruling prices from stock are 85c. for tomatoes, 80c. up for peas and 75c. up for corn. Little or nothing is being done in canned fruits. Canned apples are scarce and prices firm, ruling from 90c. to $1 for 3's and $2.25 to $2.40 for gallons, according to quality. There is a fair sorting-up demand for canned salmon, but there is practically nothing being done just now on future account. Of course, a good many orders have already been taken for futures. According to an official statement by the secretary of the Fraser River Cannery Association, the pack of sockeye salmon on that river this season is 873,639 cases. Quotations on futures are: Fraser River sockeyes, $1.42½ for 5-case lots and over, and $1.45 for less quantities; Northern sockeye, $1.25 to $1.30; pink salmon, 95c. to $1; cohoes, $1.05 to $1.10.

COFFEE.

The market for Rio coffee has been stronger this week, mainly due, it is believed,

See pages 31 and 32 for
Toronto, Montreal, and St.
John prices current.

to the advance in exchange. Locally, trade is fairly good. We quote: Green Rio, No. 7, 7½c. per lb.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8½c.; No. 4, 9¼c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Business in both syrups and molasses continues light, and there is yet no material evidence of an improvement. Prices remain much as before.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

The foreign rice markets continue firm and prices locally are steady and unchanged. Just a steady trade is being done in tapioca. We quote: Standard B rice at 3¾ to 3½c., and Japan at 5½ to 6c., Tapioca rules at 3¾ to 4c.

SPICES.

The market is without any specially new features this week. According to advices from the outside markets, prices generally rule steady to firm. Locally, business is just moderate.

NUTS.

The market for all kinds of nuts appears to be fairly steady. Advices from the primary market report that prices are being well sustained for Valencia and Jordan shelled almonds, although rather easier prices are looked for when supplies improve.

SUGAR.

During the past week there have been further declines in the raw sugar market, and beet sugar has touched a still lower record point, being down to 7s. 10½d. It will be remembered that 8s. was the previously lowest figure. Raw cane sugar is dull and unchanged. The American Sugar Refining Co. was a buyer one day this week of raw sugar, but again quickly withdrew from the market, and centrifugals 96 degree test are now quoted in New York at 3¾c. The receipts in the United States last week were 39,847 tons, and the meltings 31,000 tons. The stock of raw sugar in Europe and America at the end of last week was 984,732 tons, against 664,400 tons the same time last year. The demand for sugar in Canada has fallen off during the past week, although there is still a good quantity moving, and prices are unchanged. The quotation in Toronto is $4.53 to $4.58 for granulated, and $3.73 upwards for yellows. The demand for refined sugar has also fallen off in the United States, and lower prices are looked for there shortly, on account of the condition of the raw market. One of the features of the trade in the United States is the withdrawal by the Trust of the 30 day guarantee. The parity over there between the price of refined and raw sugar is now 1¼c. per lb., so that the United States refiners are earning a nice profit.

CANDIED PEELS—The wholesalers are beginning to book orders for new candied peels. The prices, to arrive about Christmas, are as follows: Lemon peel, 11 to 12½c.; orange, 12½ to 13c.; citron, 16 to 18c. Quite a number of orders have been booked.

TEAS.

The feature of the tea market is a firmer tone in Indian and Ceylon descriptions. Mail advices from London, under date of September 6, state that the previous Wednesday's auction of Indian teas passed at fairly steady rates, and that the market was strong, with prices hardening, especially for the better-liquoring kinds in Ceylon teas. On Tuesday of this week, a cable was received in Toronto which read: "Market decidedly firmer. Tendency upward." Brokers report that quite a number of Toronto offers are being refused by their principals, on account of the high prices which are ruling. Another advice states that Ceylon teas from 6 to 6½d. are up ¾d., and teas from 8½ to 10½d. are 1d. dearer. Indian teas are also higher. The strength of the market is due to the shortage in the crop of both Indian and Ceylon teas. The shortage in the Ceylon crop, which was a short time ago estimated at 12,000,000 lb., is said to be further increasing, and some authorities claim that it will ultimately reach about 30,000,000 lb. There has been quite a little buying of Indian and Ceylon teas on this market at about 9d. for bright-liquoring descriptions, and buyers are not paying as much attention as they were to style. The last English mail has brought upon this market some fine samples of Darjeeling teas, and as the quality of later shipments of these teas is not likely to be as good buyers are urged to make their purchases from the samples now to hand.

Reports in regard to Japan teas are somewhat conflicting, the market being in some instances reported 2c. lower than a year ago, while others again, report slight advances. The real state of affairs seems to be that medium teas, which are the kind wanted here for the 25c. trade, are firm, and that the lower prices are on low-grade descriptions. According to advices from China a steady price is looked for on country greens, pingsueys.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRENTS—The market in Greece has again further declined during the past week. The weakness in the market, according to advices from Greece, is due to the want of demand from the European Continent. At the lower prices ruling there has been quite a little buying on the local market on importation account during the past week. According to mail advices received this week it is estimated that the crop in Greece available for export will be only 120,000 tons, which is a reduction of about 10 per cent. in the previous recent estimate. The demand for currants on the local market on retail account is still of a hand-to-mouth character at 9c. for Filiatras, 10½c. for Patras and 12½c. for Vostizzas. To arrive wholesalers quote 7 to 7½c. for fine Filiatras, 7¾ to 8½c. for Patras.

VALENCIA RAISINS—Mail advices from Denia state that very little fruit had so far been received and packed, and that the market ruled firm. Very little business is being done on the local market on importation account, and prices continue very weak for spot goods. Wholesalers, at the prices now ruling, are losing from 85c. to $1 or more per box. Ruling quotations are 4c. for fine off stalk, and 4½ to 5c. for selected. New fruit to arrive about end of the week via Liverpool, is quoted at 7½c. for selected, and 6¾ to 7c. for fine off stalk. That to arrive by first direct steamer, which sailed from Denia, August 22, 6 to 6½c. for fine off stalk, and 6½ to 7c. for selected.

FIGS—Quite a few orders have been taken during the past week or ten days for new tatnet figs at 3¾ to 3½c. per lb. to arrive. There are some Eleme figs which have been held in cold storage being offered at 10c. in 10 lb. boxes.

PRUNES—There is scarcely anything being done, and quotations are practically nominal. Californian prunes are quoted at the following: 30 40's, 8 to 8½c.; 40-50's, 7½ to 8c.; 50 60's, 7 to 7½c.; 60 70's, 6½ to 7c.; 70 80's, 6 to 6½c.; 80 90's, 5½ to 6c.; 90 100's, 5 to 5½c. French prunes, 3½ to 4c.

GREEN FRUITS.

Owing to the moderate supply of berries early in the season there is now an excellent demand for peaches, plums and pears for preserving. Therefore, as the supply is liberal, there is an excellent movement in these lines. Grapes, tomatoes and apples are also selling freely. Jamacia oranges are arriving in barrels, and are in good demand at $6.50 to $7 per bbl. Some houses are repacking them in boxes which are sold at $4 to $4.25 each. Bananas are 25c. dearer. We quote: Pears, 20 to 40c. per basket; peaches, Crawford's, 50c. to $1.25; plums, 20 to 60c.; apples, 15 to 35c.; egg plant, 20 to 25c.; tomatoes, 10 to 18½c.; cucumbers, 10 to 15c.; gherkins, 40 to 65c.; peppers, 25 to 50c.; grapes, in 10-lb. baskets, 15 to 20c. for Champions and 20c. for Moore's Early and Moyer's; muskmelons, 25 to 35c. per crate of 12; watermelons, 15 to 25c. each; bananas, $1.75 for 1st and 75c. to $1 for eight-hands. New Verdill lemons are offering at $3.75 to $4.25 per box, and Jamacia oranges at $6.50 per bbl. or $4 to $4.25 per box.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS—The market is in excellent condition, as the demand readily absorbs all supplies. Sound stock is steady at 13c. per doz., while other grades run from 8c. up.

BEANS—The market has declined 5 to 10c., but is now firm at $2.10 for prime beans. This year's crop is not likely to arrive within a fortnight, and is not likely to cause much change when it does come in.

HONEY—The demand is keeping up nicely and prices are well maintained. We quote: 9 to 10c. for extracted clover and $1.75 to $2 for No. 1 clover comb.

DRIED APPLES—There is practically nothing doing in dried apples as last year's stock is cleaned up, and this year's stock has not yet arrived. A small quantity of last year's evaporated apples are offering at 8c., but there is little demand.

POTATOES—The market continues firm. While some potatoes can still be bought at 60c., others of superior quality are being sold as high as 75c. per bushel.

DRESSED POULTRY—There is not much doing. We quote: Chickens, 45 to 50c. per pair; hens, 45 to 50c. per pair; ducks, 60 to 70c. per pair.

LIVE CHICKENS—The Canadian Produce Co., 36 and 38 Esplanade east, Toronto, will pay until October 3, for spring chickens, not less than two lb. each, 6c. per lb. For ducklings, not less than four lb. each, 4c. per lb. For hens (including last year's birds) 4c. per lb. These prices are for live weight on arrival. Crates shipped free and express paid up to 50c. per 100 lb. of chickens.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER—The market is weak as the demand is quiet, and stocks are accumulating. Creamery prints are the only grade which show any strength. They continue steady at 21 to 22c., but creamery boxes are 1c. lower than a week ago. Dairy grades are unchanged in prices. We quote as follows: Dairy prints, 17 to 18c.; best tubs, 16 to 16½c.; poor to medium grades, 12 to 15c.; creamery prints, 21 to 22c.; boxes, 19 to 20c.

CHEESE—The market is quiet, but as prices at country boards are unchanged, there is nothing new in prices here, the general quotation being 9¾c. for finest cheese.

VEGETABLES.

Cabbage, celery and cauliflower are 5 to 10c. cheaper. Butter beans are practically done. There is a good, steady demand.

We quote: Carrots and beets, 20c. per peck; turnips, 15 to 20c. per peck; lettuce, 20 to 30c. per doz.; radishes, 15 to 20c.; watercress, mint and parsley, 20c.; cauliflower, 75c. to $1; celery, 40 to 60c.; cabbage, 25 to 40c.; corn, 6 to 10c.; cucumbers, short, 10 to 15c.; tomatoes, 10 to 17½c. per basket; dry onions, $1.25 per bush.; new potatoes, 60 to 75c. per bushel; gherkins, 15 to 20c. per 100; egg plant, 30 to 35c. per basket; sweet potatoes, $3.50 to $3.75 per bbl.; apples, $2.50 to $3.50 per bbl.

FISH.

Oysters are on the market, as are also Digby herring and new season's cod. Trout and white fish are still in chief request among the fresh fish. We quote: Fresh fish—Spanish mackerel, 12½c.; codfish, 6c.; whitefish, 7 to 7½c.; trout, 7½c.; halibut, 15c.; sea salmon, 20 to 25c.; haddock, 6c.; herring, 4c.; perch, 4c.; British Columbian salmon, 20c. Smoked fish—Ciscos, $1 per basket; Digby herring, 75 to 80c. per bundle. Prepared fish—Dried cod, in 112 lb. bundles, $4.75 per cwt.; flitch cod, $5 to $5.25; boneless cod, in bricks, 5 to 5½c. per lb.; steak cod, 6½c. per lb.; shredded cod (2 doz. in box), $1.80 per box; boneless fish, loose, in 25-lb. boxes, 4 to 4½c., and 5-lb. boxes, 5c. per lb. Oysters—standards, $3.75 per small pail or $1.50 per Imperial gallon; selects, $2 per Imperial gallon.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES—The market is active, showing an advance of ½c. for all green hides. We quote: Cowhides, No. 1, 8c.; No. 2, 7c.; No. 3, 6c. Steerhides are worth 1c. more. Cured hides are quoted at 8½ to 9c.

SKINS—Lambskins and pelts are 10c. higher. The market is active. We quote: No. 1 veal, 8 lb. and up, 9c. per lb.; No. 2, 8c.; dekins, from 55 to 60c.; culls, 20 to 25c.; lambs and pelts, 50c.

WOOL—The market is decidedly dull. Our quotations are: Combing fleece, washed, 12 to 12½c., and unwashed, 7½ to 8c.

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN—Manitoba and Ontario wheats are both 3c. per bushel lower. Manitoba No. 1 hard is quoted at 82c. grinding in transit, or 80c. Toronto and west. Ontario wheat is quoted at 67c. at outside points, middle freights. There is a fairly good delivery on the Toronto street markets. We quote: Wheat, white and red, 71 to 73c.; goose, 67 to 69c.; oats, new, 38 to 40c.; rye, 52c.; barley, 49 to 51c.; peas, 68 to 70c.

FLOUR—The market is easy on account of the decline in wheat, and the abundance of supplies. We quote on track, Toronto (bags included) as follows: Manitoba patents, $4.00; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.60; Ontario patents, $3.50 to $3.60; straight roller, $3.00.

BREAKFAST FOODS—Rolled wheat is 10c. lower. Otherwise there is no change. We quote as follows: Standard oatmeal, $3.70 in bags, and $3.80 in bbls.; rolled oats, $3.60 in bags, and $3.70

QUEBEC MARKETS.

MONTREAL, September 19, 1901.

GROCERIES.

THE visit of their Royal Highnesses to the city this week has somewhat disturbed business, decorations being the chief topic of discussion. In the trade chief interest hangs about dried fruits, and it is noticeable that merchants are particularly desirous this year of having their goods delivered early. Some Valencia raisins are already to hand, a few passing into stock this week at rather high figures.
The first direct steamer will arrive into port about the second week in October.
The currant market has again weakened during the past few days and goods have been offered at 15s. or 1s. 6d. lower than a week ago. Since this point was touched there has been a reaction of 6d. and the market is now reported firm. Valencia raisins are also firm and Montreal merchants have bought fairly freely this week for shipment by the ss. Escalona. Sugars are steady at the recent decline, and the raw markets have recovered from their severe depression. Teas are steady. Patna rice is very firm. Canned goods are unchanged although fruits show a decided firmness.
American pork is 50c. higher, while the lard market again shows advances on some brands.

SUGAR.

Since our last report the foreign raw sugar market has touched the lowest point on record, 7s. 9½d. Since then, however, the demand has improved and an advance of 2½d. has been scored. The New York market is now quoted the same as a week ago. Locally the demand for sugars is fairly good although buyers are operating lightly. Prices for refined sugar are firm on account of low stocks in refiners' hands.

TEAS.

There is a very fair import trade passing in teas at the present price of third crop Japans, but the shipments are no heavier than last year. Probably the feature of the Japan tea trade is the improved demand from the West. The run is on 18 to 20c. teas especially. China greens continue firm.

There are still few signs of trading in Indian and Ceylon teas as the market has been glutted with the cheap sales made from consignments.

MOLASSES.

Although there is virtually no business doing, the market continues firm at 28 to 28½c. in 50 puncheon lots and 29c. for small shipments.

CANNED GOODS.

There is a fair demand for canned goods, but it is not at all brisk and retailers seem determined not to buy heavily. The market continues firm and without change. Tomatoes are selling from 85 to 90c., corn, 80 to 85 and peas 80 to 85c. We quote fruits: Strawberries, $1.50; raspberries, $1.40; gooseberries, $1.40; pears, $1.55 for 2's and $2 for 3's; Lombard plums, $1.20; greengages, $1.30; yellow peaches, $1.90 for 2's and $2.65 for 3's; sliced pineapple, $2.30, and $2.45 for grated; 3 lb. apples, 90c.; red pitted cherries, $2.00, and whites, $2.15. There is nothing new to report on salmon, the prices of the standard brands being fully maintained. The best Fraser river sockeye is selling at $1.45 per dozen and private brands are quoted at $5 per case. Rivers Inlet sockeye is selling from $1.25 to $1.32½.

SPICES.

There is a fairly good inquiry reported for spices at steady prices. We quote: Nutmegs, 35 to 65c. per lb., as to size; Penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 20c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole, Cochin, 14 to 16c.; Japan, 10c.; Jamaica, 20c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16c.; Jamaica, 25c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Patna rice is very firm and at present primary quotations it would cost ⅓c. more to lay it down than wholesalers are selling at to-day. We quote in combine district: B rice, in bags, $3.10; in ½ bags, $3.15; in ¼ bags, $3.20; in pockets, $3.25. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $3 in bags; $3.05 in ½ bags; $3.10 in ¼ bags; and $3.15 in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4¾c. per lb., and tapioca, 3¾ to 3⅞c.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

VALENCIA RAISINS—Some small early shipments of Valencia raisins of good quality came to hand this week and are selling at 6¼ to 6½c. The first shipments via Liverpool are expected next week, when prices will be put down ¼c. By first direct steamer line off stalk Valentias are quoted at 6 to 6¼c.; selected, 6½ to 6¾c.; and layers, 7 to 7¼c. Since these prices went out the primary market has advanced ⅓c. and it will not be many days before our market will do likewise. The market is very firm. Spot goods continue to be slaughtered.

CURRENTS—Since our last report the currant market has declined another 1s. 6d. to 15s. and has reacted 6d. making the latest quotation 15s. 6d. The tendency is now upward. For delivery in the first half of October fine Filiatras are quoted at 5¾ to 6¼c., and cleaned, 6¼ to 6¾c.; cleaned in 1-lb. cartons, 8c., and finest Vostizza currants, in half cases, 7¾ to 8¼c. The Escalona with currants on board is this week at Denia taking on Valencia raisins.

SULTANA RAISINS—The Sultana raisin market is steady at 9¼ to 10c. for goods to arrive, first half of October.

FIGS—Comadre figs to arrive are worth 3¾ to 3⅞c. in tapnets. Eleme figs will be sold at $1.05 per 10 lb. XXX box, $1.95 per 19 lb. XXX box, $4.30 per 28-lb. XXXXX box, 8c. per 12 oz. box and 12c. per 16 oz. box.

DATES—Are quoted to arrive first half of December at 4¾ to 5¼c.

PRUNES—As yet no authoritative prices are out, but it is likely that smaller sizes will be about ½c. higher than last year and larger sizes about the same.

EVAPORATED FRUITS—Evaporated apples are worth 9c., which the factorymen are asking for new fruit. Prices on new Californian fruits are not yet announced, but, so far as we can judge, apricots will be about 3c. higher than last year, peaches about 1½ to 2c. and pears fully 3c. higher. It is not likely that fixed prices will be announced till the fruit is ready for shipment, about the last of September.

PEELS—English peels for late delivery are quoted at 10 to 11c. for lemon, 10½ to 11½c. for orange and 14½ to 15½c. for citron peel.

NUTS.

Pure Mayette walnuts are worth 11 to 12c. to arrive in December. Sicily filberts, 8½ to 9¼c. to arrive in November; Tarragona almonds, 10¾ to 11¾c., and shelled almonds, 26c. to arrive in November also.

GREEN FRUITS.

The weather has been rather against movements of fruits, and prices are somewhat lower in peaches. We quote as follows: Californian Valentias, $5 to $6 per box; Messina lemons, 300's, $3.25 to $4.50; 360's, $2.75 to $3.50 per box; Verdill lemons, $3.75 to $4.75 per box;

pineapples, 20 to 30c.; Canadian apples, 15 to 25c. per basket; Californian plums, $1.00 to $2 per box; peaches, $1.00 to $1.25; limes, $1.50 per box; Ontario peaches, 30 to 50c. per basket; Ontario plums, 30 to 40c.; cocoanuts, $3.25 per bag of 100; Californian Bartlett pears, $2.50 to $3.00 per box; watermelons, 20 to 25c.; bananas, No. 1, $1.75 to $2.25, and eight hands, $1.35 to $1.50; Canadian pears (baskets), 30 to 40c.; Bartlett pears (bbls.), $2.00 to $4.50; Clapp's Favorite (bbls.), $2.00 to $3.75; Ontario muskmelons, 25 to 60c. per crate.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS—The demand for eggs is very satisfactory, and prices are somewhat higher. Sales of round lots of fresh stock have occurred at 13½ to 14c., and in a jobbing way at 14½ to 15c.

HONEY—A fair volume of business has been done in honey at 11 to 11½c., and strained at 7½ to 8c. per lb.

POTATOES—There has been no change in the market for potatoes, which are fairly active at 60c. per bag in carlots and 75c. in a jobbing way.

ASHES—Business is slow, and prices are unchanged. We quote: Firsts, $4.25; seconds, $3.85, and pearls, $6.75 to $7.25 per 100 lb.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR—A fairly active business has been done in all grades of old wheat flour, and as supplies of such are somewhat limited the tone of the market is firm. We quote as follows: Manitoba spring wheat patents, $4.10 to $4.15; winter wheat patents, $3.75 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.40 to $3.50; in bags, $1.65 to $1.75 and Manitoba strong bakers', $3.60 to $3.90.

GRAIN—We quote: No. 1 spring wheat, 70c. afloat September; peas, 81c.; rye, 58 to 59c.; No. 2 barley, 54c.; oats, 39 to 39½c.; buckwheat, 56½ to 57c.; corn, 59 to 59½c.

OATMEAL—Business in rolled oats continues quiet and chiefly of a jobbing nature, at $4.10 to $4.20 per bbl. and $1.95 to $2.05 per bag.

FEED—A fair trade was reported in feed and the market was moderately active. Ontario bran is selling at $15.50, and shorts at $18 to $19 per ton, in bulk; Manitoba bran at $16, and shorts at $18 per ton.

BALED HAY—The demand for baled hay is good and the market continues active. There is a steady demand for old-crop hay at country points and it is being shipped to Africa as fast as it can be pressed. No. 1 is scarce and commands $11 to $11.50 easily, while $10.50 is paid for No. 2. In new hay the market is quiet at $9 for No. 2.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER—The demand for butter was good, and considerable business transacted. The tone is firmer and prices have an upward tendency, some holders asking 21c. for finest late made creamery. We quote: Finest creamery 20¾ to 21c.; undergrades 19c., Western dairy, 16c.

CHEESE—The cheese market was quiet this morning on spot, but a firm undertone is being maintained. An advance of ⅓c. is reported on last week's level. We quote:

prices are held at about  $2\frac{1}{2}$ c. above opening prices of new goods. In the local market, peas have not advanced. The old goods bought this season are the only goods which show a profit. Canned pears and plums are low, but the sale is light. Blueberries are tending higher. There is a large western and American demand. Salmon is a light stock. There seems no sale for high-grade fish. The cheaper goods seem to give satisfaction. Kipperd herring and haddies are very firm. Sardines are freely received.

GREEN FRUITS — Business is active. Apples are coming in freely. There is quite a good crop in Nova Scotia. Prices remain unchanged. Best eating stock is still scarce. In pears, the market is overstocked. Large quantities have been received from Nova Scotia. For really-good stock, quite full figures are asked. Peaches are scarce. Prices are rather higher. Nova Scotian plums have been in large supply, but the quality has been good and the sale large. In oranges and lemons, there is little business. Bananas have been again rather scarce this week. Grapes from Ontario have a good sale, prices tending rather lower. Californian Tokays have a good sale, but the supply is not large. Sweet potatoes are offered freely.

DRIED FRUITS—Raisins are the subject of interest. While in Valencias and Malagas prices are reasonable, buyers are backward. They are anxious for prices on Californians. They are the raisins preferred. Things seem mixed on the Coast, but the outlook is for quite full prices though rather below last season. The advance and firm feeling in old fruit, both seeded and loose, in New York, has been a surprise. Seeded are considered good stock at present figures. Prunes are likely to be rather higher than last year. Spot business is light. New evaporated peaches and apricots are expected shortly. Package dates are rather higher. New figs cost less than last year. Evaporated apples are scarce and high. New are not yet quoted.

DAIRY PRODUCE—In butter the sale is active at higher prices, and the market is tending upward. Output in New Brunswick will be short. Local output of late cheese is short and local prices are rather higher. There is a fair sale for small cheese. Eggs are lower here than at other points, but there is a fair sale.

SUGAR — The new arrangement is working well. St. John merchants find they are selling sugar at points they could before seldom touch. In yellows, but two grades have yet been offered. A difference of 30c. is made. Business will be more satisfactory when a full line is offered.

MOLASSES—The sale is for Porto Rico, but it is light at present. The country is quite well stocked. Stock in St. John is quite large, and the low prices continue. Arrivals are much larger than last year. In some other lines they have not been as large.

FISH—There is but fair business. Little is doing in fresh fish. In dry fish, there is no change. Values are quite low. Smoked herring, new, are still quite firm, but lower figures are expected. Pickled herring are good and prices lower than last year. There is an improved sale for boneless fish. Shad are particularly scarce this season. Finnan haddies and kippered herring are offered. We quote: Large and medium dry cod, \$3.25 to \$3.50; small, \$2.50 to \$2.60; haddies, 5 to  $5\frac{1}{2}$ c.; smoked herring, 12 to 13c.; fresh haddock and cod,  $2\frac{1}{2}$ c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, \$1.50 to \$1.60 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, \$1.75 to \$1.85 per half bbl.; Canso herring, \$5 per bbl.; kippered herring, \$1 per box.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL—In flour, values are unchanged. There is a fair business. Oats and oatmeal are quite high, though hardly as firm. Feed is particularly scarce. Cornmeal is held at the high prices, being higher than for some years. Beans are going off in price very quickly. The decline at time of writing is about 60c. They are likely to be as low as before the advance. Barley is higher. Peas are higher and scarce. We quote as follows: Manitoba flour, $4.60 to $4.70; best Ontario, $3.90 to $4.00; medium, $3.60 to $3.70; oatmeal, $4.25 to $4.30; cornmeal, $3.00 to $3.10; middlings, $2.20 to $2.30; oats, 48 to 50c.; hand-picked beans, $2.25 to $2.50; prime, $2.20 to $2.25; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3.00; split peas, $4.10 to $4.15; barley, $4.10 to $4.25; hay, $12 to $14.

ST. JOHN NOTES.

C. E. Macmichael is representing The Imperial Extract Co.

Barton Gandy is landing a cargo of Liverpool coarse salt this week.

Northrup & Co. have received a large quantity of particularly nice dulce.

A. F. Randolph & Sons, Fredericton, have received a car of Fairbank's lard.

"Sunlight" soap is having increased sale. The Canadian package is popular.

New gallon apples were received by the trade this week. They were shipped by J. G. Rood & Co., Nova Scotia.

T. H. Estabrooks is in Ontario. Since putting his travellers in that Province in the spring his shipments of tea west have been large.

HE SOLD THE COFFEE.

A SALESMAN for a coffee house which does a large business in Brooklyn, N.Y., has hit, according to a contemporary, upon a scheme to get orders which has the merit of cleverness. How he works it is best told in the words of a charming young housewife, who lives at what some Manhattanites call "the foolish end of the bridge."

"I saw his wagon stop at the door before the bell rang," said she, "and I knew it was one of those persistent coffee men. I had tried twice before to use their coffee, but it wasn't as good as the coffee my grocer sells. I went to the door myself, prepared to be awfully cross. The man stood with his hat in his hand. He gave me one look and started back a step with his hand on his heart. I thought the poor fellow was going to faint. He recovered himself in a moment, and looked very much embarrassed.

"'Pardon me,' he said, 'but I was so startled. I have recently lost a sister, and you looked so much like her that I thought, as you opened the door, she had come back to life.'

"The man was apparently much affected, and I felt so sorry for him. When he began talking coffee I tried to steel myself against him; but he looked at me so wistfully that I hadn't the heart to be disagreeable. He was evidently so well bred, too, that I couldn't shut the door in his face. Well, before I realized it I had bought a pound of his coffee.

"I didn't feel so badly about having broken my resolve until next day, when a woman in the apartment across the hall dropped in to tell me how sorry she felt for a poor coffee salesman who nearly fainted when she opened the door, because, as he said, she was the living image of his dead sister."

THE FRUIT AREA OF ONTARIO.

Professor Macoun, of the Dominion Geological Survey, who has been, during the past four months, examining the flora of the land along the shores of Lakes Erie and Huron, from Niagara to the peninsula between Lake Huron and Georgian Bay, returned to Ottawa last week.

While on the tour, Professor Macoun paid particular attention to the forests of the district through which he passed. As a result of this examination, he is convinced that the fruit area of Ontario can be greatly increased; that, in fact, apples, pears, peaches, plums and cherries can be grown all through the district. Not only are the climatic conditions favorable, but the soil is light enough even for peaches. Professor Macoun declares that there is ample room for millions of trees.

The Peterboro', Ont., council has passed a by-law prohibiting the giving or selling of trading stamps in that city.

THE WRITING OF AN "AD."

There is a widespread idea that a good advertisement must be one that is very novel, very striking—one that exhibits a good deal of ingenuity in its construction, that contains a flash of wit, an epigrammatic phrase, or a clever word illustrated connection between the article in question and its practical qualities. The advertiser writer that is constantly evolving some of these "cunning" ideas is popularly supposed to be a clever advertisement writer.

Now, these things have their uses, but this idea is overtaxed. Now and then, some epigrammatic phrase, some clever idea or illustration along this line is so good, so happily hits off the idea to be conveyed, that it is a good, a very good advertisement, and serves very successfully, but these successes are the exception, not the rule.

A really-good advertisement, outside of the technical knowledge that may be displayed in the arrangement, contrasts in type, in black and white, etc., is really a very simple thing. It consists in simply making use of the real, the practical, the truly-valuable point or points of the article advertised, the feature or features which make it of plain worth and value to the prospective buyer, and of stating this in a clear, reasonable and logical way, stating where it excels, and then giving the reason why it does, so that the statement bears the stamp of truth, in a way that shows it must be so. This is the underlying principle of a good advertisement.

LOOK AT HOME.

If retail grocers wish to make a success (especially small dealers), they must get rid of the everlasting jealousies which seem to exist among them, remarks an exchange. Instead of each man trying to build up his trade on strictly business principles, his whole aim seems to be the ruination of his competitors. If Brown puts out a card announcing that he sells eggs for 14c. per doz., Jones, across the street, meets it with a price of 13c. If Brown advertises sugar at 5½c., Jones goes him ¼c. better.

The latter does not stop to consider whether he can afford it, or to take into consideration quality, etc., of the goods offered by his competitor. Consequently at the end of the year when he foots up profit and loss he finds but little reward for his 12 months of hard work. Attend to your own business; keep good goods; teach your customers to have confidence in you, and don't bother about the other man.

TRADE CHAT.

Fred Smye, of Balfour & Co., grocers, Hamilton, Ont., has gone on a trip to Europe.

George B. Cooney, grocer, Peterboro', Ont., has sold out to Wm. Methers, of the same place.

John Jones, grocer, Sarnia, Ont., spent part of last week at the Pan-American Exposition with his wife and daughter.

TEAS IN NEW YORK.

Country greens and Pingsueys were in small spot supply, and according to the advices coming to hand there will be no excessive supplies from this season's crop. The market for these grades of teas showed a tendency to harden, and in a quiet way a moderate volume of business was transacted at firm prices. Sales reported for the day were 1,700 packages Pingsuey. Congous also were somewhat firmer, with Sc. in bond being quoted as an inside figure. Business reported was 500 packages Congous. Other teas were unchanged and steady. The line business was reported as fairly active.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce, September 17.

COMPLICATED PRUNE CONDITIONS.

In connection with prunes The Fruit Grower says: "The association matters are getting more complicated every day, and it is hard to see a favorable outcome. The association has in the neighborhood of 30,000,000 pounds of old prunes carried over from last year, and many think these holdings will not be materially added by this season's crop. The quantity of prunes to be controlled by the association this year depends largely on the actions of the smaller growers' unions, which are at present discussing their future course."

BETTER THAN EVER!

The demand for advertising space is already large, and some forms have been sent to press with advertisements in choice positions. Those who want to have careful and leisurely attention given to their advertisements should let us have them early, as, in a week or two, we will be "in a rush" and will have to handle all matters as quickly as we can, and we do not want any of our advertisements to be of the set up in a hurry kind. ❀ ❀ ❀ ❀ ❀

THE PROVISION TRADE.

The Markets—Provisions in the United States—Miscellaneous Notes.

PROVISIONS IN THE UNITED STATES.

PROVISIONS are higher than a month ago, when corn was almost 7c., and wheat 6c. higher than at present. The grains have receded and provisions have moved up. The best advances have been in the near-by product, because it has had the help of an excellent cash demand. Hogs are at 7c., the top figure so far. The live animal is above a parity with the manufactured product. The outsider is as much afraid of the present high level of products as he is timid over corn and oats, and he has been in the provision market for 60 days. The packers are generally friendly to the near-by futures, but are divided over the January. There is one large long line of January lard; but the manufacturers generally are disposed ahead of last year for the same two months, but the liquidation is apparently ending. With all the extra hog supply the stocks of lard have decreased. The stocks of meats have not increased on this hog liquidation, but they are considerably larger than they were last year. The position of the fats is substantially stronger than the meats.—National Provisioner.

BUTTER FROM VEGETABLE MATTER.

Is the cow to be altogether eliminated from the dairy? The British Consul-General at Marseilles hears that "a new fatty substance for consumption in the United Kingdom, to take the place of butter, is being put on the British market. It is called vegetaline, and is nothing else than the oil extracted from coprah (dried cocoanut), refined, and with all smell and taste neutralized by a patented process. It becomes like sweet lard, and is intended to compete with margarine on the breakfast table, as a substitute for butter." A Liverpool firm, we are told, will this year help in an effort to popularize the stuff.

THE PROPOSED GERMAN TARIFF.

The domestic food conditions of Germany must be very poor and very alarming to call for so drastic a prohibitive tariff as that for 1904, which raises the duty on imported meats, etc., from 50 to 300 per cent., as proposed.

If the internal conditions of Germany improve by the time it is contemplated to put the exclusion tariff in force, there will not be the same howl and demand, in certain quarters for it. If these domestic conditions in the Fatherland do not so improve there is reason to believe that the oppressed condition of the people will not stand or permit the exclusion of the necessities of life or of their importation at far greater cost and expense to the people of that country.

Tariffs do not breed live stock. They could not encourage the replenishing of the German herds under food conditions which would call for a heavier killing of the home herds.

With a proposed duty of nearly $4 per head on calves, $6 per head on cows, $2 40 per head on hogs and $75 per ton on meat coming into Germany, it can readily be seen that there is a purely selfish speculative move behind this tariff schedule, and an ulterior concert purpose beyond. After the pockets of those closely in interest is satisfied and the temporary assist to diplomacy has been played to the limit we feel confident that this tariff will either lapse or be very materially modified.—National Provisioner.

TO MAKE THEIR CUSTOMERS PAY.

The retail butchers and provision dealers of Saginaw, Mich., are uniting to enforce payment of their customers' accounts, and have formed an association. Among the rules adopted are the following:

1. All customers receiving credit to pay accounts in full on each regular pay day.
2. That customers not paying their accounts in full to be reported to the association.
3. That further credit shall be refused them at all markets until such account is settled in full.
4. All butchers having such accounts shall notify the secretary of the association, and the account will be referred to a committee appointed to investigate the same.
5. Any member giving such person credit shall be fined $2 for first offence, and $5 for every offence afterward.

Provision dealers throughout Canada might find it good policy to adopt similar means to get payment of their accounts.

THE EVIL OF FROZEN MEATS.

Refrigerator fresh meat has a decided advantage over frozen meat, says the National Provisioner. It is a singular fact, however, that meat which has been frozen and subjected to a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees F. decomposes much more rapidly than meat which has been subjected to a temperature below the freezing point.

A cut of beef or a leg of mutton which has been frozen loses a very large part of its juices or gravy when cooked. This is due to the structural change in the cells. Refrigerated or fresh meats do not have this evil of insipidness; neither are these meats flabby or ropy. Cold will loosen and extract the albumen from meats, while cooking hardens and seals it in the meat body.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

Dressed hogs are 10c. higher. Calves are 50c. dearer. Lambs are ¼c., beef carcasses ½c., and hind quarters 1c. lower. Otherwise there is no change in dressed meats. There is not much doing, as the fall demand has not yet properly opened up. We quote as follows: Dressed hogs, $9.25 to $9 60 per cwt.; mutton, $5 50 to $6 50 per cwt.; lambs, 7½ to 8½c. per lb.; beef carcasses, $7.25 per cwt. for best and $6 to $7 for mediums; hind quarters, 8c. for best; fore quarters, 4½ to 5½c. for best; calves, $8 50 for best and $6 to $7 for mediums.

The market for all pork products continues stiff, though the only change is an advance of ¼c. in lard in tierces. We quote: Long clear bacon, 11½ to 12c. Smoked meats: Breakfast bacon, 15c.; rolls, 12½c.; small hams, 14c.; medium hams, 14c.; large hams, 13c.; shoulder hams, 12c.; backs, 15c. Barrel pork—Canadian heavy mess, $20.50; Canadian short cut, $22. Lard—Tierces, 11½c. tubs, 11¼c.; pails, 12c.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

Barrelled pork continues to advance. The local packed is chiefly mess and will be used as far as it goes. Beef is very firm, particularly Boston prices which are usually below Chicago. Ontario beef shows improved sale. Lard is also higher.

THE BEET-SUGAR INDUSTRY.

At a well-attended meeting of farmers who live in the vicinity of Galt, Ont., a suggestion to establish a large beet-sugar factory was favorably considered, and a deputation was sent to Michigan to inquire into the conditions of the sugar-making industry in that State. It is stated that American capitalists have offered to furnish $40,000 capital if an $80,000 factory is erected.

The board of directors of the Warton Beet Sugar Manufacturing Company has awarded the contract for the erection of buildings and plant for next fall. The buildings and part of the plant are to be of 700 tons of beets capacity per day, the mean capacity being 350 tons. It is understood the contract price is almost $350,000. The following officers were reelected at a meeting of the shareholders of this company last week: President, B. B. Freeman; vice-president, J. Flett; directors, J. C. Siemon, J. Young and J. A. Simmers.

The Ontario Beet Root Sugar Co., Limited, Toronto, have been incorporated with a capital stock of $1,000,000, and the following provisional directors: Hugh Blain, Robert Jaffray, M. J. Hay, M. McLaughlin, H. M. Pellatt, Arch. Campbell, Jas. Fowler, W. J. Gage, John Flett, S. F. McKinnon, S. H. Janes and N. B. Gash, all of Toronto; and Wm. Henry, of Hamilton; F. J. Denison, Dunnville, and John Brown, Dunnville. It is probable that this concern will erect a factory at Dunnville, Ont.

CORDIALTY.

Turn to your Webster and you find that "cordiality" means "sincere affection and kindness; warmth of regard; heartiness." Cordiality, therefore, would seem a mighty handy quality to mix with one's business, says New York Merchants' Review.

How often is one rebuffed or repelled by coldness, stiffness, gruffness, surliness, brusqueness or simple absence of politeness, and then just when one is almost ready to register a solemn oath that one will never enter the store again, one meets a cordial glance, a cordial manner and a cordial inquiry, and the ill-humor evaporates, the natural irritation is allayed and a customer is preserved to the business who may continue as a constant patron for many years.

A really cordial manner is worth going some distance to meet. He that has it as a birthright is born with a gold spoon in his mouth, and yet it is a simple matter to acquire it, it costs nothing, but in the retail store it is more precious than rubies, more fragrant than spikenard.

Cultivate a cordial reception of customers, esteemed readers, and the price at which you sell will have less power to make or mar your prospects.

THE DRUMMER'S CIGAR.

"O H, old Jones is an easy mark," said one drummer to another, as they sat talking in the hotel office. By this he meant that it an easy thing to sell goods to Jones. Happening to overhear the remark, and being acquainted with the speaker, I asked him to tell me why he considered Jones an easy customer to sell to. He replied that Jones bought a good many things that he did not really need, and that he seemed to have a mania for buying. "Why," said he, "I have sold Jones goods enough of one kind to do him two years, when he had no possible use for more than enough to do him for three months." Not long after this conversation occurred, Jones failed in business, and his creditors said the reason for the failure was "overstocked in unseasonable goods." The fact was that Jones invested his money in goods he did not need, and when he needed the money to buy other goods with, or to pay other bills, he could not realize it from his foolish purchases. There are lots of Joneses in business yet, and in time they will fail, unless they quit buying goods they do not need. It will be as bad with them if they buy more than a reasonable quantity of anything, no matter how saleable it is.

"That cigar will be worth $100 to me," said another drummer, as he bought a 15c. cigar of the newsboy at the hotel. The next time I met the man I asked him to explain how a single cigar would be worth $100. "That is easy enough," he replied. It's this way: Smith is partial to that particular make of cigars, and when I give him one of them he invariably orders more goods of me than he would without the cigar. When I get him in a buying humor, it is no trick at all to sell him an extra $100 worth of goods." "But do you consider it honest to impose on him in that way?" I asked. "Of course it is honest, if Smith is fool enough to bite at such bait," the man replied.

"If Smith is fool enough"—that tells the whole story. The man is on the road to sell goods, and he does not scruple about selling a dealer an overstock, or about selling him goods that he will find hard to dispose of. If the dealer refuses to buy more than he needs, the salesman tells his neighbors that he is a hard buyer. If he buys too much, he is known as an easy mark. If he has prejudices that the salesman can impose upon, or if he has weaknesses that can be taken advantage of, the salesman is very likely to offer him innocent bribes.

A dealer in our town has a weakness for good dinners. A certain salesman knows it, and makes a habit of inviting the merchant to take dinner with him whenever he is in town. The dinner costs the salesman 50c. It sells $50 worth of goods for him. For the salesman it is a good investment; for the merchant it is an expensive dinner, when he calculates how many dollars' worth of goods he has bought that he would not have bought without the dinner. Usually, he does not need the extra goods, and they are hard to dispose of.

Occasionally, a salesman is unfair to his customer, but, as a general rule, he will not impose on a customer who knows what he needs, who buys nothing he does not need, and who will not accept or be influenced by cigars, treats, dinners, theatre tickets, free rides or other bribes. All these things are bribes—offered to the man for his own trade. They are usually expensive for the man who accepts them. If you want a hotel dinner it is cheaper to go and buy it for 50c. than it is to pay the salesman the profit on $100 worth of goods you do not want nor need.

Have you ever taken time to think of these matters? If you have not done so, now is a good time to sit down alone and carefully calculate how very costly a drummer's cigar may be for you.—"Yours Truly," in Merchants Journal.

CLOTH AND CARPET CLEANER.

How many times has the storekeeper been asked for some article good for cleaning carpets on the floor, or for removing stains and soils from clothing? The Enterprise Specialty Co., of 83 Bay street,

Toronto, has solved the problem of a long-felt want, by giving to the public a preparation named "Enterprise Renovator," which is guaranteed to fill a variety of requirements in this respect. The makers claim for it that it will clean carpets, rugs, etc., restoring the colors; will make lace curtains white and save wear from rubbing; will improve the appearance of the general wash; will clean and remove stains from clothing, including silks and dress goods of the finest material. In addition to these attainments, "Enterprise Renovator" is useful for polishing glass, oilcloth, etc. It is guaranteed not to injure the finest fabrics, and is also said to be a preventative of moths. The Renovator has met with a large sale wherever introduced, and it has now come to be that enterprising grocers and "Enterprise Renovator" go hand in hand.

INQUIRIES REGARDING CANADIAN TRADE.

The following were among the recent inquiries relating to Canadian trade received at the High Commissioner's Office in London, Eng.:

1. An Antwerp importer asks for names of British Columbian packers of canned salmon.
2. The agency for one or two large packers in Canada of canned goods is required by a London firm who are prepared to push the sale of these goods.
3. The engineer and surveyor of an important district in London makes inquiry respecting the suitability of Canadian woods for paving purposes.

[The names of the firms making the above inquiries, can be obtained on application to the editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.]

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch.

Your idea may be that all starch is starch and that your customers won't detect even a slight difference in quality. You may think that because there is a cent or two extra profit on "Mushroom" brands (that come and go), you can retain the confidence of your trade—it doesn't pay to trifle with the confidence that a customer has in you and your goods.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch is as staple as flour. In the name there is the fame of nearly half a century. In the making there is the skill of long experience combined with honesty of purpose and unequalled manufacturing facilities. Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch represents the highest type of perfection there is or can be in starch. Kegs of 100-lbs.—handsome enamelled horse-shoe tins holding 6-lbs.—handsome 1-lb. packages that give a touch of life and color and "go" to a grocer's shelves.

A Good Story

We haven't any funny yarn to spin, but we think there is a pretty good story for every grocer to know about Tillson's Pan-Dried Rolled Oats. They are at present sold in bulk only, and any grocer can build up a trade on bulk sales, which he can secure no other way and make more money, too, if he will.

It cannot be done by substituting some other kind and trying to palm them off as Tillson's, or "just as good."

It is possible for an enterprising grocer to make his store famous as the place in his town at which good cereals can always be procured.

Are you not yet convinced that Tillson's "PAN DRIED" ROLLED OATS are in a class by themselves? Let us submit some evidence—there is more to this story—it will be continued.

Buying, Handling and Selling Coffees.

ONE OF THE PRIZE ESSAYS.

By JAMES H. CONNALL Peterboro', Ont.

THE coffee department of our business has always been one of interest to me as there is so much to learn in the study of coffee. There are always new points unfolding themselves to our view as we go along, as it cannot be all known at once. I believe a person might spend a lifetime on the study of coffee, and then not know all about it.

THE BUYING OF COFFEE.

The question is whether it is better to buy our green coffee and roast it ourselves, or get someone else to do it for us, or to buy all our coffee roasted. In buying our coffee roasted it will take us very much longer to get a thorough knowledge of the coffee business, and then, too, after the bean is roasted it is very hard to tell what kind it is, as there are so many kinds that look alike when roasted, and at the same time a great difference in the quality. We are just as liable to pay 30 cents a pound for a coffee not worth more than from 20 to 23 cents as we are to get the actual value. You might say: How do you make that out? Well; it is just this way. There are quite a number of the lower-grade coffees with a very good flavor that are, when roasted, almost identical in appearance to coffees worth 10 cents a pound more.

I might instance the much-abused Java coffee. There is not enough of this coffee grown to supply the world with the quantity that is used as Java, and I believe I am within the limit when I say that two-thirds of the coffee sold as Java never saw Java. Of course, the coffees substituted fill the bill all right in a good many instances, but very often are much inferior in comparison. To handle coffee profitably to ourselves we need to make a study of it, so as to know what kinds will suit the tastes of our customers, and how to blend the better and cheaper kinds so as to produce the most satisfactory results. The coffee houses blend all their coffees. Why should not the retailer do likewise? To do this successfully it is necessary to and this takes time and experience. But we will be amply repaid for the trouble and attention given along this line. There are a great range of coffees on the market and the best thing to do is to find out what are the best kinds suited to our trade.

THE BEST KINDS OF COFFEE.

Mocha, Java, Plantation Ceylon, Ceylon, Jamaica, and Maracaibo coffee are amongst the best qualities, and would be classed high-grade coffees, particularly the first four named. True, Mocha coffee is not easy to get as there are a number of coffees that closely resemble it in the green bean that are substituted for it, making it difficult to know whether you have the true one or not. It is only by drawing it after being roasted that it can be detected, and then only a man of a good deal of experience could tell the difference. Java coffee is often imitated and in buying the green bean great care must be taken, as very often inferior South-American coffees are doctored up to look like the real thing. Sometimes they are steamed and bleached, and, then again, they may be dyed to imitate the color of the natural Java. But these will always show in roasting, as the heat brings out their true character, and on drawing them we will find the flavor rank to what a Java would be.

There are a good many South-American coffees that look very much like Plantation Ceylon, and also the Ceylon, and are often sold as such, but after being roasted the flavor will be found to be wanting in quality.

THE PLANTATION CEYLON COFFEE

is one of the best high-grade coffees on the market for flavor and strength, but it is hard to get, and as the price is high, it is not used a great deal. The Ceylon bean is very similar in appearance to the Plantation, but is a lighter green in color. When roasted they look very much alike, but the Ceylon is a little lighter in flavor than the former.

FINE GUATEMALA COFFEE

is very similar in appearance to the Ceylon, and when roasted, too, looks very like it but is lacking in body, but the flavor is good. It costs a good deal less than the Ceylon. One trouble with this coffee is that it is hard to duplicate when you get a good one.

MARACAIBO

is, I believe, the best all-round coffee in the market in the cheaper grades; that is the better class of them. They are very hard to distinguish from Java when roasted, as the bean has much the same general appearance as the former. This is the coffee that comprises the greater part of the coffee sold as Java. It is a good-flavored coffee, and costs much less than the former and therefore is profitable to handle. It makes a very fine coffee to blend with higher-grade coffees, and for that matter with any grade, and alone, if you get a fine one, the flavor is good in the cup. It is the best quality at a low price in the market.

JAMAICA COFFEES,

if you get them good, are very useful for blending purposes, as the flavor is one that will go well with nearly any other. It costs more than Maracaibo, and good ones are harder to get, and for roasting do not, as a general thing, turn out any better than the former. Rios, Santos, Bogotas and Mexican coffees are the better low-priced kinds.

RIO COFFEE

is very extensively used by the German trade who buy a good deal green, and do their own roasting at home. This coffee has a flavor peculiar to itself, and unless freshly roasted the taste is not very palatable, although, at the same time, it suits a great many people. It is a great deal used in blends to reduce the cost, but its place is amongst the cheaper grades. The last three-named coffees are much better in flavor and retain their flavor better. They are nice looking coffees when roasted, and can be made very useful in reducing the cost of good blends without destroying the flavor of the others with which they are mixed. In fact, they will help very materially some of the finer-flavored coffees that lack body.

Some adopt the plan of buying their coffee green and getting some reliable house to roast it for them, getting them to store it and have it roasted as required. This is as in this way you can tell what you are getting and know that it is right. We can thus have more confidence in taking it up and thus increase our trade. We can also regulate the blending of our coffee to suit our own particular trade. We also know by this way of doing that everyone else has not the same as we have.

CUP QUALITY.

We find that it is a great help to try the cup quality of our different coffees, as by this means, when changing a blend, we can form a better idea what flavors will go best together, as without this knowledge we might get kinds together that would work one against the other, instead of improving the others all round.

BLENDING.

In blending, it is our customer's taste that is to be considered. As some like the light liquoring coffees, while others like the heavier ones. At the same time we must see that our margin of profit is a respectable one. Our experience in the handling of coffee has extended over a number of years. Having always bought the green bean and done our own roasting, we believe it is the most satisfactory way to handle coffee, both for profit and for the satisfaction in knowing you have coffee roasted to suit your trade.

THE ROASTING PROCESS

is a very interesting one, and there is a great deal to learn about it. Great care has to be taken to avoid burning, as the loss of a batch in this way would be rather costly, and it takes very little to do that at the latter part of the roasting, particularly with a hot fire. Some coffees roast very much easier than others, and some are very hard to get roasted evenly, owing to the uneven sizes of the beans. The average shrinkage is about 15 per cent. The extent or height to which a coffee is to be roasted depends largely on the tastes of your customers, as some want it dark in color, while others like it light. As soon as a batch has reached the desired color and crispness it should be dumped into a box with a heavy wire bottom or spread out to cool as quickly as possible, and as soon as cool should be put in the air-tight cans to preserve the flavor.

THE HIGHER ROASTED COFFEES

appear to be gaining favor, as I believe they will retain the flavor longer than the lighter roasted ones, and we think the drinking quality is better also. In the sale of coffee it should be kept in air-tight cans, and too great care cannot be taken in keeping it away from the air, as if it is exposed to the air it will soon get flat and the flavor will leave it.

THE USE OF CHICORY

in moderation in making up of coffee mixtures is a great help to improve the profit on it, and not used to excess will improve the flavor of the blend. Some customers do not like it put in at all, so we have to govern ourselves accordingly. Coffee cannot be ground too fresh, as the fresher it is when it reaches the customers the better they will be suited. If careful in this respect we are bound to increase our trade.

BRAZILIAN COFFEE.

The Brazilian Review, a commercial paper published in Rio Janeiro, says: "We venture to predict that there will be no alteration of the tariff in favor of United States flour this year. If the States want to put a duty on coffee, which they do not, such a concession would not prevent them doing so, and a duty on coffee would hurt American consumers much more than our producers. The United States cannot and probably never will do without Brazilian coffee, which constitutes three-quarters of the whole world's production, and is the cheapest in the world. In no country in the world except Brazil is a yield of from 80 to 150 arrobas for 1,000 trees obtainable, and against that neither Mexico, with all the Antilles thrown in, nor Venezuela, can ever compete."

SHINE BY THE TON.

To measure a shine by the ton would seem to be an impossible task. But it is done. One day recently Messrs. Morse Brothers, of Canton, Mass., received orders for more than ninety tons of Rising Sun stove polish and Sun Paste stove polish. It is almost impossible to calculate the thousands upon thousands of stoves upon which this polish is used when but a single day's sales of this celebrated shiner figure up to nearly one hundred tons.

Our own correspondent writes as follows from Barrington Passage, under date of Sept 10: "An abundance of canned lobsters are reported to be stored at the various outports between here and Yarmouth, awaiting the orders of Yarmouth brokers to whom they have been sold for delivery, but the packers do not receive payment until delivery is taken, and are complaining at slow movement and low prices. One firm (Parker, Eakins & Co., Yarmouth) are said to have 1,500 cases at Wood's Harbor alone. Buyers from Roberts, Simpson & Co. (London and Halifax) and DeLong, Seaman & Co. #### SERIOUS BLUNDER.

A good story is told of a Pittsfield grocery clerk, who by a slight mistake interfered seriously with the feast at a wedding in that city not long ago. It was a very natural though somewhat embarrassing error for the clerk to make, and but for its timely discovery, even more annoyance would have resulted than actually did occur. It was on the programme to have a sizable wedding cake and one of the family was despatched to the grocery house for a certain quantity of cinnamon with which to flavor the cake and also some of the other things incident to the affair. The clerk who took the order readily put up the package and it was taken home, the contents being used in the preparation of the viands. It occurred to one of the members of the family on the morning of the happy event, after the cake and other articles had been prepared, that it would be a good idea to make a test of the articles to see how toothsome and delicious they were. The test was timely, for it was then discovered that a great mistake had been made. The taster screamed with pain and surprise, hurriedly called for water and then the situation became apparent. Instead of the cinnamon the not very careful clerk had gotten hold of the wrong can and substituted red pepper which resembles the cassia and sent that to the house instead. The pepper had found its way, not only into the cake but other articles, and for a time the atmosphere towards the clerk was about as warm as the mouth of the taster. There was a hurried conference, another grocery house was visited and by dint of hard work the wedding feast was supplied with the proper articles. Care was taken that all the condiments were duly sampled before being placed in the food where intended. The clerk is now wondering why his employer has lost a good customer and he may be put in the rounds for another situation.—New England Grocer.

If this ever happened, and I have my doubts if it did, the clerk must have been "off his trolley." Any man in the grocery business who would put up cayenne pepper for ground cinnamon has certainly mistaken his vocation. Let him try carrying bricks or shovelling coal, but perhaps he would get them mixed.

A QUESTION OF CUSTOMERS.

"J.C.M." writes: Which do you consider the best customers, the wealthy or the poor?

Give me the respectable middle class, the artisans. When wages are good, they buy freely, are not fastidious and pay promptly. The wealthy vacate for a long season during the summer, and, as a rule, object to short accounts. True, they use a class of goods on which there is a good margin of profit, but which, on the other hand, is more likely to spoil or waste. They seem to think the grocer under a great obligation for their patronage; that he must be very humble to retain the custom of these people, who by chance or circumstance have become wealthy. The poor or cheap class of trade is undesirable. No man ever made much money out of this class. He must do a large amount of work for a small return in profits. But give me the mechanic before the aristocrat every time. There are no frills about his buying. He uses a good class of goods, and pays for them promptly without ostentation. The sales are easily made to him and his good wife, and they are a pleasure to serve. The clerk has his duty to perform, and that is to adapt himself to the customer. There are people you can tell by a glance what quality of goods they are likely to buy. Some you must serve with great deference, while others you feel perfectly free to talk familiarly with regarding your goods, though you may have met them only once. This is one of the fine points about salesmanship—the art of judging your customers' needs.

THE WIFE IN THE STORE.

"S.S." writes: Should the wife of a grocer work in the store?

This is a question for the grocer and his wife to settle. It depends upon the wife. There are women who are a great help to their husbands engaged in the grocery business. They take an interest in the business, and have business ability which they use for the advancement of the business. Speaking generally, I do not approve of the wife of a merchant assisting in the store, unless the business is so small it will not pay for a clerk; but there are women of such exceptional business ability assisting their husbands in grocery stores that one wonders what would happen the business if they withdrew, for they are the chief support. There is a growing tendency among grocers to employ female help because they work cheaper than men. To my mind this is a mistake. I have no objection to girls having charge of a candy counter, but I think they are out of place selling general groceries. To me this always appeared the work of a man, who should be trained for his business.

BUSINESS DURING "FAIR WEEK"

"W.B.C.": We are having a "fall fair" next week, what should we do for more business?

In the village fair there is an excellent opportunity to advertise your business. Have your windows well trimmed for the occasion. Place more goods to the front (seasonable requirements), and clean up the store. Use price tickets. Have some nice cards printed advertising your store. It is wonderful how at fair times people appreciate these things. Take time to say "Good day" or "How are you, Mr. and Mrs. ——" to people you have not seen for some time. That kind of advertising pays. It is remarkable how a little attention will please most people. Be prepared with holiday goods. Have fruits of all kinds, including bananas, oranges, etc. Basket grapes sell well, peanuts, candy, etc. It is a special time to educate your customers regarding your store and your goods. Try and give them as favorable an impression as possible. Have plenty of help in your store. See that people are promptly served. May you have a very successful business. Let me know how you get along.

SEASONABLE WINDOW DISPLAYS.

"F.W." asks: What goods are now seasonable to make a window display?

This is pickling and preserving time. People are buying vinegars, gem jars and fruits. New canned goods are commencing to come in. It is easy to put in a seasonable window, only one has to change it often, as the heat and flies are not yet things of the past. I saw a nice tea window a few days ago announcing the arrival of new Japan tea. So many new goods are coming in now there is no difficulty in arranging an attractive window. Nothing adds to the effectiveness like well-written cards and price tickets. These are the essentials, as goods only cause the customer to inquire about the price, or they may have the bad impression they are dearer than they really are. Always have price tickets, because it is often the price that sells the goods.

THE PRICE OF PEACHES.

"Chas. B." writes of the high price of good peaches this season.

Yes, they have been high in price, but, then, plums have been exceptionally low. Consequently there have been sold more plums and less peaches. Pears are a good crop and cheap, so that people will, after all that has been said about the scarcity of fruit, be well supplied. It appears to me the demand for fruit is becoming greater each season. Families in humble circumstances are putting down, for their own use, six, eight and ten baskets, who, a few years ago, would have been satisfied if they had two baskets of fruit preserved for winter use. Every season, among one's own customers, this increase in the use of fruit is noted. There can be no question about its healthfulness and economy as a food.

Henry Wilson, grocer, Oakville, Ont., has built a new store, into which he expects to move next week.

TRADE IN COUNTRIES OTHER THAN OUR OWN.

THE Indian tea crop is believed, from statistics privately compiled, to have been 10,000,000 lb. less than last year at the end of July, and the probabilities point to a still further deficiency.

CALIFORNIAN CANNED FRUITS

A press despatch from San Francisco says: The canned fruit market continues very strong, with light stocks generally reported. Some canners are holding cling-stone peaches and plums at an advance on account of the growing scarcity. The tomato pack will be good unless frost comes. It is now believed that the fruit pack will be larger than last year. No buying from England is reported.

THE MALAGA JORDAN-ALMOND CROP.

The United States consul at Malaga, Spain, writing under date of August 21, says: "The first sales of Jordan almonds of this year's crop have just been effected in Malaga at prices ranging from 27 to 32s. ($6.56 to $7 80) per arroba of 25 lb.

"Few almonds were offered, and these were only of the smallest to medium sizes. The purchasers were local merchants, who will hold the almonds for export. Some of the exporters have issued circulars announcing that there is an unusually small crop of Jordans, and predicting even higher prices than the unusually high ones of last year. Those who are in the best position to know, however, state that the crop is as good as, if not better than, that of last year. This would mean from 80,000 to 85,000 boxes of 25 to 28 lb. each. Unfortunately, there is always great difficulty in knowing anything positive about the crop of Jordan almonds, because the growers—who are, in the main, peasants, living on the hills and in valleys—refuse to give correct information. One thing is sure: However abundant the crop may be, they are certain to shrug their shoulders and say it is the opposite.

"Last year, there was a valid reason for the high prices paid for Jordan almonds. All over Europe the almond crop failed, and dealers everywhere felt the necessity of buying the much-sought Jordans quickly. Hence the unusual prices. This year, there is an extraordinarily-large crop of almonds throughout Europe, and particularly in the famous Bari district of Italy, which is the principal seat of the European almond market. None the less, the Jordan almonds—which, as a matter of fact, do not exist outside the provinces of Malaga, Granada and Almeria, and are exported only from Malaga—are being marketed at opening prices even a little higher than the previously-unheard-of rates of last year. It would seem, then, that these almonds must be considered as something apart from all others. It remains to be seen whether or not the demand, which comes almost exclusively from England and the United States, will be sufficiently active to keep up the remarkably high opening prices."

BROOM CORN ADVANCING.

Broom corn has been advancing rapidly of late at the growing centres, owing to competition among speculative buyers. Many, if not all, the large manufacturers, both in the United States and Canada, have secured their supplies of broom corn, but there is still a good demand from buyers who intend holding the product for a raise in price, which they anticipate on account of crop shortages, the general report being that the yield this year will be fully one-third under the average.

"Will the advance in broom corn affect the price of brooms here?" asked THE CANADIAN GROCER of E. C. Boeckh, of Boeckh Bros. & Co., Toronto.

"Not at present, anyway," was the reply. "As we secured our supplies of corn before the advance, we will not need to put up our prices for some time to come. It is possible that an advance may be caused before the next crop is harvested, though."

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Wm. Dobie, manager of E. W. Gillett's Canadian branch, Toronto, left that city on Tuesday on a business trip to Chicago, Denver and San Francisco. He will return via Victoria, Vancouver and Winnipeg.

Lieut.-Col. John Bayne MacLean, president of the MacLean Publishing Co., Limited, and commander of the Duke of York's Royal Canadian Hussars, Montreal, has returned to Toronto after a two weeks' absence furnishing escorts to their Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of York and His Excellency the Governor-General.

A SERIOUS SUSPENSION.

One of the most serious financial troubles of the year is reported from St. John, N.B. Merritt Bros. & Co., wholesale grocers, of that city, have suspended, owing to unsatisfactory returns from outside investments. The liabilities are said to be very heavy, and it is feared other firms, especially retailers and others having accounts on their books may be affected. Three firms, Puddington & Merritt and H. Hoyt, retail grocers, and F. C. Colwell & Co., manufacturing confectioners, St. John, have already suspended.

General surprise, as well as sympathy, is expressed by the trade, as Merritt Bros. & Co. were considered one of the shrewdest and most solid concerns in St. John.

SHIPPING SALMON VIA VANCOUVER.

According to The Vancouver World, the port of Vancouver seems to be taking great strides these days. Of late, there has been competition between the different trans-continental lines having terminal ports on the Pacific for the salmon-carrying business.

Vancouver and the C.P.R. have always proved themselves capable of looking after the business naturally belonging to them, and, of late, have been reaching out for even more than this, and have been quite successful in their efforts. Within one week, fully 15,000 cases of salmon, which had been shipped from Alaska to San Francisco, was reshipped from the latter port to Vancouver, from which place it was sent east on the C.P.R.

B.C. HALIBUT FOR TASMANIA.

Steamer New England, arrived at Vancouver, on September 19 from the halibut fishing grounds with 75,000 lb. of fish. Mr. Morton, the curator of the museum of Tasmania, who is in Vancouver, is much interested with the manner of the halibut fishing and the size and appearance of the fish itself, and will take back with him to Tasmania some specimens of this product of the sea which is obtained off the British Columbian coast.

TEA ROSE DRIP SYRUP.

Encouraged by the success which met their maple syrup, the Imperial Maple Syrup Co., Montreal, are pushing a new table syrup called the Tea Rose drips. It is put up in handsome gilded tins and prepared in such a careful way that it is claimed to be the very perfection of a syrup for table use. It is warranted to please the customer or the money refunded. The wholesalers sell it at $3.30 a case of six-gallon tins, $3.80 per case of 12 halves and $4.30 a case of 24 quarts.

Among the exports from Canada to the United States last week were 27,000 lb. of "Salada" Ceylon tea. This quantity was made up in shipments to Boston, Rochester and Detroit.

WEST INDIA EXHIBIT.

SPEAKING of the West Indian exhibit at the Nova Scotia Provincial Exhibition at Halifax, collected by Pickford & Black, The Maritime Merchant says: "From the Island of Antigua there are grocery yellow crystals, and grocery white crystals made directly from cane juice. There are also a 96 per cent. crystal for refiners' use and a refiners' molasses sugar and vaccum pan molasses for use in making alcohol or cattle food. Samples too, have been sent of Muscovado sugar for grocery purposes, concentrated lime juice, and Muscovado molasses. The exhibit of jams, jellies, syrups, and preserved fruits is also very interesting.

"From Dominica there is an assortment of tropical fruits such as limes, lemons, citrons, oranges, etc., put up in various ways; also the cocanaut and its products, nutmegs, mace, ginger, cocoa, coffee, starches, jellies, and preserved fruits. At the close of the Halifax Exhibition the Dominica exhibit will probably be sent to The Canadian Manufacturers' Association at Toronto.

"There are no less than 16 cases of assorted exhibits from the Islands of Trinidad and Tobago, including many specimens of tropical productions not hitherto exhibited in this country. We trust the effort made to enlighten our people with regard to the natural resources of the British West Indies will not prove barren of results. By becoming better acquainted with the products of these islands our trade relations will eventually be extended."

A CHAIN OF ADVANCES.

FOR some weeks market reports have told of the coming light crop of corn and now as the harvesting season is upon us, and the worst fears are realized, we are brought face to face with several consequent advances in prices. Corn itself is quoted almost 20c. higher than it was this time last year, and latest Chicago reports say "strong and active."

First and foremost comes the rise in the price of hog products. For some months the supply of lard and pork has been light and prices have been steadily advancing. Now it is feared that the scarcity will be strongly accentuated by the higher prices of corn and the market is in a feverish state of excitement. Last week lard was selling on the Montreal market at $2.35 to $2.40 a pail; now, although we have heard of one dealer who is willing to supply his regular customers at $2.45, the market price is $2.50 to $2.55. One holder who let his stock go at $2.50 is sorry as he is confident that he could have obtained $2.60.

Last week we reported a 50 cent. rise in the price of Chicago barrel pork; this has been followed by a further rise of $1 this week. Medium clear mess pork is now worth $24.50 in Montreal and heavy, 30 to 40 pieces, $25.

Dealers report great difficulty in securing supplies from the Canadian packers. The monthly statistics compiled by the Chicago Board of Trade when published on October 1 will be found very interesting; it is expected that they will show a still further decrease in the world's stock of available supplies.

In sympathy with the strong market for kettle lard are the advances in compound lard. Both Montreal makers have raised their prices this week, Fairbank's quotations taking two jumps, the first  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb., and the second  $\frac{1}{2}$ c. In small lots, wholesalers now quote \$2.01 per pail on "Boar's Head" brand of refined lard compound. We understand that business at lower figures is strictly and absolutely refused.

Some days ago, brooms were changed, in conformity with the higher price of broom corn. Two-string brooms that sold at $1.65 are now worth $1.80, and others that were $1.80 are now $2; three-strings that sold at $2.20 are now $2.45, and four-strings that were worth $2.40 are now quoted at $2.65.

"Perfection" corn syrup has advanced  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb. for the same reason. In barrels, it is now quoted at  $3\frac{1}{4}$ c.; in half-barrels at  $3\frac{3}{4}$ c., and in quarter-barrels at  $3\frac{1}{2}$ c.; 38  $\frac{1}{2}$ -lb. pails bring \$1.50, and 25-lb. pails \$1.10. The price was already comparatively high, and dealers think that this latest advance will tend to increase the consumption of molasses.

As a conclusion to this list of the week's advances caused by the high price of corn, we will mention a rise of  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb. in all laundry, culinary and rice starches. New lists have just been issued to this effect.

The capitalists who have gone in for the tinning of ants will not, it is to be hoped, encourage others to go in for the tinning of mothers-in-law.

SHORT RUN OF FISH.

SOMETIMES THE CANADIAN GROCER indulges in a fish yarn and we will not endanger our reputation should we indulge in one just now as the season for pickled fish is opening and dealers are wondering whether they have too much or too little canned fish to run them through the winter.

Herring is a short catch and will be scarce. A week ago it was feared that packers of canned herring would not be able to fill 25 per cent. of their orders, but the latest news from Nova Scotia is that there has been a late run of herring and that there is a chance that half the orders taken may be filled. There has been an extraordinary demand for kippered herring during the past few weeks and that there is a late run is cheerful news. Although wholesalers are paying about 20c. per case for their fish more than they did last year, we understand they are still selling at the old figures, $4.00 per case.

Pickled herring are going to be scarce and dear. This is the latest news from Halifax. Montreal dealers are now selling at $5.00 to $5.50 per barrel, and $2.75 to $3.00 per halves for Scotias, and $5.25 to $5.75 for Labrador fish.

Canned lobsters are much better stock than they were last year and sales are heavier. Prices range about the same, $11.00 to $14.00 per case. Canned haddies are about a three-quarter pack. While sardines are coming forward slowly, we understand the pack is up to the mark; Canadian sardines are worth $3.75 to $4.00 per case. Dealers were looking forward with some eagerness to the tunny fish that The Thistle Canning Co. were to put up, but none of these fish have put in an appearance this year. There is also no butterfish.

Green cod are very scarce and the price is advancing. Wholesalers now ask $5.00 to $5.50 per barrel, and are firm in their views. New British Columbian salmon will be on the local markets in a few days; barrels will be worth $11.00, and $6.00 for half-barrels.

The little cool weather we have had lately has stimulated quite a good demand for fish and if the supply were only greater dealers would anticipate a good trade.

CALLING FOR THE TEA COMMISSIONER'S HEAD.

THE CANADIAN GROCER is in receipt of a marked copy of The Ceylon Standard, of August 19, containing an editorial calling for the dismissal of Mr. William Mackenzie, the Ceylon tea commissioner, who, through his frequent visits to Canada, is well known to the trade in this country. The article is a lengthy one, and from it we glean a few extracts:

"Mr. Mackenzie has not," it says, "been a success, and the results are the proof of this. * * * The appointment we consider from a pure business standpoint unsatisfactory * * * It would have been far better in the beginning if the commissioner had been a shrewd American man of business."

The sentence quoted give the gist of the article, which also contains some criticisms of a letter from Mr. P. C. Larkin, which appears in the same issue of the paper in defence of Mr. Mackenzie. With that part of the article we do not, however, need to deal.

We cannot say whether Mr. Mackenzie is the best man in the world for the position he holds, simply because we do not know. Possibly The Standard may have someone in its eye who may be better, although it does not give any intimation of such. What it wants is an American.

Candidly speaking, we do not think The Standard has made out a good case. It declares that results show that Mr. Mackenzie has not been a success. But by what process of logical reasoning it arrives at that conclusion we are at some loss to understand.

The quantity of Ceylon tea taken by North America during 1900 did not, it is true, increase at as great a ratio as during some of the preceding years, but when we come to consider that it was 110 per cent. larger than five years before, the conclusion must be that there has been a measure of success quite respectable. The following table, compiled from a report issued in May last by Gow, Wilson & Stanton, of London, England, shows the quantity of Ceylon tea taken by North America during the past five years:

CEYLON TEA TAKEN BY NORTH AMERICA.

|           | Quantity in lb. |
|-----------|-----------------|
| 1900..... | 9,173,824       |
| 1899..... | 8,289,376       |
| 1898..... | 7,636,995       |
| 1897..... | 5,698,596       |
| 1896..... | 4,364,510       |

A report recently issued shows that the quantity taken during the first six months of the present year compares well with that of last year, for, although less came direct than during the same period of 1900, the loss was more than made up by what came by Great Britain.

Turning to the official trade statistics of the Dominion we cannot find anything, as far as Canadian trade is concerned, that would indicate that Mr. Mackenzie has been the failure The Standard appears to think he has been. The figures therein given bring us up to June 30, 1901, and they show that within the last four years our imports of Ceylon tea, direct, and via Great Britain and other countries have nearly doubled. This will be gathered from a glance at the following table:

IMPORTS OF CEYLON TEA INTO CANADA.

|                         | 1901.       | 1898.       |
|-------------------------|-------------|-------------|
| From Great Britain..... | $2,454,394 | $1,414,934 |
| " Ceylon district.....  | 3,521,860   | 1,891,758   |
| " Other countries.....  | 274,709     | .....       |
|                         | $6,250,963 | $3,306,692 |

The poor prices which have ruled during the last few years on low-grade Ceylon teas, our contemporary surely does not charge against Mr. Mackenzie. Over-production is the root of that evil.

Peradventure, The Standard is not satisfied because Japan teas have not been driven from this continent. But if Japan teas are arriving in undiminished quantities the same cannot be said of China black teas. And as far as Canada alone is concerned the latter have been so displaced by the Ceylon-grown article that they are no longer a factor in the market.

We fear that The Standard's case is of the kind that judges usually refuse to allow to go to the jury.

FALL EXPORTATIONS OF EGGS.

Egg exporters have commenced to take their eggs out of pickle and all packers are unanimous in the conviction that the goods never turned out in better condition. They were packed in cool weather last spring, a fact which accounts for their good quality now. This year there ought to be none of last year's complaints about poor eggs from the British markets, for the eggs will certainly leave Canada in the best state of preservation.

The demand for eggs, which has been good all season, slackened a little this week, but, while the Englishmen write gloomy accounts of their market, they continue to buy, paying 7s. 4d. for fresh goods and making large contracts at 6s. 10d. for pickled stock.

THE BEST ALWAYS PAYS.

A merchant cannot expect to hold his customers unless his merchandise is good; nor can an employe expect to hold his position unless he renders good service. It always pays in the long run to sell good goods and to render good service.

CANNED SALMON TRADE WITH WEST INDIES.

BRITISH Columbian exchanges to hand announce that there is still quite a run of sockeye salmon on the Fraser river, and that the few canneries that have not closed down are busy supplementing the already good pack put up. Quite a large quantity of salmon is also being frozen.

It will be remembered that up to two or weeks ago the pack on the Fraser was 876,000 cases, the largest on record.

With the increase in the output of canned salmon it will be necessary for Canada to cultivate more vigorously than ever the export trade in this commodity. The bulk of the pack, as everyone knows, goes to Great Britain, but there are other countries which consume quite a little canned salmon whose trade no special effort is made to secure. In the West Indies, for example, there is quite a consumption of canned salmon, and a gentleman who is well acquainted with that part of the world informs us that a good business in that particular product is possible if special efforts were made to push it.

Already, in fact, the thin end of the wedge has been inserted, for, in 1900, Canada exported 2,922 lb. of canned salmon to the British West Indies, and a little hammering would doubtless drive the wedge further home.

THE BRITISH TEA DUTY AND ITS HISTORY.

WE are glad to find, remarks Home and Colonial Mail, that the question of the tea duty is not allowed to slumber. The increased duty was a blow to the industry which there have been attempts to minimize, but no apathy on the subject or acceptance of the inevitable can alter the fact that an act of injustice has been committed against the tea grower. In a letter to The Financial Times, "Kar Guzar" deals with this duty question, and he protests against this burden on the producer. He says: "Messrs. Finlay & Co., in their circular addressed to the shareholders in their companies, and published in your issue of the 10th instant, rightly stated that the sudden increase of 50 per cent. to the duty previously levied on tea has prejudicially affected the industry. They place the amount of their losses by it at £60,000, and at the rate of 2½d. per lb. The lower the tea produced is classed the greater is its producer's loss. The quality of tea depending upon the lay of the land, the altitude at which it is grown and the qualities contained in the soil, it is not in the producer's power to vary its quality at pleasure; he may pick finer or coarser, he may improve the appearance of the tea, but its chemical qualities will remain the same to the end of the chapter. We are told that the average price of Indian tea before the levying of the surcharge was 8d. without duty. To get an average of 8d. per lb. much tea must have been sold at 4d. per lb., some at 1s., but we must not think because one producer received 12d. a lb. for his tea and another received only 4d., that the one was intrinsically worth three times the price of the other. The difference in price is not regulated by its intrinsic properties—the prices the consumers pay the merchant are regulated by the relative intrinsic values of the teas—but the price the merchant pays producers by the amount of duty plus the price he can afford to pay to equalize its cup value to the consumer."

The inequality of the impost is pointed out. "The duty falls unequally on teas of different qualities, and it forces merchants to buy the higher-classed teas to the neglect of the others. A rate of duty which produces a revenue equal to 75 per cent. of the whole value of the industry, a rate of duty varying from 50 per cent. to 150 per cent., is out of all proportion to its value. The price to be paid to the producer will be reduced by every penny that the merchant will not be able to recover from the consumer. If the merchant wishes to sell two teas to the consumer, the one at double the price of the other, it will be necessary for him to purchase the lower-classed one at a third of the price of the other—hence we may conclude that every 2d. added to the duty takes a penny per lb. off the prices received for all teas below a certain value. When the duty stood at 4d. low-classed teas were handicapped 2d. per lb., and the average, or 8d. teas by 1d. Now that the duty has been raised to 6d., low-classed teas are handicapped 3d. on the pound of tea, and average teas 1½d., as against the higher-classed teas. The duty as it is now levied acts as a direct tax on the majority of us producers. The amount levied from me as a war tax I estimate at £2,000 per annum. It would have been less had the merchants not succeeded in passing so much free of increased duty and would have been greater had my teas not been in some request for outside markets. It is, I think, much to be regretted that Messrs. Finlay & Co. limited their statement to a bare chronicle of results, and did not boldly state in what manner and why the duty has borne, and is still bearing, hardly on our industry. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, when introducing his Budget, stated his reasons for having selected tea as a fit article for increased taxation (a) because it was not an article of manufacture in this country; (b) it is largely consumed, and (c) at the time of the Crimean War the duty on tea stood at 1s. 6d. per lb., and that it was promptly raised 3d. with practically no objection from any body concerned. He then went on to state that even with the addition of 2d. per lb. tea would still cost the consumer 2d. per lb. less than it cost the consumer in 1889, before the duty was reduced from 6d. to 4d. per lb., and wound up by saying that he did not think the population at large will have any very fair ground for complaint at the amount which they will be called upon to bear towards the cost of what the vast majority of them believe to be a necessary war. It is very evident from what fell from the Chancellor's lips, as from the tenor of the debate in Parliament, that the Chancellor and also Parliament intended that the tax should be levied from the tea-consuming public, and not from the producers. I am one of the vast majority who deem the war to have been a necessary war, but I deem it wrong to attempt to levy any special portion of its cost under a special tax from the persons we made war to protect. If we are to be taxed, by all means tax us, but levy the tax in such a manner that it will not act unequally in its incidence. Had the duty fallen to the lot of the consumer to pay, as it was intended it should have done, the reproach that it added to the poor man's burden would have been a just one. Why an article produced and manufactured by a large number of His Majesty's subjects residing in His Majesty's colony, as also in a dependency of the British Crown, should be taxed, and articles manufactured within the United Kingdom should be exempted, we can leave those who talk so glibly of consolidating our Empire to inquire into; the principle therein propounded found favor with Parliament, and with the rest we have no concern, and it is most certainly largely consumed."

The objections to the tax are urged. "At the time of the Crimean War the duty certainly stood at 1s. 6d., and was promptly raised 3d. per lb., but in 1850 it stood at 2s. 1d., was reduced in 1853 to 1s. 10d., and again in 1854 to 1s. 6d. per lb. Thus, when it was raised 3d. it still stood at 1d. per lb. less than it had previously done. A duty levied on trade will fall either on the consumer or the producer—in no instance on the merchant, and in some instances, as in the present instance, it may act to his direct advantage. In 1854-55 the consumers, acknowledging the necessity of levying a duty to meet war expenditure, could not fairly object to having the rate of duty raised, more particularly as the duty and surcharge together left them a penny better off than they had been in the habit of paying. Producers could not object, as the article taxed was of foreign origin, and they had no cause to object, as they had possession of the markets of the world. What they could not sell to us they could sell elsewhere; our Customs or our values did not rule their prices. Our case at the present day is wholly different. The major portion of the tea brought for sale to the English market is of British production, owned by British subjects. It is not an article that can be increased or decreased at will, and it is an article which spoils after a time in keeping. Our home market was, until recent times, our sole market, and is still our principal market; its prices regulate the prices for all; whatever we make must come forward, and we must accept the prices offered or not sell at all. When it was suggested in Parliament to substitute an ad valorem duty for a duty on weight, the Chancellor vetoed the suggestion mainly on the ground that it had been tried and found wanting—I presume on the ground that it left openings to the quick-witted merchant to pass his goods through the Customs house at lower values than he should do. I cannot help thinking that where there is the will the way will be found, and that an industry which yields a revenue of several millions sterling is worth trying to do justice to, and for my own sake and for the sake of others, I sincerely hope the Chancellor of the Exchequer will see his way to perfecting one. For my own part, I believe a duty of 4½d. on all teas valued at 6d. and under and an ad valorem duty of 75 per cent. on all teas from 6d. to 10d. (all teas over 10d. paying 7½d.) would more than make good the loss the revenue might incur from the acts of the quick-witted merchants, and if the Customs house officials find difficulty in assessing duty on the fractions of a penny, fractions of a penny might count as one."

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, September 26, 1901.

GROCERIES.

A FAIRLY-GOOD trade is to be reported this week in staple goods. Sugars are not as active as they were. Although the retailers are still buying fairly well, there is an indisposition to anticipate wants on account of the weak condition of the raw markets. The feature of the canned-goods trade is the withdrawal of association prices on canned tomatoes, and the packers will not accept orders for futures, except at open figures. Generally speaking, the canned-goods trade is not active. Some shipments of new-pack canned salmon have come to hand this week, and have been shipped out to the retail trade. Invoices of further shipments are to hand. There is a fairly good trade being done in coffees, although the outside markets are a little irregular at the moment. The firmness in Ceylon teas noted last week has been fully maintained, and this week's advices note higher prices in Japans and China greens and China blacks. Spices are meeting with a fair request and prices are firm, as a rule. Neither syrups nor molasses have improved much as far as the demand is concerned, but corn syrups are  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. dearer. Starch is also  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb. dearer. Currants are slightly firmer in the primary market, while Valencias are easier. Shipments of new currants via New York are on this market. Comadre figs are slightly easier in the primary market.

CANNED GOODS.

The feature of the canned-goods trade is the withdrawal of prices on tomatoes by the syndicate, and the brokers have been instructed to accept no further orders for futures, except at open figures. As there is no disposition to buy under such conditions very little business is being done. Reports which have been received from the packers state that the pack of tomatoes is quite light, and that higher prices are probable. Although the ruling price for new pack tomatoes now on the market is 85c. to the retail trade; there are still some lots of old goods which are being offered at 80c., and the little business that is being done is chiefly in last season's goods at the figures named. New season's corn is also being delivered this week, the ruling quotation for which is 80c. Peas run at from 80c. upwards. There is very little being done in canned fruits, and in canned meats the demand is seasonably light. A few brands of new season's canned salmon have been received on the market during the last few days, but at the time of writing they have practically been distributed among the retail trade. Invoices of further shipments are, however, to hand, and the goods are naturally expected to arrive within the next few days. Quotations are: Fraser River sock-eyes, $1.42½ for 5-case lots and over, and $1.45 for less quantities; Northern sockeye, $1.25 to $1.30; pink salmon, 95c. to $1; cohoes, $1.05 to $1.10.

COFFEE.

A fairly-good business is being done on the local market in both green and ground coffees. We still quote green Rio coffees as follows: No. 7, 7½c. per lb.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8½c.; No. 4, 9¼c. The outside markets are, at the time of writing, somewhat irregular, due—in part, at least—to a fall in the rate of exchange.

See pages 31 and 32 for
Toronto, Montreal, and St.
John prices current.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The feature of the syrup market is an advance of  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb. in the price of the corn description. We now quote: Barrels, 3¼c.; half-barrels, 3¾c.; kegs, 3½c.; 3-gal. pails, \$1.50, and 2 gal. pails, \$1.10. In molasses, there is very little business being done, but the market in New Orleans is decidedly firm. It is estimated that the crop of low-grade molasses to be marketed is only 20,000 bbls.

STARCH.

On account of the increased cost of corn the starch manufacturers have been compelled to advance their prices  $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb. Laundry starches which were formerly quoted at 4¼c. are now 5c., and so on.

SPICES.

There is a good trade being done in all kinds of spices, and prices rule firm. This latter remark applies, perhaps, more particularly to pepper than to any other line.

NUTS.

According to advices to hand this week shelled walnuts are slightly easier in Bordeaux. A little business on importation account is being done in Grenoble and Marbot walnuts. The price of nuts, generally, promises to rule much lower this season than last.

SUGAR.

Very little sugar is being bought this week by the wholesale trade, there being an expectation, in view of the weak condition of the raw markets, that there will be a reduction here shortly in the refined article. They are, therefore, only buying for immediate requirements. The retail demand, while not as large as it was, is still keeping up fairly well. At the time of writing, prices here are unchanged at last week's quotations. The meltings in the United States last week were 32,000 tons and the receipts 37,451 tons. At the end of last week the stocks in Europe and America were 845,181 tons, against 498,066 tons last year at the same time. The beet-root sugar market has made another record, as far as low prices are concerned, the quotation now being 7s. 6d., the lowest yet touched. The demand for refined sugar in the United States is light, and the refiners there are catching up with their orders, which they were hitherto somewhat late in filling.

CANDIED PEELS.

Shipments of these are to hand, and are being distributed among the trade. We quote: Lemon peel, 11 to 12½c.; orange, 12½ to 13c.; citron, 16 to 18c.

TEAS.

The situation in teas shows further improvement. Fine Japan teas have been firm all the way through and a good many orders have recently been taken, but some of the houses here have been notified that the shippers will not be able to fill any more orders at the same price. They were also informed that orders for low-grade teas could not be filled except at an advance of 1c. per lb. Local Wholesale houses report a fairly good demand for Japan teas on retail account. There has been some business doing in Ceylon teas for importation, and the firmness in prices noted last week has evidently become more pronounced. A cable received on Tuesday from Calcutta stated that the market there was strong with an upward tendency, especially in regard to low-grade teas. A cable received this week from China stated that green teas there were  $\frac{1}{2}$  to 1c. higher on the cheap and fine grades respectively. China blacks are also firm and much dearer than they were a year ago.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRENTS—The feature of this market, locally, is the arrival of a small shipment of new season's fruits. The demand for these is fair. They came via New York, and are quoted at  $7\frac{1}{2}$  to 8c. for fine Filiatras, and  $8\frac{1}{4}$  to 9c. for Patras. Wholesalers are booking quite a few orders to arrive in October at  $6\frac{1}{2}$  to 7c. for fine Filiatras, and  $5\frac{3}{4}$  to  $6\frac{1}{2}$ c. to arrive in November. Vostizzas, to arrive later, are quoted at 8 to 9c. The market in Greece is strong, and on Monday last, the cable announced an advance of 6d.

VALENCIA RAISINS—The Valencia market is still somewhat unsettled. Although there has been no material drop in prices, importers, after the experience of the last year, are inclined to hold off. A few boxes of new fruit arrived on this market this week. With the near approach of the regular shipments of fruit, the price of old gradually recedes. The nominal quotations are 4c. for fine off-stalk and 4 to  $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. for selected, but purchases can be made at even lower figures, and there have been sales this week of old selected fruit as low as \$1 per box. Fine off-stalk to arrive by an early steamer is quoted at  $6\frac{1}{2}$  to 7c. Selected raisins to arrive by direct steamer are quoted at  $6\frac{1}{2}$ c., and fine off-stalk at 6 to  $6\frac{1}{2}$ c.

FIGS—Cable advices received this week report a little easier market for Comadre figs. Orders are still being booked for tapnet figs at  $3\frac{1}{4}$  to  $3\frac{1}{2}$ c.

PRUNES—Practically nothing is being done in prunes, and prices in California are unsettled. Californian prunes are quoted at the following: 30-40's, 8 to  $8\frac{1}{2}$ c.; 40-50's,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  to 8c.; 50-60's, 7 to  $7\frac{1}{2}$ c.; 60-70's,  $6\frac{1}{2}$  to 7c.; 70-80's, 6 to  $6\frac{1}{2}$ c.; 80-90's,  $5\frac{1}{2}$  to 6c.; 90-100's, 5 to  $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. French prunes,  $3\frac{1}{2}$  to 4c.

GREEN FRUITS.

The receipts of native fruits are steadily diminishing. Pears are about done, the only kind left being preserving pears, which are in good demand. Grapes and peaches are still coming in fairly well, as are also canteloupes, tomatoes and sweet potatoes. Cranberries were offered at $8 per bbl., the first of the season. A few pineapples are on sale at $3.50 per case. There is no change in the price of oranges, lemons or bananas. We quote: Pears, 20 to 40c. per basket; peaches, Crawfords, 50c. to $1.25; plums, 20 to 60c.; apples, 15 to 35c.; egg plant, 20 to 25c.; tomatoes, 15 to 18c.; cucumbers, 10 to 15c.; gherkins, 40 to 65c.; peppers, 25 to 50c.; grapes, in 10 lb. baskets, 15 to 50c. for Champions and 20 to 25c. for Delawares; quinces, 30 to 40c. per basket; muskmelons, 25 to 35c. per crate of 12; watermelons, 15 to 25c. each; bananas, $1.75 for 1st and 75c. to $1 for eight-hands. New Verdill lemons are offering at $3.75 to $4.25 per box, and Jamaica oranges at $6 per bbl. or $4 to $4.25 per box; cranberries, $8 per bbl.; pineapples, $3.50 per case.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS—Receipts continue light. As the cool weather has improved the demand, and as the stock arriving is of excellent quality, the market has stiffened up greatly. As high as 16c. is asked by some houses, while 15c. seems to be the general quotation.

BEANS—The market keeps steady since last week's decline, which brought the market to $2.10 for prime beans. New beans are expected to sell at about these figures.

HONEY—A good, brisk demand is reported, and prices are well maintained. We quote: 9 to 10c. for extracted clover and $1.75 to $2 for No. 1 clover comb.

DRIED APPLES—There is practically nothing doing yet in dried apples. A small quantity of last year's evaporated apples are offering at 8c., but there is little demand.

POTATOES—A few cars have been sold this week at 50 to 55c. per bushel, on track, Toronto. There is a good movement of small lots at from 60 to 70c. per bushel, according to quality.

DRESSED POULTRY—The cool weather has improved the demand and the conditions for shipping. Consequently the increased receipts are readily absorbed. Turkeys are now offering. We quote: Chickens, 45 to 50c. per pair; hens, 45 to 50c. per pair; ducks, 60 to 70c. per pair; turkeys, 10 to 11c. per lb.

LIVE POULTRY—The Canadian Produce Co., 36 and 38 Esplanade east, Toronto, will pay until October 10, for spring chickens, not less than two lb. each, 6c. per lb. For ducklings, not less than four lb. each, 4c. per lb. For hens (including last year's birds) 4c. per lb. These prices are for live weight on arrival. Crates shipped free and express paid up to 50c. per 100 lb. of chickens.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER—There is a good demand for the best dairy grades, but the great bulk of what is offering is not of the best quality, showing evidence of being held for some time, and is consequently in decidedly poor request. Prices are unchanged. We quote as follows: Dairy prints, 17 to 18c.; best tubs, 16 to  $16\frac{1}{2}$ c.; poor to medium grades, 12 to 15c.; creamery prints, 21 to 22c.; boxes, 19 to 20c.

CHEESE—Owing to speculative competition, the price at country boards has been forced up  $\frac{1}{4}$  to  $\frac{1}{2}$ c. Consequently, there is a better feeling here, and 10 to  $10\frac{1}{4}$ c. is asked for all makes.

FISH.

The demand for oysters and smoked fish has improved sufficiently to absorb the increased receipts. Fresh fish are steady and unchanged. We quote as follows: Fresh fish—Spanish mackerel,  $12\frac{1}{2}$ c.; codfish, 6c.; whitefish, 7 to  $7\frac{1}{2}$ c.; trout,  $7\frac{1}{2}$ c.; halibut, 15c.; sea salmon, 20 to 25c.; haddock, 6c.; herring, 4c.; perch, 4c.; British Columbian salmon, 20c. Smoked fish—Ciscos, \$1 per basket; Digby herring, 75 to 80c. per bundle. Prepared fish—Dried cod, in 112-lb. bundles, \$4.75 per cwt.; flitched cod, \$5 to \$5.25; boneless cod, in bricks, 5 to  $5\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb.; steak cod,  $6\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb.; shredded cod (2 doz. in box), \$1.80 per box; boneless fish, loose, in 25-lb. boxes, 4 to  $4\frac{1}{4}$ c., and 5-lb. boxes, 5c. per lb. Oysters—Standards, \$3.75 per small pail or \$1.50 per Imperial gallon; selects, \$2 per Imperial gallon.

VEGETABLES.

Gherkins, radishes and tomatoes are less plentiful than a week ago. Squashes, citrons, etc., are now offering. A good demand is noted for all lines. We quote as follows: Carrots and beets, 20c. per peck; turnips, 15 to 20c. per peck; lettuce, 20 to 30c. per doz.; radishes, 30 to 40c.; watercress, mint and parsley, 20c.; cauliflower, $1.00 to $1.25; celery, 40 to 60c.; cabbage, 25 to 50c.; corn, 6 to 10c.; cucumbers, short, 10 to 15c.; tomatoes, 15 to 25c. per basket; dry onions, $1.00 per bush.; potatoes, 60 to 70c. per bushel; gherkins, 15 to 25c. per 100; egg plant, 30 to 35c. per basket; sweet potatoes, $3.00 to $3.50 per bbl.; apples, $2.50 to $3.50 per bbl.

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN—There have been some fluctuations during the week, but there is practically no change in the price of Manitoba and Ontario wheat. Manitoba No. 1 hard is quoted at 82c. grinding in transit, or 80c. Toronto and west. Ontario wheat is quoted at 67c. at outside points, middle freights. Owing to the difference in qualities, there is a bigger range than usual in the price of wheat, barley and peas coming to the local street markets. We quote: Wheat, white and red, 68 to  $73\frac{1}{2}$ c.; goose,  $65\frac{1}{2}$  to 67c.; oats, new, 38 to 40c.; rye, 54c.; barley, 48 to 55c.; peas, 65 to 70c.

FLOUR—There is a good trade, though some buyers are only placing hand-to-mouth orders. Prices are steady. We quote on track, Toronto (bags included) as follows: Manitoba patents, $4; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.60; Ontario patents, $3.50 to $3.60; straight roller, $3.

BREAKFAST FOODS—There is a steady improvement in the demand. Prices are unchanged. We quote as follows: Standard oatmeal, $3.70 in bags, and $3.80 in bbls.; rolled oats, $3.60 in bags, and $3.70 in bbls.; rolled wheat, $2.35 in 100-lb. bbls.; cornmeal, $2.75; split peas, $4; pot barley, $4.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES—The market continues active, with prices firm. We quote: Cowhides, No. 1, 8c.; No. 2, 7c.; No. 3, 6c. Steerhides are worth 1c. more. Cured hides are quoted at  $8\frac{1}{2}$  to 9c.

SKINS—There is a good movement. Prices are unchanged. We quote: No. 1 veal, 8 lb. and up, 9c. per lb.; No. 2, 8c.; dekins, from 55 to 60c.; culls, 20 to 25c.; lambs and pelts, 50c.

WOOL—The market is not brisk, though some shipments have been made. Our quotations are: Combining fleece, washed, 12 to  $12\frac{1}{2}$ c., and unwashed,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  to 8c.

GROCERIES.

THE market has not shown such a cheery appearance for some time. There is more animation to it and dealers are quite busy. The feature of the week is the withdrawal of all quotations on tomatoes on the part of the syndicate, while we understand that corn is virtually in the same position. This act is being interpreted in different ways by different people; meanwhile prices are unchanged. The foreign raw sugar market is weaker and quotations are considerably lower, establishing another record. Corn syrup has been advanced  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. per lb., as also has corn and other starches. Brooms are from 20 to 25c. higher. In dried fruits there is not much change this week. Valencia raisins were firmer but dropped back again to the old position. Currants declined 6d., but recovered. Tarragona almonds are a little easier. Sultana raisins are gradually coming down. Lard and pork are higher, as will be seen in another column. New canned blueberries are now on the market. All cereals are high; oatmeal, pot barley and rolled oats having scored advances this week. Honey is up 2c. per lb. China green teas advanced 5 per cent. according to a late cable; Japans are cabled steady and firm. Ceylon black teas are also climbing.

SUGAR.

The refined sugar market may be described as steady, but the foreign markets for raw beet are decidedly weak, London being cabled at 7s. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., a decline of 5 $\frac{1}{4}$ d. on the week. This is a new record. New York is reported steady at the moment. Locally, the demand is fairly good, but dealers still persist in buying in dribs and drabs. Granulated is selling at \$4.40 per 100 lb., and yellows at \$3.55 to \$4.25.

TEAS.

A cable received on Wednesday from Shanghai turned down a full offer and announced an advance of 5 per cent. on gunpowders. The Chinese market has been firm all season and importers were not surprised at this latest advice. It is said that teamen are sanguine holders. Dealers are now asking 16 to 22c. for pea-leaf gunpowders, 25 to 33c. for pinheads, and 11 to 14c. for cheap gunpowders. Young Hysons are also very strong. Pin-sueys now being worth 11 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 12 $\frac{1}{2}$ c. out of wholesalers' hands. Total settlements of China greens to date show a decline of over 40,000 half-chests on last year's figures. Exports are little more than half of what they were last year.

The Japan tea market has begun to recover from its weakness of the past few weeks. Importers have bought freely at the lower prices and the better demand has strengthened the market. The latest cable says: "Firm and steady."

In a jobbing way Ceylon blacks are something over 2c. higher than they were two months ago on the local market. The tendency is upward.

SYRUPS

Corn syrup has been advanced  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. per lb. this week, dealers now quoting 3 $\frac{1}{4}$  c. in bbls., 3 $\frac{3}{4}$  c. in half bbls., 3 $\frac{1}{2}$  c. in quarter bbls., \$1.50 in pails of 38 $\frac{1}{2}$  lb., and \$1.10 in 25-lb. pails. There is a little demand this week.

CANNED GOODS.

The Dominion syndicate has withdrawn all quotations on canned tomatoes and it is understood that the same step has been taken in regard to corn, although the announcement has not been made yet. Apparently this has been caused by the short pack, but holders of canned goods in this city are still well supplied with last year's pack and have not changed their quotations. Tomatoes continue to sell at 85 to 90c., corn at 80c. and peas at 77½ to 95c. We quote fruits: Strawberries, $1.50; raspberries, $1.40; gooseberries, $1.40; pears, $1.55 for 2's, and $2 for 3's; Lombard plums, $1.20; green-gages, $1.30; yellow peaches, $1.90 for 2's and $2.65 for 3's; sliced pineapple, $2.30, and $2.15 for grated; 3-lb. apples, 90c.; red pitted cherries, $2, and whites, $2.15. New pack Eagle blueberries are now being offered at 77½ to 80c.

It had been thought that it would be impossible to supply any of the demand for Canadian kippered herring, but now that the run of fish has improved there is a chance that 50 per cent. of the orders may be filled. The demand has been extraordinary this fall. The price is $4 a case. New Fraser river salmon is coming to hand and selling at $1.45 per dozen of standard goods and $5 per case for private brands. Rivers Inlet sock-eye is worth $1.25 to $1.30. There is a very fair demand for lobsters at $11 to $11 a case.

SPICES.

A very fair trade is being done in all lines of spices. Prices are without change. We quote: Nutmegs, 35 to 65c. per lb., as to size; Penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 20c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole, Cochin, 11 to 16c.; Japan, 10c.; Jamaica, 20c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16c.; Jamaica, 25c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA

There have been no developments in the rice situation this week, but the market remains very firm. We quote in combine district: B rice, in bags, $3.10; in half bags, $3.15; in ¼ bags, $3.20; in pockets, $3.25. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $3 in bags; $3.05 in ½ bags; $3.10 in ¼ bags; and $3.15 in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 12c. per lb., and tapioca, 3¼ to 3½c.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—Since our last report the market has advanced 1s. and reacted, winding up in the same position as last week. The Liverpool boat brought quite a quantity of new raisins to the market this week; they show much better quality than did last year's and are selling at 5¼ to 6c. for fine off-stalk, 6¼ to 7c. for selected, and 7 to 7½c. for 1 crown layers.

CURRENTS.—Currants declined slightly during the week, going as low as 11s. 6d., but recovered again to 15s., where they are at present. Free buying has been indulged in at this figure, although quite a few purchases were made from 17 to 20s. For delivery in the first half of October fine Filiatras are quoted at 5¼ to 6¼c., and cleaned, 6¼ to 6½c.; cleaned in 1-lb. cartons, 8c., and finest Vostizza currants, in half-cases, 7¼ to 8¼c.

SULTANA RAISINS.—Sultana raisins are gradually coming down, and are now quoted at 25 to 35s. Wholesalers are offering new goods to arrive at 8 to 10c.

FIGS.—The market shows no change this week. Retailers are ordering their future supplies with confidence. Comadre figs to arrive are worth 3¼ to 3½c. in tapnets. Elene figs will be sold at $1.05 per 10-lb. XXX box, $1.95 per 19-lb. XXX box, $1.30 per 2s-lb. XXXXX box, 8c. per 12-oz. box, and 12c. per 16-oz. box.

DATES.—Are quoted to arrive at 1¼ to 5¼c.

PRUNES.—Prices are now out on Californian prunes. Santa Clara prunes may be quoted at 8¼c. for 10-50's, 8¼c. for 50-60's, 7¼c. for 60-70's, 7¼c. for 70-80's, 6¼c. for 80-90's, and 6¼c. for 90-100's. These prices are considered quite low.

PEELS.—English peels for late delivery are quoted at 10 to 11c. for lemon, 10½ to 11½c. for orange, and 14¼ to 15¼c. for citron peel.

NUTS.

Pure Mayette walnuts are worth 11 to 12c. to arrive in December. Sicily filberts, 5¼ to 9¼c. to arrive in November; Tarra-gona almonds, 10¼ to 11¼c., and shelled almonds, 26c., to arrive in November also.

GREEN FRUITS.

Apples are now arriving more freely, selling at $2.75 to $3.50 for No. 1's, and $1.50 to $2.25 for No. 2's. The demand is very limited. Other lines are moving fairly well. We quote: Californian Valencias, $5 to $6 per box; Messina lemons, 300's, $3.25 to $4.50; 360's, $2.50 per box; Verdill lemons, $3.75 to $4.75 per box; pineapples, 20 to 30c.; Canadian apples, 15 to 30c. per basket; Californian plums, $1 to $2 per box; peaches, $1 to $1.25; limes, $1.50 per box; Ontario peaches, 40 to 50c. per basket; Ontario plums, 30 to 40c.; cocoanuts, $3.25 per bag of 100; Californian Bartlett pears, $2.75 to $3.25 per box; water-melons, 15 to 25c.; bananas, No. 1, $1.75 to $2.25, and eight hands, $1.35 to $1.50; Canadian pears (baskets) 30 to 40c.; Bartlett pears (bbls.), $2 to $4.50; Clapp's Favorite (bbls.), $2 to $3.75; Ontario muskmelons, 25 to 10c. per crate.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS.—Although the local market is firm the export demand has slackened slightly. Local inquiry is good. Fresh candled stock is worth 14½c. to 15c. per dozen and fresh laid 18 to 19c. Seconds are moving well at 1c. advance, 10 to 11c.

HONEY.—Comb honey is 2c. higher and extracted 1c. per lb. Comb honey is selling at 12 to 13c. and extracted at 9c. per lb.

POTATOES.—Farmers are rushing the potatoes to market. Good stock sells at 60 to 65c. per bag, but inferior grades sold at 35 to 50c., according to condition.

ASHES.—The market is rather easier, sales of first pots having been made at $1.25 to $1.30, and seconds, $3.90.

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.—The market has been quiet locally, buyers operating from hand to mouth. Stocks are light and holders are firm. We quote as follows: Manitoba spring wheat patents, $3.95 to $1.15; winter wheat patents, $3.65 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.35 to $3.50; in bags, $1.65 to $1.75 and Manitoba strong bakers', $3.50 to $3.80.

OATMEAL.—Has advanced considerably and dealers now ask $1.50 per bbl. and $2.20 per bag. Fine oatmeal in bags is worth about $2.60.

POT BARLEY.—Like other cereals pot barley has advanced and is now worth $1.30 in bbls. and $2.05 in bags.

FEED.—The market is steady at $15 to $15.50 in carlots for Ontario bran. Shorts are scarce at $18 and monille, $19.50 to $21.

BALED HAY.—The chief business now is in new hay, sales of which have been made at country points at $6.50 to $7 for No. 2; at $6 to $6.25 for clover mixture, and at $5.50 for pure clover. Locally, No. 1 timothy is worth $9.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—The butter market is firm and the export demand is favorable to trade. Dealers have had to pay 21¼c. to secure fancy creamery. Undergrades are worth 19c.

CHEESE.—At country boards prices are higher, but the English market has not responded to the advance. Locally the price is 10c. for finest western goods, an advance of ½c.

BETTER THAN EVER!

The demand for advertising space is already large, and some forms have been sent to press with advertisements in choice positions. Those who want to have careful and leisurely attention given to their advertisements should let us have them early, as, in a week or two, we will be "in a rush" and will have to handle all matters as quickly as we can, and we do not want any of our advertisements to be of the set up in a hurry kind. ❀ ❀ ❀ ❀ ❀

The Special Autumn Number

The Canadian Grocer

is now in active preparation

It combines all the features that go to make up a first-class ADVERTISING MEDIUM—REPUTATION, CIRCULATION, APPEARANCE, Etc.

Gravensteins are being received. They are late. Nova Scotia will have quite a good crop. Jamaica oranges are good, but there is only a fair sale. Lemons, though rather easier move slowly. Bananas are light sellers. Ontario grapes are largely received, and sell freely at rather easier prices. Cape Cod cranberries are here, and sweet potatoes are not large sellers. American onions still supply the trade. Canadian will be scarce and high. First shipments have been received.

DRIED FRUITS—There is a lack of interest in raisins this year that is unusual, chiefly because of the recent unsuccessful season. Dealers are waiting for Californian prices, which are very late. There is a marked feeling against the Raisin and Prune Associations. In raisins, Valencia and Malaga loose, the feeling has been easy, though prices now seem more steady. New Californian prunes are likely to be quite firmly held, particularly the smaller sizes. Currants have continued to drop off in price. They will be about the usual price this season. Demand is for cleaned. Spot dates are rather firmer. Evaporated apples are quoted, but the prices are high.

PRODUCE (DAIRY) — Eggs are in better supply, but are ready sellers and are rather higher. Butter is still moving up and has a good demand, particularly best grades. Cheese is perhaps not as firm. There is a fair sale, but the local trade want small cheese.

SUGAR—The agreement on sugar is working well. There has been no change in price. Dealers are anxious for a more general supply of yellows, only two grades being yet quoted.

MOLASSES—The condition is unchanged. A further small cargo of Porto Rico has been received. There is quite a large stock held. There is quite a quantity of consigned goods here. Barbadoes is about the only other grade offered. For many years there has not been so little American offered.

FISH—The tendency is upward, except in smoked herring. These have been received quite freely. The sale is limited. Pickled herring are quite higher, and firmly held. The quality is good. There are no shad. In dry codosh, prices are rather higher. There is a steady sale. Boneless fish moves more freely. Pollock are dull and unchanged. Fresh fish have been scarce, and there has been a large demand during the past week. It was a fish week. Variety is limited. Finnan haddies are more generally offered, but prices are firm. Kipperd herring are in good supply. We quote as follows: Large and medium dry cod, $3.50 to $3.60; small, $2.50 to $2.60; haddies, 4 ½ to 5 ½ c.; smoked herring, 10 to 12 c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2 ½ c.; bone-

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL—In flour, the market is unchanged. There is a steady sale. Manitoba, particularly, moves freely. Feed is very scarce and there is a good demand. Oats are more freely offered and prices are firm. Oatmeal is high and hard to get. The stock is light. Beans move downward. The high prices did not long hold. Barley is high and there is a fair sale. Peas are scarce. Hay, except for export, is dull. The shipments from here for South Africa have been very large for some months. Cornmeal is rather lower. We quote: Manitoba flour, $4.60 to $4.70; best Ontario, $3.90 to $4.00; medium, $3.60 to $3.70; oatmeal, $4.25 to $4.30; cornmeal, $2.85 to $3.00; middlings, $2.20 to $2.30; oats, 45 to 48c.; hand-picked beans, $2.25 to $2.30; prime, $2.10 to $2.15; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3.00; split peas, $4.50 to $4.55; barley, $4.10 to $4.25; hay, $12 to $14.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

WINNIPEG, September 21, 1901.

THE weather for the week has been damp and decidedly cool along the Red River Valley and throughout Eastern Manitoba, and has delayed threshing to a considerable extent, but in the South and West and in Eastern Assiniboia the weather has been all right and threshing has gone merrily forward. Wheat movement at the moment is about 800 cars per day. The past week has seen a great many travellers from eastern houses looking for sorting trade and spring placing orders, but they have not met with a very ready response from our country merchants. Manitoba merchants have long memories and they begin to look shy at the house that sends travelers only when times are good, and is the first to push a claim at any time of strain such as the short crop of last year. Slowly but surely they have realized that the wholesale house hear home that is willing to carry them alike in good and bad seasons is the best one to deal with.

Preparations for the reception of the Royal party are being pushed rapidly, and should the sun shine with wonted splendor, the "Queen of the Western Prairies" will be a sight worth going far to see. Two magnificent arches have been erected on Main street; the one nearest the railway station being entirely of Manitoba grains. By the way, it is no trifle to arch Main street, the distance between kerb and kerb being exactly 103 feet.

FLOUR—The demand is good and no change in price is to be noted.

GROUND FEED—Oat chop has dropped $1 and is now quoted at $25 per ton.

ROLLED OATS—There has been a decline in this product owing to the larger amount of Manitoba goods now on the market. Rolled oats in 80's are $2.20, with granulated and standard in 98's at $2.70. Other cereals are nominal in movement and without change of price.

CANNED GOODS—The feature of this market has been the action of the Cannery Association in withdrawing tomatoes from quotation here. Outside factories are still quoting freely.

CURED MEATS—This market continues to show exceptional activity, and though no change of price is recorded there is a remarkable firmness of tone in the market.

GREEN FRUITS—The feature of the market this week has been the arrival of a car of British Columbian fruit, an extended notice of which appears in another column. Ontario fruit continues to arrive in its usual unsatisfactory condition. Perhaps Ontario growers will learn, in time, to take a leaf out of the books of California and British Columbia. In prices, the market shows no change, except as to apples and grapes. Apples have dropped 50c. per barrel, and are quoted at $4.50. Grapes are variously quoted at 35c. for Concord and green, and 50c. for Red Rogers. All other fruit prices remain unchanged.

BUTTER—Creamery butter has been firmer, and has shown more demand, the British Columbian market having improved. Creamery is quoted at 16½ to 16¾c. at factories. Dairy is without change, and the demand is slow.

CHEESE—The demand is more active, and prices have advanced, 8 to 8½c. being paid through the week.

EGGS—Still scarce and of poor quality. Price has advanced to 14c. for candled stock.

IMPROVEMENTS IN THE AUER LIGHT.

The Auer gas lamp has now been thoroughly introduced into home and store, and The Auer Light Co., Montreal, are reaping the results of the thorough trials that have been given their various styles. At present the factory cannot turn out the goods fast enough for the sales and shipping departments.

Meanwhile they go on adding new features and new lines. The latest improvement is the new stop cock. It is fitted with a stuffing box which makes leakage absolutely impossible, and is turned out of a solid brass rod which does away with any couplings.

They have lately added a low-priced wall lamp to their range, No. 25, listed at $4.50, equipped with the same generator as the higher-priced lines and embellished with the same high finish. A new outdoor lamp is now being shown, made of heavy sheet tin, listed at $7. Both of these new lines have been put out in response to numerous inquiries and are meeting with a good demand.

Toronto Junction merchants intend asking the council of that town to increase the local peddlers' license.

B.C. FRUIT IN WINNIPEG.

THE first carload of British Columbia fruit to arrive in Winnipeg this season was run on The Macpherson Fruit Company's siding late Monday afternoon. A representative of "The Canadian Grocer" had the pleasure of seeing it unpacked. Considerable interest was attached to the arrival of this car.

In the past shipments of fruit from British Columbia to the Winnipeg market have not been satisfactory, and though all fruit handlers recognized the fine flavor, many were of the opinion that this fruit could not be successfully shipped for long distances. This season the British Columbia Government, acting through the Fruit Growers Association (a purely educative institution), undertook to test the matter. In July Mr. R. M. Palmer, Special Commissioner of the Department of Agriculture, came through and thoroughly threshed out the situation, both with the fruit men and with the railway. The result of these deliberations is the arrival of the car of fruit above referred to, in charge of Mr. J. C. Metcalfe, of Maplehurst Fruit Farm, Hammond, B.C., First Vice President of The Fruit Growers Association. The car was six days in transit, and arrived in Winnipeg fully iced and temperature in a very satisfactory condition. It contained 800 cases (16,000 pounds) of Italian primes and 80 cases (1,000 pounds) of Bartlett and Bussack pears. The packing exactly resembled that of the cars from California and Washington, the boxes being arranged with good air spaces and thoroughly stripped to hold them in place.

Messrs. Rublee, Scott and Bright attended the opening of the car, on behalf of the Fruit Exchange of Winnipeg. The plums were opened first and proved a very fine sample of Italian primes, uniform in size, beautifully colored, of excellent flavor, and with a noticeably small pit. The cases were the usual four basket crates, and the baskets contained three layers each, and were neatly faced. There was only one criticism offered on the packing and that was they were not packed tight enough in the layer to prevent movement of the fruit. This also affected the weight. This was due to a misunderstanding on the part of the British Columbia people, their idea being that each crate or case should only contain 20 pounds, whereas the average crate from Washington or Oregon contains about 25 pounds. This, however, was pronounced merely a matter of detail.

The pears were next examined and some boxes near the top of the car were found to be a little overripe, having been gathered rather too late. The Bussack pears presented a finer appearance than the Bartletts, although the variety is not considered as standard. The difficulty with the Bartletts was entirely a matter of appearance, the skins presenting the roughish brown patches so familiar in Ontario Bartletts, and also a considerable irregularity of shape. The opinion was expressed that the Winnipeg market, having been educated to the appearance of the Washington Bartlett, was likely to be shy of the British Columbia variety, for a time at least, until their preserving qualities became more widely recognized. This fruit was all from Chilliwack, and Mr. Metcalfe stated that pears, especially Bartletts, from the Okanagan district, would present a much more attractive appearance. To sum it up, it was generally admitted that the condition in which this car arrived, disposed of the question of the practicability of shipping British Columbia fruits to this market. The fact that these plums and pears come later in the season than the Washingtons will be no detriment to their market value here as soon as it is understood that the supply can be depended upon, the average housewife would greatly prefer to put up as much fruit as possible in cooler weather.

The plums will retail on the Winnipeg market at $1.25 to $1.30, and the pears at $2.75 to $3 per box.

Mr. Metcalfe will be here for a few days and will then return to British Columbia and make a formal report to The Fruit Growers Association. He will also call at the principal towns on his return trip to inquire into the manner of handling the fruit—whether it is done chiefly through wholesalers or individual enterprisers, and also as to the prevailing prices in these towns and as to the possibilities of increasing trade.

THE PROVISION TRADE.

The Markets—Packing and Curing Hams—Miscellaneous Notes.

PACKING AND CURING HAM.

STARTING with the hams at the chill room, before they pass to the cellar for pickling, they are taken to the testing table, where they are inspected for bruises and blood spots at the bone. The interior inspection is done by means of a small instrument resembling in outward appearance a carpenter's gimlet. In reality it consists of a rod of steel about three-sixteenths of an inch in diameter, with small grooves cut around the end about an eighth of an inch apart and a thirty-second of an inch deep. Over this rod a sheath made of thin steel pipe, large enough to slide with ease over the surface, is placed; this tube, being as thin as it can be made, presents a knife edge to cut its way into the ham. It covers the rod for all its distance with the exception of an inch at the end. After the rod has been shoved into the bone the sheath is shoved over, and confines in the rings cut in the rod any appearance of blood or bruise. When the hams are all right they are passed along to the pumping bench.

Every boy has probably watched his father put a goose quill under the skin of the goose and blow the goose up until it looked at least one-quarter larger than it was before the operation. While the result of pumping a ham to all appearances is the same, there is a result which is beneficial, but not apparent, and that is the depositing of the brine at the bone and through the fatty parts of the flesh. The small hand-pumps used for this purpose are operated by the attendant, a short piece of strong hose being attached to pump, and a needle end of steel about a quarter inch in diameter, with openings on the point—needle point being about eight inches long. A workman places the hams on a bench, skin down, and as fast as one receives the injection, he removes it and a second ham takes its place. From there the hams go to the pickling tanks. Sometimes these consist of vats, formed on the cellar floors; again of tanks built of wood, square, with open tops; again we find molasses hogsheads used, and many times the hams are placed in tierces. It becomes necessary during this process of curing that the hams be moved quite frequently in order to change the surfaces where they join or lie together. When the hams are placed in vats, hogsheads or tanks, it becomes necessary to throw them from one receptacle to another in order to change the positions. If this is not done the pickling is not even. When the hams are being placed in tierces they are never packed tight—at least four inches is left in the end of the tierces. When it is necessary to "break up" the surface it is accomplished by rolling the tierces from one side of the room to the other, the loose space being at all times sufficient to permit the hams to be separated from their neighbors.

Again, should the time for curing the hams be accomplished, the process of pickling can be arrested by boring a hole in the head of the tierces and permitting the brine to run out, leaving the hams dry, and by placing the hams into a freezing temperature, they can be kept for an indefinite period. The expediency of holding hams is resorted to only when the market is off in price.

We will now return to our bruised hams. By the use of our little friend—the testing gimlet—we have been enabled to keep out all bruised hams. These hams, before the introduction of the bruised detector, invariably went with the good hams, and passed through the pickling and smoking departments, and were not detected until they came home to the purchaser and were put on the table for eating. When cut open and found defective they were invariably returned to the market, accompanied by uncomplimentary remarks, and a good ham would have to be supplied in its place. The bruised places were cut out of the hams and the unaffected parts sold for what they would bring, often at a price equal to the cost to the packing house owner when it was on foot.

After the bruise has been located by the indicator, the ham is taken to a table, the bone taken out, the bruise carefully cut away, the ham rolled up and tied with string, and then passed through the ordinary process of pickling, with the exception that it does not stay so long in the pickle as the good hams. In due time these are taken from the pickle, soaked, smoked and boiled, and then placed on the market as the fine boneless boiled ham, at a good round price, and become delicious eating; thus they become a source of profit to the packing-house owner, instead of a perpetual annoyance and loss, both of customers and of money.

Returning to our ham which was uninjured, we left it in the tierces ready for final disposal. Where hams are required for foreign shipment they are emptied on the floor, and the brine is permitted to partially dry off; then they are taken to the box and receive a liberal coating of pulverized borax. The process of applying borax is to have a box about 30 inches across, and five, six or seven feet long (length depends on how many men are desired to have working on the box), the depth being from 16 to 20 inches. The borax is placed in the box and the hams are rolled around in the borax. The ham is then taken to a table, where it is examined to see if all parts are covered with borax. They are then packed tightly in a box, holding from 300 to 400 lb.; the cover is forced into a box driven by a wooden maul.

The object of covering the surface of the hams with borax is to protect them during transportation. Whether there is any material benefit in this is a question of contention among packing-house men; and the covering of borax is not applied by all shippers of hams.—Francis H. Boyer, in Ice and Refrigeration.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

Dressed hogs are 15 to 20c. higher. Mutton is 1c. lower. Lambs are 1c. cheaper. There is an abundance of all meats except dressed hogs, and a steady improvement in the demand. We quote as follows: Dressed hogs, $9.40 to $9.80 per cwt.; mutton, $5 to $6 per cwt.; lambs, 6½ to 7½c. per lb.; beef carcasses, $7.25 per cwt. for best and $6 to $7 for mediums; hind quarters, 8c. for best; fore quarters, 1½ to 5½c. for best; calves, $8.50 for best and $6 to $7 for mediums.

The feature of the week is the stiffening of lard values, another advance of 1c. being noted. Other provision lines are in good demand at firm prices. We quote: Long clear bacon, 11½ to 12c. Smoked meats: Breakfast bacon, 15c.; rolls, 12½c.; small hams, 11c.; medium hams, 11c.; large hams, 13c.; shoulder hams, 12c.; backs, 15c. Barrel pork—Canadian heavy mess, $20.50; Canadian short cut, $22. Lard Tierces, 11½c.; tubs, 11½c.; pails, 12c.

MONTREAL.

The firm tone of the provision market has only been accentuated this week, in fact, the whole market is in a feverish state of excitement. Dressed abattoir hogs are now worth $9.50 to $10 per 100 lb., and it seems impossible to get deliveries of either lard or pork from our Canadian packers. Chicago pork has jumped $1 on the week, medium cut clear being worth $21.50 and heavy, $25. Some dealers sold lard at $2.50 this week and are sorry they did so. Compound lard is advanced ½c. per lb. by all makers. We quote: Heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $22.50; Chicago clear pork, $25 for heavy and $24.50 for medium; selected heavy short cut mess pork, boneless, $22.50 to $23; hams, 13c.; bacon, 15c.; lard, pure Canadian, $2.40 to $2.45 per pail; refined lard compound (Fairbank's), $2.01 for 1 to 21 pails; $2 for 25 to 49 pails; $1.98 for 50 pails and over; Snow White and Globe compound, $1.65 per pail; Cottolene, 9½c. per lb. in tierces, and 10½c. in 26-lb. pails, and 10½c. in 50 lb. boxes, for Quebec.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

Barreled pork and beef continue to advance. Pork is very high and firm. There is a fair sale. People at this season must have the goods. Lard is hardly as active, but it is climbing in price.

HOGS AND THE CORN CROP.

THE Government September figures on the supply of stock hogs, those being prepared for market, were taken as indifferently as the figures on corn. It is true enough the Washington hog estimates have not commended themselves to any body in the provision business. But it is safe to assume the loss of almost half the growing corn crop and the drying up of pastures and even the curtailment temporarily of the water supply in some sections affected the hog supply appreciably. In seven weeks the market was 700,000 ahead of the normal. The advance in the corn price of 40 per cent. would alone incline toward a curtailment of stocks. In other years it has taken a long time for any change in the western situation to show itself at the centres. But already western hog receipts are less than last year's and the packing less. Stocks of product during the 60 days of unusual hog marketing have decreased. It now remains to be seen what will be the result with the hog supply coming along at a normal rather than abnormal rate. Prices of product are high; so are the hogs. There is no accord over the future among the interests in the trade who should have good facilities for forecasting. The outside is afraid of the price, which seems so high compared with last year. In a general way 50c. corn should make a higher-priced hog than 30c. corn; and also, in a general way, the higher the hog, other things being equal, the higher should be the product. Some people are playing these general principles in their speculations.—National Provisioner, New York.

RAISING DOGS FOR HUMAN FOOD.

THE Chinese raise a sort of fuzzy dog which is used for food for even the best families. It is something like a Shepherd dog in appearance.

A Chicago paper tells us that a man out that way has a stock farm, on which he raises dogs for meat. They are shipped to China, and he does a good export trade in them. This dog rancher is H. H. Patrick.

To the epicures of China, Mr. Patrick looks for the patronage that keeps his business alive. He stumbled upon the peculiar business altogether by accident. He was travelling in China when he found that, although the Chinese considered dogs as staple articles of food, no attempt had been made to raise them for the market. Shortly afterward, when he had removed to the Caroline Islands, he put his idea into execution and his stock farm is now the biggest institution on the island.

Up to the present Mr. Patrick had bred nothing but the native Chinese dogs. They are not so large as the average dog of this country and, probably being so few generations removed from the wolf, they are tough and not a choicest article for the table. It is to remedy this by cross-breeding that Mr. Patrick has visited the United States.

"I have been shipping the dogs to Amoy, China," said Mr. Patrick, "and each month I manage to send from 100 to 125 young animals. These animals are sent alive and are killed in the native butcher shops as they are needed. I hope within the near future to be able to send the carcasses in refrigerators, for then they will command a far better price."—National Provisioner.

Orders can be filled by any of the leading jobbers in Canada or direct.

We have had frequent complaints from various parts of Canada that some retailers were removing the imprint from our "Boar's Head" brand of Refined Lard Compound and selling it as hog lard. Our "Boar's Head" brand of Refined Lard Compound is superior to any hog lard that ever went over the counter, and we positively will not permit any retailer to offer it in pails unless plainly marked Fairbank's "Boar's Head" brand, and if sold as anything else we will prosecute the offender.

CONDENSED GOODS.

WITHIN a few years there has been placed upon the market, says American Grocer, a considerable number of condensed or concentrated foods, designed for the use of armies, or for explorers, sportsmen, and others, to be used under conditions that render it desirable to reduce weight and space to the minimum. The constantly increasing number of these articles indicates a correspondingly increased demand. How far the want has been met can, to a certain extent, be determined by a study of the analyses recently made at the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station, and reported in Bulletin No. 75.

A large proportion of the foods examined were of English manufacture, and may be classed under the general head of "emergency rations"—i.e., rations that, without fully satisfying the needs of the body, may still enable the consumer to continue his active pursuits for a few days without an appreciable loss of strength.

It may be said of all that they appear to be good articles, and, when prepared according to directions, would probably furnish appetizing dishes, subject, of course, to the limitations common to all canned goods.

Various estimates have been made as to man's daily needs. These estimates have been based either upon a study of the daily waste of the body, or upon direct nutrition experiments, in which the daily food has been gradually reduced until a maintenance ration has been struck. While these estimates must vary not only with the individual, but with the habits and other conditions of the subject, an average may be fixed upon which is sufficiently exact for our present purposes. Of the standards given, those of Moleschott, in Germany, and Atwater, in this country, are perhaps as frequently quoted as any.

Moleschott gives the following diet as sufficient for a man performing a moderate amount of work:

|                    | Grams. |
|--------------------|--------|
| Protein.....       | 125    |
| Fats.....          | 90     |
| Carbohydrates..... | 330    |

This gives a total weight of 540 grams, or about one and one-fifth pounds of dry matter per day. By the use of the proper factors, we find that such a diet has a fuel value of 2,680 calories. That is, these qualities of nutrients, in the metabolic processes which they undergo in the body, yield an amount of heat sufficient to raise 2,680 kilograms of water 1 degree C., or about five tons of water 1 degree F.

It is an interesting fact that what constitutes an adequate diet for the European does not satisfy the American workman. By a study of dietaries in this country, Atwater has found that a man at moderate labor requires daily about 125 grams proteids, with enough fats and carbohydrates to bring the fuel value up to 3,500 calories, an advance of about 30 per cent. over Moleschott's estimate. This required fuel value may be supplied by adding to the 125 grams proteids, 100 grams fats, and 502 grams carbohydrates.

The comparisons made in the tables presented show that for the most part the claims are extravagant. With the exception of the two standard emergency rations noted, none of the packages supplies more than one-half the protein required to replace the waste of one day, and not more than one-fourth or one-third of the potential energy called for by the standards. Indeed, a little thought would have shown that no ration containing less than one and one-half pounds of dry matter can supply the waste of the active adult human body. If we refer once more to the standards given, we will see that even if a food could exist of absolutely pure protein, fats, and carbohydrates, it must contain from 510 to 727 grams, or from one and one-fifth to one and three-fifths pounds. In practice such a food is impossible. In addition to the water and waste matters invariably present, there will always be a varying amount of mineral salts in our food, a certain proportion of which is just as essential to our existence as any one of the three nutrients already considered. While an amount of food under one and one-half pounds may constitute a valuable "emergency ration," the continued use of such a diet must inevitably result in a reduction in strength and body weight.

COFFEE IN INDIA.

THE proportion of coffee is restricted for the most part, to a limited area in the elevated region above the southwestern coast, the coffee lands of Mysore, Coorg and the Madras districts of Malabar and the Nilgiris comprising 88 per cent. of the whole area under the plant in India, says an exchange. About 52 per cent. of this area is in Mysore, where there were 128,057 acres in 1900, and the plant is grown on 99,088 acres, being 40 per cent. of the whole, in the British districts of Coorg (68,596 acres), the Nilgiris and Malabar (30,492). In Madras there is no extensive cultivation except in these two districts and in Salem and Madura. Coffee is also grown, but on a very restricted scale, in Burma, Assam, Bengal and Bombay. The fall in price since 1897 has removed the stimulus which had been given for a few years to the further expansion of the coffee-growing area, while disease has combined with adverse climatic conditions to reduce the yield. The quantity produced last year was but little more than half the quantity produced 10 years ago. There were 22,128 persons permanently, and 91,687 temporarily, employed on the coffee estates in 1900, making a total of 113,813 persons, which is equal to one person to about 2.16 acres. The following figures as to exports and consumption are the average of the 10 years ending 1900-1901: Indian coffee—production, 30,040,608 lb.; exports, 30,163,056 lb. Foreign coffee—imports, 1,529,819 lb.; exports, 737,520 lb.

THE MAKING OF VINEGARS.

VINEGAR, which is so well-known to every grocer has an important place in the armamentarium of the every-day housewife. It is, as are condiments such as salt and pepper, not really essential to the welfare of the human race, but it is as they are, one of the articles of diet which go to make up an existence which evolution and knowledge have made more pleasant than it was in earlier times.

It is said of an ancient king that he was wont to drink vinegar with as much gusto as the ordinary individual drinks champagne. This is historical, although much to be doubted. For kings have (or should have) tastes not only equal to the ordinary individual, but superior. There are women who drink vinegar as a beverage, but according to medical testimony it is only when they are in a certain bodily condition and have abnormal taste.

Vinegar itself is a product of fermentation from infusions of malted grain or from various fruit juices. It is made in several ways. The method which is, perhaps, most scientific and most rapid is the German method, so-called from the fact that it was instituted by a German savant. By this method vinegar is made from 1 part alcohol, 4 to 6 parts of water and one-thousandth part of honey. The honey is added to act as a ferment which is necessary to produce the vinegar.

The Germans use a so-called "vinegar generator" to make the vinegar after this method. Briefly, it consists of a tub with a diaphragm perforated with holes. The mixture above referred to is allowed to trickle through beech shavings and thence through the diaphragm. Before it is put in the "vinegar tub," the alcoholic mixture is heated to 75 degrees F. One of the essential parts of the apparatus is that air should be allowed to pass through the tub. The air supplies the oxygen which is necessary to produce acetification.

This German method requires from 21 to 36 hours to produce the vinegar, a much more rapid process, by-the-way, than obtains when vinegar is made by exposure from cider. Lately the Germans have become accustomed in many instances to the use of charcoal (after it has been purified) instead of beech shavings. The process remains the same, however.

Besides the German method there is a French process, which has not become so popular as the former. In England the German method is used extensively. The Englishmen modify it somewhat by using an infusion of malt.

In the United States there are two kinds of vinegar in common use. These are 1, spirit vinegar; 2, cider vinegar. The first (spirit vinegar) is made by the German method of oxidizing very diluted alcohol. The second, and most common, cider vinegar, is made by a process most crude and depending to a great extent upon the assistance of nature. It is very simple. Cider is placed in barrels and the bung-holes are exposed to the rays of the summer sun. In about two years' time the cider has been transformed into vinegar. About the expiration of the required time to effect the transformation the cider has to be watched carefully; for if the process goes on beyond a certain time putrefaction ensues, and the vinegar is spoiled. Many farmers have made serious losses by being careless at the time of the maturity of the vinegar.

Vinegar may be clarified and still retain its ethereal odor. This is done by adding a tumbler full of boiling milk to about 50 gallons of the vinegar. Under this manipulation the product becomes pale.

Frequently adulteration of vinegar is found. The most common adulterants are sulphuric and sulphurous acids, and copper and lead. The latter usually comes from the use of improper vessels.—N. E. Grocer.

WHICH IS THE CHEAPEST?

WHICH is the cheapest beverage, coffee or tea? According to the correspondent of a daily contemporary, who takes a very rosy view of the question of the consumption of tea, coffee is literally "not in it" with tea, so far as cheapness is concerned, but there is certainly not the wide difference between them that the afore-mentioned authority would have the trade believe. We quote his estimate, as follows:

"The cost of tea yearly to each family is a mere bagatelle. Coffee is more expensive. There is contained in one pound of tea 280 cups—at 10c. per pound, seven cups for one cent. In one pound of coffee thirty-two cups; it requires eight and one half pounds of coffee to equal one pound of tea. Coffee at 20c. per pound would cost $1.70. Calculations are in order. Consumers are ignorant of these facts. No beverage is so nutritious, so healthy, so cheap at whatever the cost."

The best authorities credit coffee with a potency of two gallons of beverage to the pound and tea with a potency of six gallons to the pound. Calculating that the ordinary cup holds half a pint of beverage these figures would give us 32 cups to the pound of coffee and 96 cups to the pound of tea. No doubt a good many people get more than 96 half-pints of beverage from each pound of tea they use, but, on the other hand, the average consumer of coffee obtains more than two gallons or 32 cups from each pound of the aromatic berry, many people using chicory to eke out the coffee and give it the body which cannot be otherwise obtained save by a generous use of the coffee berry. Consequently any shortage in the estimate of six gallons or 96 cups of beverage to a pound of tea would be offset by an equal deficiency in the estimate of two gallons or 32 cups of beverage to a pound of coffee.

Now, as to the average cost of tea and coffee to the consumer. The above mentioned correspondent does not err much if at all in estimating the average price of coffee at 20c. a pound, but 40c. is a little low as an estimate of the price of tea. Fifty cents would be nearer the mark, at least, since the duty was laid upon the article. Say, then, that coffee costs 20c. and tea 50c. a pound. With tea furnishing only three times the quantity of beverage that coffee furnishes, the consumer of coffee, in order to get 96 cups of beverage must pay 60c., just 10c. more than the consumer of tea pays for his 96 cups. Whether he obtains 10c. extra in gratification, the pleasure of the palate which only a well-made rich cup of aromatic coffee can give, depends upon what sort of coffee he buys and how it is made.

It may be urged against the lower estimate (96 cups) of the number of cups in a pound of tea that the average teacup holds less than the average coffee cup, and that therefore more cups should be counted to the pound of tea than we have given but it is obvious that it is not fair to calculate in so one-sided a way. The same measure of quantity must be used with each article, if the estimate of the relative cost of tea and coffee is to be worth the paper it is written on. This being so there is no apparent reason why the 10c. difference should not be accepted instead of the grossly exaggerated difference which the aforesaid correspondent arrives at.—N. Y. # Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch.

Your idea may be that all starch is starch and that your customers won't detect even a slight difference in quality. You may think that because there is a cent or two extra profit on "Mushroom" brands (that come and go), you can retain the confidence of your trade—it doesn't pay to trifle with the confidence that a customer has in you and your goods.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch is as staple as flour. In the name there is the fame of nearly half a century. In the making there is the skill of long experience combined with honesty of purpose and unequalled manufacturing facilities. Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch represents the highest type of perfection there is or can be in starch. Kegs of 100-lbs.—handsome enamelled horse-shoe tins holding 6-lbs.—handsome 1-lb. packages that give a touch of life and color and "go" to a grocer's shelves.

The Auer Gas Lamp

Money-Back Style.

THIS style is particularly suited for a reading light—the shades prevent the light from tiring the eyes and the burner can be raised just the same as any other students lamp.

IT can be carried around the house with perfect safety and as the base is heavily weighted there is no danger of its up-setting.

THE light is soft enough for the most sensitive eyes and yet strong enough for the finest print.

Buying, Handling and Selling Coffees.

ONE OF THE PRIZE ESSAYS.

By HARRY COOPER, Toronto.

TO buy coffee properly entails a complete and ever-freshly-renewed training. No old-time training will stand the wear and tear of time, unless kept up to date by constant testing, by taste and comparison.

How best to get this education will, perhaps, be of interest. The first essential is

A SET OF STANDARD SAMPLES.

These can be procured from any New York house upon sending an express order for as much as you care to spend, not failing to specify the grades and varieties of coffees you are desirous of experimenting with. These secured, you will immediately roast some of each and compare carefully with local samples. This comparison, with the New York price list in your hand, will be extremely valuable, and a constant repetition of the practice of drawing and comparing will in due time give you a splendid insight into many coffees of real merit, which knowledge will be useful when your coffees come to hand. No coffee should be purchased without a sure knowledge of its "drink," and the extra trouble to make a draw (with fair experience and practice) is certainly not time lost. A man must buy to suit his trade. If a small trade in coffee is done,

BUY THE BEST BLENDS

from reliable houses, but try them early and often, or better still, get a set of standard samples, and having made up your own blend, order the constituent parts from the best house in the trade and blend together yourself. Another way is to order your blend, provided you have perfect faith in your jobber. Your New York price list will give you the proper price for any coffee; add 1-2c. freight and 10 per cent. duty; also 16 per cent. for loss in weight for roasting, and you have a fair actual cost. Direct shipments save the 10 per cent. duty. Always remember that "Java" and "Mocha" are corrupted terms, and genuine goods of this type, to be of value, will cost about 30 cents per lb., roasted. And other coffees are similarly treated.

HANDLING.

To buy well is to sell well. There is not much sense in taking all this trouble if the selling end is not properly looked after. There are grocers who undertake to roast their own coffee, forgetting that the finest roasters in America are liable to fail (so delicate is the operation), and how much more so the shop hand doing other things as well. Buy green coffee if you wish, but get a good firm to roast it, and then only 50 lbs. of each at a time; better to be short than to have stale goods. Of course, if it is cheap goods "on a run" greater quantities may be roasted. After coming from the roaster make up your blends and put into tins only, and grind to your customers' orders. If you buy roasted coffee it will come in tins and ought to be kept tightly closed when not being used. The use of chicory in our land is universal and most grocers use it. Many customers like it and do not know that it is the chicory which gives the body. At the same time, there are many heavy coffees, such as the Yankee likes, which make good drink without chicory. These are Bourbons, Costa Ricans, Guatemalas and Bucks; all good, strong-bodied goods and worth a good deal more attention than we give them. A real good recipe for making coffee properly ought to be printed on every coffee package you send out. Most Canadian coffee is good enough until it is made and put on the table—then it is woefully poor.

SELLING.

To sell coffee, and plenty of it, ought to be the ambition of every grocer. The essentials, as outlined above, having been lived up to in a business-like manner, there should not be any difficulty in making large sales. The first thing is to fix the brands and prices, and then to hang on like "grim death" until results come. Just let us outline our schedule here:

|                                                      |              |
|------------------------------------------------------|--------------|
| No. 1—"Our Best," a pure high-grade.....             | 45c. per lb. |
| " 2—"Perfection," the same with 10 p.c. chicory..... | 40c. " "     |
| " 3—"Standard," a pure strong coffee.....            | 35c. " "     |
| " 4—"Hotel," the same with chicory.....              | 30c. " "     |
| " 5—"Popular," a fine Santos and Maracaibo.....      | 25c. " "     |
| " 6—"Real Good," the same with chicory.....          | 20c. " "     |

This assortment is simple, making only three blends and yet six prices, and you can always tell the kind of coffee a customer has had by the price she has paid—a most desirable thing, because a woman can always remember the price, but cannot tell you whether she had a chicory coffee or otherwise. Nothing remains after having bought your goods right and handled them well, but to sell them intelligently. When a woman asks for coffee, try to learn her tastes and sell her the proper line—always keeping in mind that "anything" will not do for the man at the breakfast table.

All goods, as above, will show from 25 to 40 per cent. profit, and 100 per cent. profit will not sell coffee more than twice to the same buyer. Value tells in the long run, and always makes for good trade that stays with you.

TEA POSSIBILITIES IN THE UNITED STATES.

The American Grocer, recently referring to British-grown tea in America, says: "The overproduction of tea and the displacement of China tea, in the United Kingdom, by Indian and Ceylon sorts, naturally leads the British growers and British tea interests to canvass for new markets. While the United Kingdom is populated by a tea-drinking people the residents of the United States are given to a free use of beer and coffee, and to-day consume less tea per capita than at any time from 1870 to the present. And this notwithstanding a phenomenal increase in wealth, and a wage-earning population the most prosperous on the globe. The simple fact is that the American people do not take kindly to tea as a beverage, just as the people of the United Kingdom are not partial to coffee. It would be just as practicable to inaugurate a campaign to displace tea by coffee in the United Kingdom, as to carry forward a campaign in the United States to displace coffee and beer by an enlarged use of tea. The average American consumer does not care a rap about flavor, being satisfied with any sort of a warm beverage made from tea, provided that its flavor is not offensive to the palate. The popular taste does not favor the heavy-bodied, sweetish-flavored teas of India and Ceylon, when used straight. The popularity of such teas for blending is greater to-day than ever, but we have no faith in the people of the United States ever increasing their per capita use of tea to the old-time figures, especially so long as they can buy coffee from 10c. per lb. upwards."

Our packages are larger and more attractive in style than any others.

The quality of our goods is superior to anything else on the market.

THE MAKING OF INDIAN GREEN TEA.

THE following, signed by H. Drummond Deane and addressed to the editor of Indian Gardening and Planting, Calcutta, recently appeared in that journal:

"With reference to your remarks on my system of green tea manufacture, in your leader in issue of September 8, there are, of course, much fuller details of the system issued with the machines, and even to these I can add a few useful hints saving time and money, which I am too glad to give to any purchaser of my machines. I have sent the ordinary details of manufacture to the secretary of the Indian Tea Association for the information of their green-tea committee, and hope that in Cachar, Sylhet and Kangra they may catch on, but I do not anticipate anything very extraordinary in averages, so I would only advise those whose ruling averages are low for black teas to make the trial.

"While on the subject, I am recently advised that it would probably be better not to describe the teas made on my process as Young Hyson, Hyson, Imperial and Twankay, as, owing to our different style of leaf, the appearance is not the same as the Chinese grades of those names, but to describe them as:

"No. 1. Extra choicest new-season's uncolored Indian green tea.

"No. 2. Choicest new-season's uncolored Green tea.

"No. 3. Choice new-season's uncolored green tea.

"If fannings are sent call them green tea fannings; but I advise that these be made into 'compressed tea.'

"My New York friends remark that by naming as above, whatever named tea a client asks for, they supply at once the nearest sample as regards liquor and call it by the name he asks for. Whereas if a client wrote and asked, for instance, for a choice 'Moyune' and their Indian tea was marked 'Young Hyson,' probably no order would result, but if the same tea were marked 'Extra Choice No. 1 Uncolored Indian Green Tea,' they would send a sample at once, and probably sell it.

"Anyone trying my method should tell me elevation of estate, and if the season at the time of manufacture is wet or dry, hot or cold. Also describe roller and firing machines. I do not think an endless web machine could be used with my process, as the leaf must be handled during firing."

INDIAN TEA SITUATION.

COMMENTING on the table published by Mr. George Seton, giving results of Indian tea companies during the season 1900, The Financial Times says: "It will be observed that, despite an increase in the output of tea amounting to nearly 10 per cent., the profit per lb. has fallen to nearly one-half of what it was last year, the working cost being little under that of 1899. There is, however, one encouraging feature. Over-production is admittedly the root of the evil, and it is therefore gratifying to find that, notwithstanding the failure of the scheme to effect a combined reduction in the output, there is evidently a disposition on the part of the companies to follow out this principle individually. A glance at the figures representing the acreage shows that the increase in the area planted is only a little over 1 per cent. This can only be regarded as a very moderate proportion to meet the depreciation in the gardens, and goes to show that the different managements have fully realized the folly of large extensions. As to the outlook for the current season, it is as yet too early to express any reliable opinion. We are informed that in all districts, with a few exceptions, there was a considerable shortage in the tea crop at the end of August, owing, to a large extent, to the weather, which curtailed the pickings, and this being the case, it is certain that unless this falling off is made up by the end of September, the crop will be materially reduced. It must not be overlooked, however, that there was a large surplus from the past season at the end of May, and the question is as to what stocks are held in private hands. The opinion expressed by an authority is that it is now but small, and in that event, if there should be, as is not unlikely, a shortage in the current crop, it is not improbable that we shall see better prices at Mincing Lane before very long. This view is corroborated by Messrs. Gow, Wilson and Stanton in their weekly report, issued yesterday, but, at the same time, they emphasize the warning that as young tea from the recent extensions of tea plantations in India is now coming into bearing, every effort will be required on the part of planters to reduce the output. In the meantime, it is interesting to note that the direct export of Indian tea to places outside the United Kingdom for the first half of the year was largely increased, no fewer than 5 774,600 lb. having been shipped, as compared with 3,344,200 lb. in the corresponding period."

"H. AND H." IN MONTREAL.

James McIntosh, agent for "H. and H." in Canada, is making a strong campaign just now to get a footing for this cleanser in Montreal. He is having distributed from door to door a circular explaining the good qualities of "H. and H."; showing sound reasons why it should be always used when an antiseptic cleanser is wanted, and its advantages for general use and giving as references many large concerns who have adopted this soap because of its unique qualities. At the top of the circular is a list of the retail stores in which "H. and H." can be had.

Any inquiries coming to Mr. McIntosh are followed up immediately, thus helping the retailers who sell the cleanser to make good sales.

CANNERY FOR NAPANEE?

The Napanee Beaver notes that greatly increased attention is being paid in Lennox to fruit-growing. Mr. A. C. Parks, of Hay Bay, County Commissioner, has now nearly 100 acres of his farm devoted to fruit, 80 acres being in apples and about 20 in small fruits. He has sold this year 50,000 boxes of berries, and last year packed between 2,000 and 3,000 barrels of apples. Other farmers of the county are going extensively into fruit, and The Beaver foresees a bright future for fruit-growing in North Fredericksburgh. Canneries in Port Hope and Belleville so far have taken the small fruits of the district, and The Beaver calls for a Napanee cannery.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

WINNIPEG, September 30, 1901.

NOTWITHSTANDING the wet weather and the consequent check to threshing, trade has been very good. Many took the opportunity of being in town for the Royal visit to make purchases, and more than one wholesale house reports a very active business. Collections are improving, although wheat deliveries are not as large as were anticipated. There have been few changes in prices during the week.

FLOUR—no change in price has taken place. Market is very firm with possibility of higher prices. We quote: Ogilvie's Hungarian patent, $2; Glenora patent, $1.85; Alberta, $1.65; Manitoba, $1.50; Imperial XXXX, $1.15; Lake of the Woods, Five Roses, $2; Red Patent, $1.85; Medora, $1.45; XXXX, $1.15.

CEREALS—Rolled oats, $2.20 net; standard and granulated, $2.70; beans, $2.55 to $2.60; cornmeal, $1.65 to $1.75.

RICE—The market is normal. We quote: B rice, 4 to 4½c.; Patna, 5 to 5½c., and Japan, 5¼ to 5½c.

CANNED GOODS—Tomatoes are now quoted 5c. higher, in accordance with the higher prices made by canners in the East, but, as many houses quote on entirely different grades, accurate quotations are difficult, if not impossible. Corn and peas will both be higher, judging from the demand and the very firm tone of the market. Other canned goods are without change for the week.

COFFEE—Rios are weak, and have dropped ¼ to ½c., being now quoted at 8½ to 8¾c. for No. 5.

EVAPORATED FRUITS—Apricots have again advanced, quotations now being 13½ to 14c. New prunes will arrive shortly, and prices will rule fully ½c. higher for all small sizes than last year. Prevailing quotations for small sizes are 4¾ to 5c. per lb. for 50-lb. boxes.

CURED MEATS—Market is very firm, and with possibilities of further advances. At present, prices rule the same as last week. Lard, however, has again advanced, and is now quoted at $2.60 per 20 lb. for pure, while tierces and tubs are both 1c. higher per lb. Pure lard in cases is $7.80.

BUTTER—The market shows few changes. Creamery is in better demand, and prices are higher. One sale is reported at 18c. factory, and 17½c. is offered quite freely. Round lots of choice, fresh dairy are in demand and hard to obtain. On the other hand, there is a heavy stock of seconds on the market. The best is worth 15c. at Winnipeg, with 13c. downward for other grades.

CHEESE—Demand is good, and 8 to 8½c. is being offered for the best grades.

EGGS—Choice candled eggs are worth from 15 to 15½c. Winnipeg, and the supply is limited. Strictly new laid retail at 30c.

NOTES.

The handsome new home of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. on McDermott street will be open for occupation about the middle of October.

TORONTO JUNCTION MERCHANTS MEET

A branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada was organized at Toronto Junction last week. The following officers were elected:

1st Vice-president—W. W. Howell.
2nd Vice-president—A. M. Gobel.
Secretary—H. E. Snell.

Credit and Collecting Board—A. Chisholm and H. W. Raymond.

A WHOLESALE GROCER SELLS OUT.

C. H. Clerke, St. Stephen, N.B., has sold his wholesale grocery business to W. C. Purvis, of St. John. The business will be conducted under the name of Purvis & Graham. It is understood that all the old employees will be retained.

TRADE IN COUNTRIES OTHER THAN OUR OWN.

CANNED SALMON IN LONDON.

THERE has been a good inquiry for salmon during the past week and quotations for the different grades are now most reasonable. Retailers in many instances have reduced their prices and the consumption already shows a great improvement. Once again it has been proved that when an article of food advances above a certain limit, no matter how strong the statistical position may be, the demand falls off to a large extent, and although the article in question may be a most popular one as in the case with salmon, yet a substitute in some way or other is readily found.—Produce Markets' Review, Sept. 14.

CURRANTS IN NEW YORK.

There arrived on the steamer Mania, from Catacola, Greece, 2,500 barrels of currants and 10,910 barrels, 320 cases, 5,725 half-cases and 2,270 quarter-cases and 10 bags of currants from Patras. This is the first considerable arrival of the 1901 crop so far this season, and its immediate influence on the spot market has been to cause a decline in spot prices to the level at which goods were offering to arrive on that vessel, namely, 6c. to 6½c. for Amalia grade in barrels. It is stated in several well-informed quarters that a very large portion of the cargo to arrive on the Mania has been sold in transit, and that stocks now unsold are comparatively light. Exclusive of the cases ex Mania the total arrivals of the 1901 crop to date numbers 14,710 barrels. The market on the spot is reported fairly steady at the moment at from 6 to 6½c. for fine Amalia, but the influence of fruit to arrive is apparent.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce, Sept. 30.

THE UNITED STATES RICE CROP.

According to the advices received from New Orleans the movement of the crop continued small for the season of the year, and the market held firm. Demand was fairly active, keeping the market closely sold up; in fact, it was claimed that offerings were barely sufficient to meet the requirements of the trade. With the movement of plantation rice, however, offerings will rapidly increase, and with a crop of Louisiana and Texas estimated between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 sacks it is not expected there will be a shortage. Many believe, however, that requirements will be greater than a year ago, due to the partial failure and high prices of potatoes. Reports from the Atlantic Coast markets continued to report fairly firm markets.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

COCOA IN TRINIDAD.

Mail advices received from Trinidad of the date of September 11 said: "Trinidad cocoa There is little or nothing doing in this article on account of the very small supplies coming in. Stronger advices from abroad have caused prices to become somewhat firmer, and we now quote at $13.75 to $14 for ordinary to good and $11.25 up to $11.50 for good to fine estates cocoa. Exports for the fortnight amount to 1,908 bags, of which 529 bags have gone to the United States. From October 1 to date shipments have been 135,169 bags, as compared with 153,199 bags for the corresponding period of last year. Venezuelan Produce—Cocoa—Only about 200 bags have arrived during the fortnight which have found ready sales at prices varying from $13.90 to $11.25, according to quality. The weather—The heavy rains reported in our last have given way to a spell of line and cooler weather which seems to betoken the advent of our 'Indian summer,' and is most favorable for all cultivation."

SITUATION IN CURRANTS.

A total of 2,200 tons of new currants of all descriptions per Rescue, Naranja, and Matyas Kiraly have been placed on the market during the week. All the other growths are, in varying degrees, excellent, Gulph being perhaps the least, and Vostizza the most, pleasing. Intermediate growths, as Amalias and Patras, are very attractive, especially after the almost total absence of such fruit during the past year. As might have been expected, the new currants have met with a hearty reception, and the prices established are not only reasonable, but conveniently adaptable to the usual range of retail prices. Sellers show a commendable willingness to meet buyers' requirements in the matter of price; and the only probable difficulty to be foreseen in the immediate future is a somewhat scanty supply after the first shipments have been cleared off. The development of the Greek Government plans for the assistance of growers, including facilities for advances against and storage of produce, together with, in some cases, the large profits realized by growers last season, have put this branch of the trade into a position to be less dependent than formerly on obtaining money by immediate consignments to foreign markets. On the other hand, merchants have shown this year an unprecedented reluctance to make the advances against consignments which have been usual for many years past. The whole tendency of these various circumstances, together with the fact that the crop is only a moderate one in point of size, is to severely limit heavy shipments at the opening of the season, and is in the direction of retaining the main stock of currants in Greece, whence they can be distributed more evenly throughout the year to the various consuming centres.—Produce Markets' Review, Sept. 14.

CANNED VEGETABLE SITUATION IN THE STATES.

The packing season has witnessed since the spring a decided improvement in the price of canned corn in some sections, notably in New York State. But, when we compare prices of the 20th of September, 1900, with the present prices of this date, from quotations of the Baltimore market, we find that country corn in 1900 was quoted here at 57½c. to 60c., and in 1901 is quoted at 65 and 70c., an average advance of about 13 per cent. But a comparison of the figures for New York State corn as the two periods mentioned shows quotations to be almost exactly alike, with too small a difference in value to figure a percentage on.

Beans, on the other hand, show a decided advance, string beans at this season being about 30 per cent. more than they were at the same time in 1900, and lima beans about 80 per cent. higher. Tomatoes, however, loom up strong, and are fully 25 per cent. higher in this year of Our Lord 1901 than they were in the corresponding week of 1901.—Trade Baltimore.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

The "Salada" Tea Co. say business was never better, last week being a record-breaker for green Ceylon.

Henri Jonas & Co. have just received a consignment of 200 cases of choice Trefavenne sardines. Messrs. Jonas say that there is a great scarcity of these goods on the European market.

W. H. Gillard & Co. are just in receipt of some fine lines of fish: Shredded codfish, 10c. line, 2 dozen in case; boned and skinned cod, 100-lb. cases; No. 1 fine qtl. cod, pure cod, 1 and 2-lb. bricks; boneless fish, 1 and 2-lb. bricks, and boneless fish in 25 and 40-lb. boxes.

Henri Jonas & Co. are experiencing a specially brisk demand for their syrups. It might be mentioned that these syrups are put up in exceedingly handsome and tasty decanters, which can be used for vases or other purposes.

MR. GLOVER IN CHICAGO.

Mr. Wm. Glover, who travels on the Northern railway for Warren Bros. & Co., Toronto, left on Saturday last for a holiday trip to Chicago. Mr. Glover has for some time been trying to find time to visit the "Windy City," and, now that he is there, he is having a good time. That is, any rate, what his friends judge from the letters they have received from him.

LITTLE THINGS COUNT.

We have lately received a letter from Mr. J. Sutton Clark, who owns a canning factory in St. George, N.B., and not the least pleasing feature of it was the high-class stationery, that could not but please the recipient. Mr. Clark is the packer of "Royal Club" sardines, and he has had the Canadian coat of arms richly embossed on his paper and envelopes. It would naturally give one the idea that Mr. Clark is a man of taste, and, consequently, that he knows how to pack a delicious sardine.

AMONG TORONTO RETAILERS.

Trading Stamps and Early Closing. On Monday, the Toronto City Council passed a by-law prohibiting the giving, sale or use of trading stamps in that city after January 1, 1901. It is fully three months since the by-law was introduced, but its passage was postponed till after the summer holidays, and has since been delayed by pressure of other business. A by-law to amend the early-closing by-law to make it enforceable was also before the council for many weeks. It received its second reading on Monday, but the third reading was deferred in order that a deputation might be heard in regard to the amendment.

Decorate Your Stores.

The merchants of Toronto, especially those on the principal streets, should make a big effort to make their premises gay and attractive next week. The event of a visit from the heir apparent to the British throne is a fitting occasion for celebration and should be taken advantage of by every loyal citizen. The preparations made so far would indicate that Toronto will be in gala attire, and if the merchants of the city all fall in line, the reception of the Duke and the Duchess of Cornwall and York will prove a success not likely to be soon forgotten.

Two Failures.

Two Toronto grocers have failed during the last few days. One of these, Joseph Carpenter, has for five years or so carried on a grocery and butcher business at 1120 Queen street west. His creditors met on Monday at the office of R. Tew, assignee of the estate, when it was shown that the liabilities are about $2,000, with very small assets. W. H. Deverall was appointed inspector and the creditors decided to give Mr. Carpenter till Wednesday to make an offer. The other grocer who assigned was George Doxey, Parliament street. Mr. Doxey has also been in business for several years and has accumulated $1,200 of liabilities, the assets being estimated at only $150. The liabilities are principally of amounts under $100. The creditors of this estate have been called to meet on Tuesday next by Clancy Bros., Harbord street, Toronto.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. W. G. A. Lambe left on Wednesday night for a fishing trip to the Trent river.

Mr. C. S. Pickford, who has been in Halifax in charge of the West-Indian exhibit at the exhibition there, has returned to Toronto where he will spend another couple of months in the interest of West-Indian trade. He is accompanied by Mrs. Pickford.

U. S. BUYING OUR TOMATOES.

Curtis Bros., the well-known manufacturers of tomato catsup at Rochester, N.Y., have had an agent in Ontario buying tomatoes lately.

“Their agent,” remarked Mr. Wellington Boulter to THE CANADIAN GROCER, “wanted 20,000 bushels, and when I came away yesterday (Tuesday) from Picton 42 wagon loads were being shipped. The price paid was 20c. per bushel.

“The difficulty with us packers is that we are all out of cans. Owing to the strike in the United States we have simply not been able to get the cans from the factory that we had ordered. We will not get any more than 60 per cent. of last year's pack of tomatoes, let alone 70 per cent. according to our agreement with the syndicate.

“Of course you know that the season was about two weeks late this year at any rate. The syndicate, as you know, has advanced prices 2½c. per dozen, and it may possibly advance its figures still more.”

THE CHEESE MARKET.

THINGS have gone away in the cheese market. Last fall's depression has recurred even earlier in the season, and that with prices  $1\frac{1}{2}$ c. lower than last year and 2c. below those of the year before. Exporters do not know what to make of it. The past week has seen a drop of  $\frac{3}{8}$  to  $\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb. on the Montreal wharf.

Three weeks ago so satisfied were students of the market that there must be an advance in the price of cheese, that they began paying higher prices at the country boards. Shipments were nearly 400,000 boxes behind those of last year, the English make was short, prices were abnormally low, and the outlook was for a short make here in consequence. All that was needed, so they thought, was to boom things a little and the market would necessarily become excited. The boom lasted a week or ten days, and was not responded to. As a consequence, the market is back into its old position, and holders will be lucky if it does not recede any further. We understand that there are low offers being made over the cable.

The question is hard to solve at the present time. Hitherto our experience on this side of the water has been that John Bull's appetite could not be overjudged provided we gave him goods at the right price. But now Prof. Robertson says he is forsaking cheese for chicken, ham and bacon. One is apt to doubt that, for your Englishman is nothing if not conservative, particularly about his appetite. He still takes his beer, and how can he do without his cheese?

The real trouble seems to be that the English importer was caught on his fall purchases last year and he wishes to escape a repetition of such an eventuality. The "scare" has got into his head, and it seems impossible to get it out. There are numerous inquiries coming in for goods which goes to show that stocks on the other side are light, so that we can reasonably conclude that all the goods we will produce this fall will be wanted before next spring. But it would seem that if the Canadians wish to clear themselves on their season's purchases, they must carry a good portion of the stocks generally held in English winter warehouses. If they do decide to be content with lower prices, their decision will be disastrous to themselves, even though stocks are not as large as they were two weeks ago. After the manner in which they held out all last winter for lower prices we may expect them to set their shoulders to the wheel again.

GOOD PRICES FOR APPLES IN NOVA SCOTIA.

The short apple crop in Nova Scotia is not an unmixed evil. A correspondent in the Annapolis Valley writes us that although the crop is but 60 per cent. the quality is excellent, and the price at the orchards is $3 per bbl.

The recent rains, our informant says, have improved all the late fruit and the pasture land, while there have not yet been any frosts to hurt.

THE DISPLEASED POLITICIANS.

QUITE a little discussion is taking place in the columns of the daily papers in regard to the avenue through which the honors were distributed among the score or more of Canadians who obtained them.

By a sort of courtesy the honors have of recent years been bestowed upon those whom the Federal Government recommended. In the recent instance, however, the rule was not followed. The Governor-General largely, if not altogether, took the matter into his own hands.

This, naturally, has not pleased the politicians. And it was not to be expected it would, for a species of patronage is involved in having a voice in the selection of those upon whom the Royal favors shall be bestowed.

Some of them have gone to the length of consulting Sir John Bourinot in regard to the constitutional aspect of the matter, but they have not got much consolation from that gentleman's opinion, for he distinctly says that in making colonial recommendations for knighthood and other Royal honors the Governor General is not required to take the advice of his Ministers.

The list may not be, perhaps, an altogether satisfactory one, but there has probably never been a better one in the history of the Dominion. And there have certainly been those that were a great deal worse.

Those selected for honors were not selected because of their political service. And for that let us be truly thankful.

What the people of this country are most concerned about is not so much how the honors are bestowed as about upon whom they are bestowed. That is how the business men, at any rate, look upon the question.

A CONVENIENT TELEPHONE.

Business expansion has necessitated the placing of a telephone switchboard in our Toronto office, and telephones have been located in the editorial, business, advertising and mechanical departments. This will prove of great convenience to our patrons as well as to ourselves. The call number is now either 2701 or 2702 main, instead of 2148.

A HINT TO SIR RICHARD.

The Canadian people are never above taking a hint. Let them note, then, that the Government of New South Wales has decided upon the establishment of full commercial agencies, not alone in London, but also in South Africa and China. There exists in London an agricultural agency established by the Victorian Government, and the New South Wales venture will, no doubt, follow somewhat the same lines. Moreover, branches are to be established in Italy and France in the hope of a considerable direct freight by the Australian steamers which call at Naples and Marseilles on their way home.—The Canadian Gazette, London, Eng.

It is quite true that "the Canadian people are never above taking a hint."

But we regret we cannot say the same in regard to the Trade and Commerce Department of Canada, in whose care commercial agencies are supposed to repose.

The Gazette evidently recognizes that one of the needs of Canada is a commercial agency in London, and, possibly hopes, by drawing the attention of the Canadian people to what New South Wales is doing, to stir up, through the people, the Trade and Commerce Department.

Candidly we have little hope of the effort being successful. Sir Richard Cartwright has been importuned again and again in regard to the matter by organizations of business men, the trade press, and even by such influential papers of his own party as The Toronto Globe. But they have importuned in vain. Sir Richard Cartwright is more stubborn than the unjust judge. The latter did eventually supply the wants of the importunate widow. But Sir Richard appears to be as stolid and indifferent to the importunities of the business men of this country in regard to the appointment of a commercial agent at London as he was when the question was first mooted.

One of the ablest men in the Cabinet, as Sir Richard in many respects is, it was a grave mistake when he was appointed to the portfolio of Trade and Commerce. He never was in sympathy with the commercial men of this country. When they asked for bread he would with a great deal more pleasure prefer to give them a stone. And to-day his whole Department is largely permeated with the same spirit.

Matters of public interest, and which it was only right the public should obtain, have been refused by high officials in the Department to important mercantile bodies seeking them.

We have in our mind at the moment an inquiry that was made at the Department of Trade and Commerce not long since by one of the important organizations in Canada for certain information of a public character. The applicant was, however, curtly told that it was none of the public's business. And yet, at the same time, the information was printed in one of the blue books, although the applicant was not aware of the fact at the time.

The portfolio of Trade and Commerce is one of the most important in the Government, and yet it is undoubtedly the one to which the least attention is paid.

What is wanted at the head of the Department is a man with the commonsense of

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.

As Thursday and Friday of next week will be observed as holidays, THE GROCER will go to press a day earlier. Copy, therefore, should be in our hands not later than Monday at 5 p.m. The insertion of matter after that date cannot be guaranteed.

Hon. Wm. Paterson, the insight and application of Hon. Wm. Mulock, or the energy and ambition of Hon. J. Israel Tarte, and until such an one is appointed in the room and stead of Sir Richard Cartwright not only will the Department be a sinecure, but the interests of the country will suffer as well.

ADVERTISING DELINQUENT ACCOUNTS

A GOOD deal of interest has been aroused by the aggressive action of the Utica, N.Y., Retail Grocers' Association in regard to delinquent accounts. This organization publishes and offers for sale in the local papers the accounts of customers who refuse to pay up, advertising not only names and addresses, but the amount owing in each case.

Col. Robert M. Floyd, Boston, Mass., vice-president of the International Bureau of Grocers, recently submitted the question of the legality of this method to Wm. B.

French, an authority on United States commercial law and equity. Mr. French states that in his opinion the system is dangerous, and likely to lead to much litigation.

He reasons that, as a false statement, calculated to injure the reputation or interests of any person, is libelous, and its publication is actionable, it is not necessary that the false statement should directly infer dishonesty, but if its import is of that nature it becomes a libel. Therefore, if a jury or judge determined that the publication of such an account was hurtful to the customer's reputation, the publishers would bear the onus of proving the correctness of the account. The publication of accounts by an association would, therefore, be a dangerous undertaking, unless exceedingly great care was taken re the accuracy of the accounts.

A RECORD SALMON PACK.

THERE is now no doubt that the salmon pack in Canada of 1901 is the largest on record.

Statistics received this week at the Fisheries Department, Ottawa, place the pack on the Fraser river at 920,313 cases, while the total for the whole of British Columbia is estimated at nearly 1,250,000 cases.

The previous record year was 1897, when the pack was 1,015,477 cases for the whole Province, to which the Fraser river canneries contributed 860,459 cases.

As it takes on an average 12 salmon to fill a case of the canned article, it means that something like 15,000,000 fish have been caught in the waters of British Columbia this season and put in cans. And, besides these, there are the salmon that are caught for other purposes, such as freezing, salting, etc. Quite a trade is being developed in dog salmon with Japan, a number of Japanese being engaged in British Columbia in shipping the fish to their native land in a pickled state.

There is no close season in British Columbia this year, and, as sockeyes are still running, a few of the canners on the Fraser are still packing, but, according to our advices, they are confining their operations to flat tins for the export trade.

ALLEGED CANNED-SALMON POISONING.

A CLERK writes me regarding a case of sickness resulting, it is supposed, from eating canned salmon. This is an old story. We have heard it often in the past, and it has generally been proven that the canned goods were not to blame, but that the illness resulted from some other cause, and the great trade of canning goes on increasingly, unaffected by these reports. When you stop to consider how this branch of our business has grown during the last few years, it is a source of wonderment how well and wholesome the goods thus prepared must be. Why, grocers who have sold hundreds of cases of salmon and canned goods have told me they have never heard of a single case of illness resulting from their use. From actual experience, there cannot be one tin in a million that is dangerous to health.

When a family is suddenly taken ill from some cause which they cannot understand, it is the easiest thing in the world for the doctor to say they have eaten something that has not agreed with them. The question is asked: "What did you eat for your last meal?"—a number of foods, but, among others, canned salmon. That settles it; the canned salmon made them ill. The doctor does not know what the grocer knows from experience. The chances are that the illness was caused by some other food.

I knew of a family, in summer, having a noonday lunch of salmon prepared liberally with vinegar, then serving iced milk. Now, the action of the vinegar on the milk made them ill. They had the idea the salmon was the cause of their sickness, and they circulated a report to that effect, when the real trouble resulted from their own inconsiderate menu. This is an average case of trouble resulting from the use of canned goods.

No food the public use is more scientifically prepared or more generally wholesome and nutritious. Canners are, as a rule, particular regarding the quality of the stock they use. It must be up to the standard or is rejected. Scientific tests are applied to the product by skilled men who have spent years in this branch of study, and it is almost impossible for a mistake to occur in any of our first-class factories. That these stringent precautions are taken makes the grocer feel perfectly safe in recommending to his customers goods in which he has confidence.

PROMISES REGARDING DELIVERY OF GOODS.

"J.B.C."—Always keep your promises. If you tell a customer you will have the order there at 3 o'clock, be sure and do as you say, or the customer will not have confidence in you in future. Don't say 3 o'clock unless you know that the goods can be gotten there by that time. Just on this point is where many clerks make a mistake, by promising to do things for customers and never carrying them out.

When you make a promise, keep it. This means watchfulness in making promises. It is a very annoying thing to a customer to expect his goods at a certain time and then not get them for one, two or three hours after. I do not blame them very much if, after a repetition of this, they would leave the store. A clerk cannot be too careful in a case of this kind.

Try and have a reputation for prompt and careful delivery. Sometimes the driver is at fault, but generally it is the clerk who has neglected to have his orders ready for delivery. As one driver remarked to me only a few days ago, "I could deliver the goods if I could only get them. The trouble is I have to wait until they are ready, and that keeps me late. I get the blame, when the fault is with those behind the counter." Make every effort to have your part of it done at the right time. If there is any fault found, see that you are clear.

CLERKING IN LARGE AND SMALL STORES.

"W.R.S." does not like working in a small store. He would like to have a position with a large company.

There are advantages and disadvantages in working for a large company. One of the latter is that you lose your individuality to a great extent, and become as it were just a small piece of the machinery which, if not satisfactory, is quickly dispensed with. A man never knows how soon he may be dispensed with. He never has that personal contact with the head of the department or business as when working in a small store, where he is more like a partner than an employee. These are considerations aside from the matter of wages.

I doubt if there is as good a chance to progress in a very large company as in a small concern. There are the special positions, very valuable in a large company, but they are for the favored few who, with energy, perseverance and executive ability, succeed in obtaining them. Competition is very keen, and every young man should consider carefully any change he makes. His own capabilities must be carefully considered. Ambition is a good thing when backed up with genuine ability.

The trouble with most young men is they want positions they are incapable of filling. Cultivate yourself along the line of work you expect to make your life employment.

There is so much to learn in any profession or business; and it appears to me that all businesses are getting more complicated every day.

WRAPPING RICE AND SUGAR.

"F.B.": Rice and granulated sugar should always be wrapped in a heavy manila bag. Those light kind are not the thing for goods that when once the package is broken run like shot. When a customer is carrying his own parcels, particularly farmers, it is a good act to put an extra paper on them.

BRANTFORD CLERKS ORGANIZE.

Many Brantford retail clerks met on Thursday night last week, and, after hearing an address from J. R. O'Brien, of Buffalo, president of the Retail Clerks' International Protective Association, decided to organize. The following officers were elected:

President—G. W. Slaght.
1st Vice-President—H. V. Bauslaugh.
2nd Vice-President—C. H. Rutherford.
Secretary—H. D. Smith.
Treasurer—J. E. Church.

The number of charter members at the present time amounts to about 20. Another meeting will be held this week.

VISIBLE SUPPLY OF LARD.

The statistical position of lard is still a strong one. According to our telegraphic advices the world's visible stocks on October 1 were 149,763 tierces, against 202,574 tierces the previous month, and for the corresponding month of 1900, 1899 and 1898 respectively 400,467, 389,585 and 489,093 tierces.

The price of lard in Canada is 2c. higher than it was a year ago, and no one has any stock.

THE CANADIAN GROCER has made arrangements for receiving on the first of each month telegraphic advices regarding the world's visible supply of lard.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

If any reader wishes to know where any article can be purchased in Canada or abroad, a letter to the Editor will probably place him in communication with the seller.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, October 3, 1901.

GROCERIES.

SHIPMENTS of foreign dried fruits such as currants, raisins, figs and prunes have been arriving on the market somewhat freely during the week. Naturally this has been one of the features of trade. The shipments are only small, as is usual at this time. The most important shipments have yet to come forward. The weakness which has characterized the sugar market lately, resulted in a reduction in prices of 10c. per 100 lb. on Wednesday about noon, in sympathy with the United States markets. The feature in the canned goods trade is an advance of  $2\frac{1}{2}$ c. per dozen which the syndicate has put into force. This has naturally imparted a stronger tone to the market, but the wholesalers have not yet made any change in their figures. The tea market rules firm for nearly all descriptions. Shipments of new China greens have arrived on the market this week, and a cable advice received a day or so ago says that green teas, generally, have advanced about 1c. Coffees are in moderate request, with the market somewhat irregular in regard to Rios.

CANNED GOODS.

It was announced last week that the syndicate had withdrawn its prices on tomatoes. Since then, prices have again been put on the market, and they show an advance of  $2\frac{1}{2}$ c. per dozen. So far, the wholesale houses have made no change in their figures, but a firmer tone has been imparted to the market, and figures that were formerly shaded are now being firmly maintained. The ruling price to the retail trade for tomatoes is  $82\frac{1}{2}$ c. for old and 85 to 90c. for new. It is now generally conceded that the pack of tomatoes will be little, if anything more than half of that of last year. Peas are quoted at from  $82\frac{1}{2}$ c. up. The ruling price for corn is 80c. Canned vegetables, generally, are in fair demand for this time of the year, although the demand is of a sorting-up character.

A rather better demand for canned fruits is reported this week, especially for strawberries, cherries and peaches. Little or nothing is being done in canned meats. There is a fair amount of business being done in canned salmon, and, with low prices ruling for good fish, the consumption will doubtless be large this season. Quotations are: Fraser River sockeyes,  $$1.42\frac{1}{2}$  for 5-case lots and over, and  $$1.45$  for less quantities for the well-known brands and  $$1.35$  for brands not so well known; Northern sockeye,  $$1.25$  to  $$1.30$ ; pink salmon, 95c. to  $$1$ ; cohoes,  $$1.05$  to  $$1.10$ . A report just received by the Fisheries Department at Ottawa says the pack on the Fraser river is 920,313 cases. It is estimated that the total pack in British Columbia this season will be about 1,250,000 cases, by far the largest on record. Recent exchanges from British Columbia say that there is still a run of sockeye, and that a few of the canneries are still operating, but they are only packing in flat tins.

Toronto, Montreal, and St.
John prices current.

COFFEE.

The market for Brazilian coffees has been stronger on account of less favorable crop news. Besides this there was the influence of higher exchange, but at the moment there is an easier feeling again on account of the bears selling. Business on importation account in Canada is light; the views of buyers here being below those of the importers. The wholesalers report that the retailers are buying a little more freely than they were. We quote green Rios as follows: No. 7,  $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5,  $8\frac{1}{2}$ c.; No. 4,  $9\frac{1}{4}$ c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is a little doing in syrups, and the demand for molasses shows a little improvement. Advices from New Orleans report that the climatic conditions are favorable for the ripening of the growing cane, and that the outlook continues good for the crop of molasses. Although the crop will be late, it will not be as much so as it was at one time anticipated.

SPICES.

Advices from the primary markets state that there is a good demand for nearly all kinds of spices, especially for cassia, pimento, cayenne and mace. There is quite a scarcity of white pepper, the price of which is firm.

NUTS.

Brokers on the local market report that the wholesalers in Canada have bought pretty freely for importation. The outlook for the nut crop, generally, is good. Ferd, Balleor & Co., of Messina, cable this week that they have shipped, at the end of September, all filberts sold to Canada for October shipment, so an early arrival of these nuts is anticipated, should no misfortune befall them in transit.

SUGAR.

The feature of the sugar market is a reduction of 10c. per 100 lb. in all refined sugars. This reduction took place on Wednesday about noon, and was in sympathy with the decline of 15c. which took place on the New York market on Tuesday. The reduction in New York left the net price of granulated at  $\$4.85$  per 100 lb. The price of granulated on the Toronto market is now  $\$4.48$  for Montreal granulated, and  $\$4.43$  for Acadia. The raw beet sugar market has ruled fairly steady, the price for prompt delivery being 7s.  $6\frac{3}{4}$ d. Cane sugars in New York are firm, muscavados having advanced 1-16c. The decline in granulated sugar in the United States has been expected for some time, owing to the large margin upon which the refiners were working. The meltings in the United States last week were 33,000 tons, and the receipts, 12,522 tons.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Rice is meeting with a steady demand at unchanged prices. Cable advices report an advance of 6d. per cwt. in tapioca. The market has been firm for some weeks, and, as a consequence, there has been a little more buying on importation account in anticipation of an advance in prices.

TEAS.

The general position of the tea market is rather more favorable than it was a week ago. Advices from London state that the market for Indian teas is a little higher; in sympathy with the previous advance in Ceylon teas. The demand here for Indian and Ceylon teas is only moderate. Since last week some shipments of new season's green China teas have been received and they have been gradually bought up at full prices by the trade. There is likely to be a distinct shortage of these teas, and high prices are ruling. Orders placed at limited prices have not been executed, and very few consignments of China green teas are likely to be seen on this market this season. A cable received in Toronto this week from Wisner & Co. reports a further advance of 1c. per lb. in China green teas generally. A cable received on Wednesday from Calcutta said that they were unable to ship Indian green teas up to the standard required for the Canadian market, owing to the small quantity of that description being brought forward. A cable received from Japan since our last reports that the market has advanced 1c. per lb. The third crop Japan teas are showing excellent quality, and it is thought that the inquiry for them has led to shippers demanding higher prices.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRENTS—A further small shipment via Liverpool has arrived and it is meeting with a fair demand at  $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. for cleaned fine Filiatras and  $7\frac{3}{4}$ c. for Amalias. Futures, to arrive November 1, are quoted as follows: Filiatras, 6 to  $6\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb.; Patras,  $6\frac{1}{2}$  to 7c.; Vostizzas,  $7\frac{1}{2}$  to 8c. The primary market is firmer, and since our last review prices have advanced fully 2s. 6d. per cwt., and a cable received on Wednesday said the tendency was still upward.

VALENCIA RAISINS—Prices have fluctuated within a limit of about 2s. per cwt. since the opening of the season, and are now about  $\frac{1}{2}$ c. below the opening figures. The little lot of new fruit that has arrived on this market via Liverpool is quoted at  $6\frac{1}{2}$  to 7c. for fine off-stalk and  $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. for selected. Wholesalers are quoting to arrive at 6c. for fine off-stalk and  $6\frac{1}{2}$  to 7c. for selected.

CALIFORNIAN RAISINS—A few Californian seeded raisins have been received on the market in 1-lb. packages. They are being quoted at 10c., but there does not appear to be anything doing in them.

MALAGA RAISINS—The invoices for the early shipments have been received, and the fruit is expected in the course of a couple of weeks. A good average crop is expected.

SULTANA RAISINS—These are a little firmer in the primary market.

FIGS—A small shipment of Eleme figs arrived on this market during the week. A novelty in the shape of "Briquettes" came with the shipment. "Briquettes" are nominally 10 1-pound packages of figs in a box. They are put up by Pralopazzi Bros., Smyrna, and distributed to the trade through their agents, Watt & Scott. New Eleme figs are quoted at 10 to 11c. in 10 lb. boxes and at 11c. in 1-lb. briquettes.

PRUNES—A shipment of new season's Californian prunes is on the local market this week. There is little or no demand for prunes just now.

GREEN FRUITS.

There is a good business doing for the first week in October. Plums are done, but there is still a good supply of grapes, while pears and peaches are coming in fairly well. Cranberries, both native and Cape Cod, are starting to sell nicely. Cape Cod are held at $8 per bbl., and Ontario at $6 per bbl. Some Cape Cod berries are offering at $1 per basket. Bananas, oranges and lemons are steady at unchanged prices. Pineapples are still offering at $3.50 per case. Cocoanuts are in quiet demand. The quality of arrivals this year has been poor, many sour nuts being received. We quote prices as follows: Pears, 20 to 40c. per basket; peaches, Crawford's, 75c. to $1.25; plums, 20 to 60c.; apples, 15 to 35c.; egg plant, 20 to 25c.; tomatoes, 15 to 20c.; cucumbers, 10 to 15c.; gherkins, 40 to 65c.; peppers, 25 to 50c.; grapes, in 10 lb. baskets, 15 to 20c. for Champions and 20 to 25c. for Delawares; quinces, 30 to 40c. per basket; muskmelons, 25 to 35c. per crate of 12; bananas, $1.75 for 1st and 75c. to $1 for eight-hands. New Verdill lemons are offering at $3.75 to $4.25 per box, and Jamaica oranges at $6 per bbl. or $4 to $4.25 per box; Cape Cod cranberries, $8 per bbl.; Ontario cranberries, $6 per lb.; pineapples, $3.50 per case.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS—The continued activity of the market has resulted in such a buoyant feeling that some dealers are asking as high as 17c. for selected new-laid eggs, while 15 to 16c. seems the general figure for this line. There are some cold-stored eggs offering at 14 to 16c., and limed eggs are offering at 14 to 15c. per doz.

BEANS—The arrival of the new crop has caused the abrupt reaction in prices which was anticipated several weeks ago in this column. The crop in the Essex peninsula, while under the average, is proving fairly large, and as there is not the keen demand for export noted a few weeks ago, holders have been compelled to accept a reduction of 30 to 35c. in order to make sales. The local jobbing quotations are now $1.75 to $1.80 for prime pea beans.

HONEY—There is a good movement. Prices are steady at unchanged figures. We quote: 9 to 10c. for extracted clover and $1.75 to $2 for No. 1 clover comb.

DRIED APPLES—There is little doing as yet in dried apples, and opinion as to what the market should open at varies from 5 to 7c. It is probable, however, that choice dried stock will be worth at least  $5\frac{1}{2}$  to 6c. Old evaporated apples are jobbing in a quiet way at 8c., but new stock of best quality will probably be somewhat higher.

POTATOES—The market is well maintained. Cars are selling fairly well at 50 to 55c. per bushel on track Toronto. Small lots are in active request at 60 to 70c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER—The market bears marked indications of a general weakening among holders of dairy butter. Local jobbers are receiving unusually large quantities, much of which is proving to be of decidedly inferior quality. Creamery makes are steadier, owing to the way in which the market has been kept cleared up by export orders. Prices are unchanged. We quote as follows: Dairy prints, 16 to 18c.; best tubs, 15 to 16c.; poor to medium grades, 12 to 14c.; creamery prints, 21 to 22c.; boxes, 19 to 20c.

CHEESE—The market is active, as the export prices are well maintained, and buyers are confident. From 10 to 10 $\frac{1}{4}$ c. is the general quotation.

POULTRY AND GAME.

DRESSED POULTRY—The cooler weather is, as usual, accompanied by increased receipts of all poultry. Chickens are 10c. higher, as the demand is active, and larger birds are arriving. Geese are offering. We quote: Chickens, 40 to 60c. per pair; hens, 30 to 50c. per pair; ducks, 50 to 75c. per pair; geese, 7 to 8c. per lb.; turkeys, 10 to 11c. per lb.

LIVE POULTRY—The Canadian Produce Co., 36 and 38 Esplanade east, Toronto, will pay until October 10, for spring chickens, not less than two lb. each, 6c. per lb. For ducklings, 5c. per lb. For hens (including last year's birds) 3c. per lb. These prices are for live weight on arrival. Crates shipped free and express paid up to 50c. per 100 lb. of chickens.

GAME—There is a fair supply of wild ducks, and all receipts are readily absorbed at the following figures: Teal and butterballs, 25 to 30c.; pintails and redheads, 50 to 60c.; black ducks, 75c. to $1 per brace.

FISH.

Finnan haddie is now freely offered. Codfish is 1 to  $1\frac{1}{2}$ c. dearer, while whitefish are  $\frac{1}{2}$  to 1c. higher. Spanish mackerel is done. There is an improvement in the demand for dried and smoked fish, as well as for oysters. We quote as follows: Fresh fish—Codfish, 7 to  $7\frac{1}{2}$ c.; whitefish, 8c.; trout,  $7\frac{1}{2}$ c.; halibut, 15c.; sea salmon, 20 to 25c.; haddock, 6c.; herring, 4c.; perch, 4c.; British Columbian salmon, 20c. Smoked fish—Ciscos, \$1 per basket; finnan haddie, 7 to 8c. per lb. Digby herring, 75 to 80c. per bundle. Prepared fish—Dried cod, in 112 lb. bundles, \$4.75 per cwt.; flitch cod, \$5 to \$5.25; boneless cod, in bricks, 5 to  $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb.; steak cod,  $6\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb.; shredded cod (2 doz. in box), \$1.80 per box; boneless fish, loose, in 25-lb. boxes, 4 to  $4\frac{1}{2}$ c., and 5-lb. boxes, 5c. per lb. Oysters—Standards, \$3.75 per small pail or \$1.50 per Imperial gallon; selects, \$2 per Imperial gallon.

VEGETABLES.

There is a good demand for all lines. Red cabbage, pickling onions, squashes, etc., are now selling freely. We quote as follows: Carrots and beets, 20c. per peck; turnips, 15 to 20c. per peck; lettuce, 20 to 30c. per doz.; radishes, 30 to 40c.; watercress, mint and parsley, 20c.; cauliflower, $1.25 to $1.50; celery, 40 to 60c.; red cabbage, No. 1, 10 to 15c.; cabbage, 25 to 50c.; corn, 6 to 10c.; cucumbers, short, 10 to 15c.; tomatoes, 15 to 25c. per basket; pickling onions, 30 to 40c. per peck; dry onions, $1.00 per bush.; potatoes, 60 to 70c. per bushel; gherkins, 15 to 25c. per 100; egg plant, 30 to 35c. per basket; Hub-

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN—Manitoba wheat has declined 3c. and Ontario wheat 2c. in the week. Manitoba No. 1 hard is quoted at 79c. grinding in transit, or 77c. Toronto and west. Ontario wheat is quoted at 65 to 66c. at outside points, middle freights. Deliveries on the local street market are fairly large. SEEDS.

Threshing of alsike is about over, and most of that threshed has been delivered. There is still a good demand, however, for good seed at $5.50 to $6.60 at outside points, with a slightly higher price for absolutely pure, large grain seed. Red clover is in good request at $4.60 to $4.75 for the finest feed, suitable for exporting, and at $4.25 to $4.50 for medium qualities, which would have to be kept over till the spring trade.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES—The market continues active, with prices firm. We quote: Cowhides, No. 1, 8c.; No. 2, 7c.; No. 3, 6c. Steerhides are worth 1c. more. Cured hides are quoted at 8½ to 9c.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

MONTREAL, October 3, 1901.

GROCERIES.

A FAIRLY good trade continues to be done in all lines of groceries; some dealers confess the volume is not up to that of last year on account of the disfavor shown to heavy buying, but the small orders are numerous and the trade is in a fairly healthy condition. Sugar remains weak, with refiners' prices somewhat above a mark proportionate with the present values of raw sugars. Syrups are steady and there is a fair demand for molasses. The syndicate has advanced the price of tomatoes by 2½c. per doz., but wholesale quotations remain unchanged. Blueberries are very scarce. Kipperd herring is strong on account of the short catch. The feature of the spice market is the strong tone that pervades the pepper market. Patna rice and tapioca are also said to be good "buy's." Valencia raisins have declined somewhat on the week, fine off-stalk being quoted at 16s. 6d. Currants are from 1s. to 2s. higher than a week ago. To date dealers have bought lightly of raisins, compared with former years. Quotations are out on Californian raisins but only seeded raisins and loose muscatels are offered by the jobbing houses. Teas are firm all round. Lard and pork are strong and all cereals maintain their firmness, rolled oats being again advanced this week.

SUGAR.

The weakness which has characterized the market for raw beet sugar during the past month still continues to be the principal feature, October option being cabled at 7s. 6½d. and, strange to say, November 7s. 7½d. Last year October was quoted at 10s. 2½d., so prices show a decline of 2s. 6½d. on the year. Advices from the other side are changing in tone and it is believed that an acute advance is in store. As yet, however, no speculation seems to have set in. At the present price of raw sugar the value of refined is somewhat high, but whether the market will recede is a matter for New York to settle. The latest news is that The American Sugar Refinery has withdrawn all guarantees, which is interpreted in different ways. Both the local and New York markets have been dull and unchanged, dealers buying only for their immediate requirements. Montreal refiners sell at $1.10 for granulated and $3.55 to $1.30 for yellows per 100 lb. City 5c. extra.

TEAS.

The latest London mail advice dated September 19, on Ceylon teas says: "There was good demand for all that has been brought forward. Common kinds, with a few exceptions, showed an advance of ¼d. per lb., medium grades ½d. per lb., and good medium to fine, ¾d. to 1d. per lb. Broken Pekoes were again in good request, but these teas still show most excellent value to buyers. Finest kinds were firm at previous rates." Re Indians: "There has been a good demand for all classes of tea; common leaf has recovered ¼d. to ½d. of the previous decline and closes firm. Strong broken of all grades have sold at very steady rates."

Japan teas maintain the firmness we reported last week and have seemingly steadied themselves after the few weeks of depression. Just now, however, there is not a great deal of business doing. China greens are strong and firm.

SYRUPS

Syrup is steady at last week's advance. There has been some inquiry for it with the advent of cooler weather. We quote: 3½c. in bbls., 3½c. in ½ bbls., 3½c. in ¼ bbls., $1.50 in 38½-lb. and $1.10 in 25-lb. pails.

CANNED GOODS.

This week the canners' syndicate has put out new prices on tomatoes, 2½c. higher than when quotations were withdrawn. At the same time they guarantee only 60. per cent. delivery. As yet, local wholesalers have not altered their quotations, continuing to sell at 82½ to 90c., but the market is perceptibly stronger. Peas are still selling at 80 to 85c. and corn is steady at the same figures. The feature in fruits is the scarcity of canned blueberries which are now worth 85 to 90c. We quote fruits: Strawberries, $1.50; raspberries, $1.40; gooseberries, $1.40; pears, $1.55 for 2's, and $2 for 3's; Lombard plums, $1.20; greengages, $1.30; yellow peaches, $1.90 for 2's and $2.65 for 3's; sliced pineapple, $2.30, and $2.45 for grated; 3-lb. apples, 90c.; red pitted cherries, $2. and whites, $2.15; blueberries, 85 to 90c.

There is nothing fresh to report in salmon; little business is being done. Buyers are evidently waiting to see what the packers of such brands as "Horseshoe" and "Clover Leaf" will do after they have filled their contracts. From stock jobbers are selling standard salmon at $1.10 to $1.45, and private brands at $1.50 to $5 a case. Kipperd herring remains very firm and the market is likely to see an advance from the $1 a case now prevailing, as the catch both in Nova Scotia and Scotch waters has been very short. Lobsters are worth $11 to $14 a case.

SPICES.

The feature of the spice market is the strong tone that it has taken on. Pepper is particularly strong. New York despatches say that "the market has been active, with a large demand for cassias of all grades, pimento, mace and cayennes. Grinding grades of cassias, pimento, mace and better grades of cayennes, are higher and are likely to advance materially. The position generally speaking of the whole list is decidedly improved. Gingers are in good shape and white peppers are very scarce. The general demand from grinders now setting in is the best we have ever seen." Local dealers have slightly advanced their price of cassias from 11½c. to 13½c. We quote as follows: Nutmegs, 35 to 65c. per lb., as to size; Penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 20c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole, Cochin, 14 to 16c.; Japan, 10c.; Jamaica, 20c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16c.; Jamaica, 25c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Imported Patna rice is advancing rapidly and on a basis of laid down cost, jobbers should sell at 1½ to 1½c. As yet they have not changed their quotations, but no concessions are allowed. Italian rice is worth 9½ to 10c. We quote in combiue district: B rice, in bags, $3.10; in half bags, $3.15; in ¼ bags, $3.20; in pockets, $3.25. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $3 in bags; $3.05 in ½ bags; $3.10 in ¼ bags; and $3.15 in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4½c. per lb., and tapioca, 3½ to 3½c.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

VALENCIA RAISINS.—Since our last week's report, the Valencia raisin market has weakened somewhat and is now cabled at 18s. 6d. for selected f.o.b. Montreal. The Bellona will take on her cargo the beginning of next week, but dealers have not yet bought their supplies for this boat. Prices on goods to arrive have not changed, 5½ to 6c. being the value set on fine off-stalk, 6½ to 7c. for selected and 7 to 7½c. for 1 crown layers. Old goods are offered at irregular prices to clear.

CURRENTS.—Currants have stiffened since the Bellona left port and a rise of ½c. per lb. is recorded, 16s. 6d. being the latest advice. For delivery in the first half of October fine Filiatras are quoted at 5½ to 6½c., and cleaned, 6½ to 6½c.; cleaned in 1-lb. cartons, 8c., and finest Vostizza currants, in half-cases, 7½ to 8½c.

SULTANA RAISINS.—The market is steady and unchanged with dealers offering new goods to arrive at 8 to 10c.

FIGS.—The market is steady and prices are unchanged. Good trading is reported. Comadre figs to arrive are worth 3½ to 3½c. in tapnets. Eleme figs will be sold at $1.05 per 10-lb. XXX box, $1.95 per 19-lb. XXX box, $1.30 per 28-lb. XXXX box, 8c. per 12-oz. box, and 12c. per 16-oz. box.

DATES.—Are quoted to arrive at 4½ to 5½c.

PRUNES.—The market is bare of old stocks and good orders are being placed for goods to arrive. Santa Clara prunes are quoted at 8½c. for 40-50's, 8c. for 50-60's, 7½c. for 60-70's, 7c. for 70-80's, 6½c. for 80-90's, and 6c. for 90-100's.

CALIFORNIAN RAISINS.—New prices are out in Californian raisins, averaging about 2½c. below last year's figures. Dealers are not operating except for seedless and loose muscatels. New seeded raisins are worth 9½ to 10c. and loose muscatels in 50-lb. boxes, 3 crowns, 7½ to 8c., and 4 crown, 8 to 8½c.

PEELS.—English peels for late delivery are quoted at 10 to 11c. for lemon, 10½ to 11½c. for orange, and 14½ to 15½c. for citron peel.

NUTS.

Pure Mayette walnuts are worth 11 to 12c. to arrive in December. Sicily filberts, 8½ to 9½c. to arrive in November; Tarragona almonds, 10½ to 11½c., and shelled almonds, 26c., to arrive in November also.

GREEN FRUITS.

A fairly good trade has been done during the past week, although the cool weather sees a falling off in the demand. Peaches, plums and pears are scarcer and consequently higher. Spanish onions are now on the market. Grapes have come forward freely and are selling at low prices. We quote as follows: Californian Valencia's $5 to $6 per box; Jamaica oranges, $5.75 per bbl.; Messina lemons, 300's, $3.25 to $4.50; 360's, $2.50 per box; Verdilli lemons, $3.75 to $4.75 per box; pineapples, 20 to 30c.; Canadian apples, 15 to 30c. per basket; Californian plums, $1 to $2 per box; peaches, $1 to $1.25; limes, $1.50 per box; Ontario peaches, 90c. to $1 per basket; Ontario plums, 50 to 60c.; cocoanuts, $3.25 per bag of 100; Californian Bartlett pears, $4.25 per box; watermelons, 15 to 25c.; bananas, No. 1, $1.75 to $2.25, and eight hands, $1.35 to $1.50; Can-

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR.—There is a fairly good local business passing but chiefly in limited quantities to meet immediate wants, as dealers say they look for lower rather than higher prices. Wholesalers are asking $3.85 to $1 per bbl. for 90 per cent. patents.

GRAIN.—We quote: Manitoba, No. 1 hard, 77c. afloat September; peas, 81c.; rye, 57 to 58½c.; No. 2 barley, 54c.; oats, 39 to 39½c.; buckwheat, 56½ to 57c.; corn, 63c.

OATMEAL.—The market is firmer again this week and wholesalers have advanced another 10c. per bbl., their quotation being $4.60 per bbl. and $2.25 per bag. Standard granulated and fine oatmeal in bags, $2.50.

FEED.—The market is steady at $15 to $15.50 in carlots for Ontario in bulk. Manitoba in bags is quoted at $15.50 to $16. Shorts keep scarce at $17.50 to $18.

BALED HAY.—There is a good demand for hay for export as well as for local account, and quite a brisk business is being done on spot as well as at country points. Carlots of No. 2 have sold at $8, choice bringing $8.50. A few cars of No. 1 timothy have been placed at $9.25 to $9.50.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER.—To date Canada has reported 276,000 packages of butter this year against 207,000 packages for the same period last year. During the past two weeks the exports have been particularly heavy. Fancy creamery is being bought at 21¼ to 21½c., sometimes even 22c. being reached for export. Good to fine is quoted at 19½ to 21c. Dairy is dull at 16½c.

CHEESE.—The short-lived boom in cheese has collapsed as buyers across the ocean refused to allow it. About 10c. is all that can be got for finest western. Eastern ranges from 9½ to 9¾c., and undergrades, 9 to 9½c. Stocks have been reduced by 215,000 boxes during the past week.

MARKET NOTES

Glucose is ¼c. per lb. higher.
The syndicate has advanced tomatoes 2½c. per dozen.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE CANADIAN GROCER.

ST. JOHN, N.B., October 1, 1901.

BUSINESS is fair. The failure mentioned last week has been followed by three or four others, because of their large indebtedness to the former concern, which was in the form of notes, and which, without the usual privilege of renewing, they were unable to meet. We are pleased to report that the direct loss to St. John merchants is understood to be not heavy. The local wholesale houses have been affected very little. In the markets there is a general firm feeling. Oatmeal is very scarce and high. Dried fruits have had much attention. New Californian goods are being quoted. There is every prospect of a very large winter port business. The Canadian Pacific Railway people are very much enlarging their terminal facilities.

OIL—In burning oil prices remain unchanged. The sale is very large. Paint oils are rather quiet. In linseed oil the market is rather easier. Turpentine is quite firm. Lubricating oil is but a light sale. Prices are unchanged. Seal oil is very firm and likely to go higher. The loss by fire in Newfoundland was not as great as was expected, as they had shipped the larger quantity, much going to Great Britain. Cod oil is high. The supply for some years has been light. Candles remain at the lower price of last week. Wax is unchanged.

SALT—There continues to be a good demand for Liverpool coarse salt. Prices are firmly held. While there is a fair supply further arrivals are not expected for a little time. In Canadian fine the demand is quiet. There is quite a falling off in the sale of wood boxes, and an increase in the sale of small bags in barrels. This is caused by the higher price at which boxes have been held for some time. We quote as follows: Liverpool coarse, 56 to 58c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1; Canadian fine, $1 per bag; cheese and butter salt bulk, $2.40 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $2.85 to $2.90 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.70 to $2.75 per bbl.; 20-lb. wood boxes, 22c. each; 10 lb. wood boxes, 14c. each; cartons, $2 per case of 2 doz.; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per doz.; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

CANNED GOODS—The interest of the week has been in tomatoes. These have been withdrawn by the syndicate, and it is reported that higher prices are being asked. Gallon apples have been freely received by the trade, but the prices are higher. Nova Scotian packers supply the market. The outlook for vegetables and fruits is to higher prices. There are quite a quantity of Nova Scotian tomatoes to arrive. Salmon has been offered rather lower. The market is quite bare. There is also a short supply of baked beans. American canned meats are quite reasonable, and the season of demand is about over. Local-packed sardines, kippered herring and haddies are being received.

GREEN FRUITS—There is a much firmer feeling in apples. There is quite a good crop in Nova Scotia as far as quality is concerned, but prices are high. Very large quantities are being shipped to London, where high prices are reported. In oranges, the sale is light and chiefly in Jamacias. Lemons have a fair sale and are quite firm. Grapes are at the low price free sellers. Ontario stock is good. Ontario peaches have brought good prices, and plums have moved off freely at fair figures. In pears, Nova Scotian and American are still offered at low prices. Quince are offered. In Cape Cod cranberries, both American and domestic, are offered. Prices are high. The American is the higher, being the better berry and much more highly colored.

DRIED FRUITS—New Californian prunes have been quoted, and are quite freely bought by the trade. Prices are rather higher than last year. The very high price of evaporated apples is expected to cause a large demand. Apricots would have sold very freely, but were so very high. New apricots and peaches are to hand. Some prices are heard in Californian raisins, but the market does not seem settled. In Valencia raisins, there are unsettled conditions, but best brands are firmly held. Malaga fruit is rather lower, and the market seems easy. Dates are held at low figures. Currants are low. Buyers of dried fruits are backward. Evaporated apples are high, and little is being done.

PRODUCE—In eggs prices move up slowly. There is but a fair business. Butter is firm and best quality has a ready sale. Western butter is being received. Cheese is quiet. The local market is not a large one.

SUGAR—There is a good steady sale. Prices are unchanged, and the Guild is working well. There is not complete satisfaction regarding yellows. The Halifax refinery offer but two grades, which is not enough, and they do not rightly correspond with Montreal sugars.

MOLASSES—The market is unchanged. There is quite a large stock of Porto Rico held, and prices at the moment are rather unsettled. Syrups in tins are offered. So far no American molasses has been received.

FISH—Fresh fish are very scarce and the variety limited. In dry fish the market is unchanged. Any tendency would seem to point to rather an easier feeling. Pickled herring are higher. Full figures are likely to rule. Dealers are still holding alewives, hoping for higher figures. In smoked herring, there have been fair receipts, and prices are easy. Boneless fish has a steady sale. Kippers are freely offered. Haddies move more freely. We quote as follows: Large and medium dry cod, $3.50 to $3.60; small, $2.50 to $2.60; haddies, 4 1/2 to 5 1/2 c.; smoked herring, 10 to 11 c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2 1/2 c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5 c.; pollock, $1.50 to $1.60 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2.25 to $2.35 per half bbl.; Canso herring, $5 per bbl.; kippered herring, $1 per box.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL—In flour, there is a fair business, and prices are firmly held, with rather upward tendency. Oatmeal is high and scarce, and hard to get. Oats are high. Cornmeal is held firm at full figures. Feed is hard to get. New beans are quite freely quoted. Prices continue to decline. Buyers are holding off. Barley is quoted rather higher. Blue and split peas are scarce and high. The export of hay is still very large. ## ST. JOHN NOTES.

C. H. Clark, of St. Stephen, was in the city this week.

Syrup in 2 and 5-lb. tins is in stock with Hall & Fairweathers.

J. G. Rood & Co., of Waterville, N.B., have landed and distributed to the trade two cars of gallon apples this week.

THE GROCER regrets to report that Puddington & Merrett and The F. C. Colwell Candy Co. have suspended payment.

Mr. Wiley, representing Armour & Co., Chicago, in company with the local representative, J. Hunter White, called on the trade this week.

Smith & Tilton, one of our larger brokerage houses, have dissolved partnership. J. A. Tilton remains at the old stand, and will close the business of the old firm. The houses which they have represented have been divided between them.

WOES OF A GROCER.

It was an up-town grocery which a little girl about five years of age entered the other day, saying: "I want a spool of cotton!" "You won't get that here," replied the grocer, jokingly. "You'll have to go to the blacksmith's shop for that." "I want a spool of cotton," the child repeated, clutching something very tightly in her right hand. And she continued to reiterate the request for a long time before quitting the store. Presently her mother appeared in the door, with a very irate countenance. "D'ye mean to tell me that you haven't got a nutmeg?" she inquired indignantly. "Was that what the child wanted?" exclaimed the grocer. "She asked for a spool of cotton." "Couldn't you see the nutmeg in her hand?" retorted the mother. "I saw something in her hand, but I didn't know what it was." "Well, all you had to do was to smell it," was the final shot.

THE NEW BRUNSWICK TOURIST BUREAU.

The Tourist Information Bureau closes to-day after a very successful season. A heavy correspondence has been carefully attended to, while visitors in the city have been enlightened regarding our most attractive and most interesting places. Visitors are surprised that such an office should be in existence, where there are no charges for literature and information, and are always impressed with the open-heartedness of the people.

The Tourist Association have done everything possible to advertise and bring visitors to the Province, and have also looked after their comfort while here. Weather and everything else have favored us this year, and we have good cause to consider this summer's tourist travel the heaviest for some time.—Sun, St. John, N.B., September 28.

Fresh Chewing Gum

BRINGS FRESH CUSTOM.

D ID you ever figure the profit on the premium system of buying Chewing Gum?

Take, for instance, the rocking chair that costs $6.75 with gum which sells for $8.00. Your cash profit is $1.25, without figuring the freight you pay on the chair. Now, figure 800 pieces of Britten's Havana Fruit Gum at 80c. per box, which contains one dollar and eighty cents worth of gum, and you will find the 800 pieces would cost you $3.55 5-9. Consequently, you pay $3.19 4-9 for your premium chair. This seems an easy way of getting the chair, but, if you'll watch some of the advertisements of the departmental stores, you'll see some of the same chairs sold for $1.98. Don't forget that the jobbing house, the railway company, the chewing gum company, all have to make a profit on this chair, and, as you are the purchaser, you must pay the piper.

THE PROVISION TRADE.

The Markets—Roast Pork on the Fiji Islands—Miscellaneous Notes.

ROAST PORK ON THE FIJI ISLANDS.

THE following extracts from a description of a meal on the Fiji Islands, from the pen of Col. John F. Hobbs, in The National Provisioner, gives an interesting account of a hog roast by the native Fijians:

"While the palaver was going on a large 'royal pig' was brought forth and killed by the simple process of knocking it on the head. I might explain, as it was afterward explained to me, that a 'royal pig' is simply a pig from the king's sty and fattened for the imperial household and for state occasions similar to this one.

"A fire had been built of wood. In two holes, which had been dug, pronged posts were stuck and made secure. A great long skewer pole which evidently had done service on other state occasions, was brought from a house by a big fellow. He opened the pig's mouth and rammed the pole right through him lengthwise and then irreverently cut the animal's tail off. They neither cleaned the pig inside nor outside. The body was then lifted on to the posts and turned from time to time until it was done. Incidentally the hair had also been singed or burnt from the skin. With a long, keen reed spear the supervising or cooking chief would now and again stab the body deep, withdraw the rod and pass it under his nose. This process was kept up until the pig was deemed cooked. Then it was taken down.

"During this whole time and process warriors in fantastic paints girated in various kinds of dances to chants which lent a wierd aspect to the surroundings. This was to impress us. I was sensibly impressed.

"I kept my eye on the pig. Its carcass was hardly on the mat spread for its reception when men began to rip up the skin with shell or flint knives and peel it off from the hindquarters. If the disembowling ever took place I never saw it. I understood that the feet, head and bones were served to the women, the forequarters to the warriors and lesser lights, while the hindquarters or hams were reserved alone for the king, the guests of the crown and the big chiefs of the tribes.

"This curious roast did not eat badly. It had a peculiar flavor; but I've been told that offal sweetens meat when cooked within the animal's body with it.

"The side dishes were beyond me. It was interpreted to me that the bigger glut-ton you made of yourself the greater pleasure it gave the king; so I put my eye on King Thakambau, my hope in God and sailed in to do my share to make Great Britain and its High Commissioner solid with the Fiji natives. But I don't wish any more Fiji parley feasts in my dietetic experience, and I thoroughly sympathize with Sir Arthur Gordon when he said 'I don't like the Fiji menu.'"

COLD STORAGE SPACE FOR SALE.

The special committee appointed to look after the St. Lawrence market have recommended that tenders be asked for the lease of the cold storage space in the basement of the new building. It is proposed that the space available, 202,000 cubic feet, be leased for 21 years, and with conditions to the effect that the rates charged do not exceed those ruling elsewhere in Ontario.

HORSE MEAT IN VIENNA.

According to Carl R. Hurst, Consul-General at Vienna, the high prices of beef, mutton and pork in that city have put this meat out of reach of the poorer classes, and have caused a considerable demand for horse meat. It has been legal to sell horse meat in Vienna since 1854, since which time the sale has steadily grown, until last year 25,646 horses were slaughtered for food.

The price of horse meat ranges, per lb. of fore quarter, from 5 to 8c.; hind quarter, 6 to 9c.; choice cuts for steak and roast, from 5 to 11c.; the same cuts in beef averaging from 20 to 24c. per lb. The horse meat is also worked up into sausages, and, as such, sells at correspondingly low prices. Butchers and restauraners selling horse meat must have a conspicuous sign announcing the fact.

The regulations as to the proper condition of the horses slaughtered are very stringent and carefully enforced. The special inspectors appointed are, in the main, veterinary surgeons, and those intrusted with the microscopical examination of the meat must be able to show a certificate of having graduated from a course of study in this line at a veterinary or similar institution, and are sworn to the faithful performance of their duties.

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

All dressed meats hold firm in tone, as the supply is moderate and the demand improving. We quote: Dressed hogs, $9.40 to $9.80 per cwt.; mutton, $5.50 to $6 per cwt.; lambs, 6½ to 7½c. per lb.; beef carcasses, $7.25 per cwt. for best and $6 to $7 for mediums; hind quarters, 8c. for best; fore quarters, 4½ to 5½c. for best; calves, $8.50 for best and $6 to $7 for mediums.

The market for pork products continues active, and prices continue to stiffen. Breakfast bacon and rolls are ½c. higher. We quote: Long clear bacon, 11½ to 12c. Smoked meats: Breakfast bacon, 15c.; rolls, 12½c.; small hams, 14c.; medium hams, 14c.; large hams, 13c.; shoulder hams, 12c.; backs, 15c. Barrel pork—Canadian heavy mess, $20.50; Canadian short cut, $22. Lard—Tierces, 11½c.; tubs, 11¼c.; pails, 12c.

MONTREAL.

The market is still very firm. Cottolene has been advanced ¼c., and American pork is also 25c. higher. We quote as follows: Heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $22.50; Chicago clear pork, $25.00 for heavy and $24.50 for medium; selected heavy short cut mess pork, boneless, $22.50 to $23.00; hams, 13c.; bacon, 15c.; lard, pure Canadian, $2.40 to $2.45; per pail; refined lard compound (Fairbank's), $2.01 for 1 to 24 pails; $2.00 for 25 to 49 pails; $1.98 for 50 pails and over; Snow White and Globe compound, $1.65 per pail; Cottolene, 9¾c. per lb. in tierces, 10¾c. in 26-lb. pails, and 10½c. in 50-lb. boxes, for Quebec.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

Barrelled pork continues to climb. Barrelled beef is higher, and is very firm, and still higher prices expected. Lard is very high, as are smoked meats. Compound lard has quite a free sale.

TO MAKE GOOD COCOA.

One. Advise your customers to start with a pure cocoa of undoubted quality and excellence of manufacture, and which bears the name of a respectable firm. This point is important, for there are many cocoas on the market which have been doctored, either by the addition of alkali, starch, malt, kola, hops, etc. The treatment of kola with alkali, is to render it more miscible with water; and therefore a cocoa which seems to dissolve very freely in water should be regarded with suspicion. If the cocoa thickens very much in the cup, even though a small quantity is used, it probably points to an addition of starch which lowers the nutritive value of the leverage. The addition of other constituents is unnecessary and have no good effect, but, on the contrary, may be positively harmful.

Two. With a little warm water or milk, thoroughly reduce the powder to a fine, thin batter, carefully crushing down all lumps.

Three. Pour on boiling water as quickly as possible, stirring rapidly. It is necessary that the water should be really boiling; if just below the boiling point a perfect mixture is not obtainable. If milk be employed, it should also be at a boiling point.

Cocoa prepared in this way forms, with water or milk, a perfect mixture, and leaves no sediment in the cup. It is a good plan to stir the contents of the cup now and again between the intervals of drinking.

If cocoa is to be prepared in large quantities for catering, the best plan is to bring the water to the boil, and then gradually add the powder to the boiling water, constantly stirring.—Caterer's Gazette, London.

QUALITY IN WOODENWARE.

"Quality counts in Woodenware," said a representative of Boeckh Bros. & Co., Toronto, the other day. "We have often lost orders because we were unable to meet the quotations of some United States house, but we never lose a customer on this account. One, or at the most two, experiences with inferior goods is sufficient. This letter, from one of our travellers, is a fair instance. The concern he refers to is one of the largest pork packers in Western Ontario.

"Read this: 'They have as you will see, placed an order for another car with me. They had received a car of United States pails last week, and he, without looking at them, wrote you in the way he did. After examining them with me to-day he acknowledged making a mistake in buying them, and was quite satisfied to place an order for another car with me.' That has happened time and again, and I think there is good ground for saying quality counts in woodenware."

PROFITABLE AND UNPROFITABLE GOODS.

Why should a grocer carry in stock unprofitable goods? In order to get the trade on the profitable goods, of course. How pat the answer comes. But all grocers don't have to do it. Here's a Boston dealer, mentioned by Grocer's Magazine, who sells fancy fruits and vegetables, fresh meat and game, cheese (he sells 35 or 40 kinds), butter, eggs, canned goods, tea and coffee in packages, but no flour or sugar. In short, he sells only profitable goods, no doubt looking so carefully after quality that people gladly patronize him, while they have to be coaxed to the stores of the ordinary grocers.—New York Merchants' Review.

But some consumers are wedded to light drawing kinds, with pale liquor and without the full body and richness of the black kinds.

They are grown, prepared and packed with the same skill by the British Planters who have revolutionized the black tea trade.

HOW BEST TO GET FOREIGN MARKETS.

THE following letter has been received by Mr. George H. Hees, Toronto, chairman of the Tariff Committee of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, from J. S. Larke, commercial agent for Canada in Australia, in reply to a communication of Mr. Hees, touching on Canadian trade with that colony :

"Dear Mr. Hees,—Your views are mine, and long since were mine. Some time ago I turned up a paper written in 1890 for the late Sir John A. Macdonald. I therein took the ground that the future of Canadian manufacturers would largely depend upon seeking markets abroad. My idea was to apply to manufacturers a modification of the policy which I had suggested years before in respect to our dairy industry. There is no question that it has developed our cheese and butter productions. The constant visits of Professor Robertson to Great Britain and his return to meet Canadian producers have cost something, but they have abundantly repaid the outlay. General manufactures are more complex than butter and cheese making, and no man can be expert in all lines, but Canadian industrial development has reached the stage that it is not necessary so much to tell our people how to make. Nor has it reached the stage that the chief need is to show what to make. The principal concern is to ascertain what lines Canadians are making that can be sold abroad, and to point out how best to get the market. Hence the need that the Canadian agent abroad should be in touch with Canadian manufacturing progress, and he can only learn well by personal sight.

"Canada has found out that it is profitable to export cattle rather than wheat, and butter and cheese rather than cattle ; mainly because there is more labor and less waste of our natural resources in cattle than in wheat and to a greater extent in butter and cheese. It is still more so in the export of manufactures. No one ought to be more interested in that export than the Canadian farmer, for thereby he is able to reach markets which otherwise would be closed to him. No Ontario farmer thinks of sending butter or mutton or wool to Australia, yet every thousand dollars' worth of goods sent here when reduced to their elements, mainly, is made up of butter, mutton and wool and the other productions of the Canadian farmer sold directly and indirectly to the mechanics and the capitalists who made them. It seems to me that it is to the highest interest of Canada that reasonable aid should be given to Canadian manufacturers to secure an export trade.

"It is not enough to get it : It must be held afterwards. A glance at our returns will show how fluctuating has been our trade with countries which were good markets for our goods. Take Australia for instance. In 1876 our exports were $185,610. The next year an effort was made to extend the trade, and in a few years it reached the sum of $661,208. It then declined until 1894. When the Government renewed its work it had fallen to $288,352, composed, if I recollect aright, chiefly of fish and timber. It is many times that now, and though our sales of both fish and timber have increased, they form but a limited percentage of the trade. What is needed is continuity of effort."

THE SONG OF THE PRUNE.

There's a murmur from the Coast
Like the rumble of a host,
There's a patter and a clatter from the dune,
And the burden of the roar,
As it swells from off the shore
Is the boasting and the toasting of the prune !

Let potatoes all go hide,
And tomatoes journey wide,
They're not in it for a minute with
the prune ;
Prunes are fine and prunes are cheap—
You can put away a heap ;
Sick or healthy, poor or wealthy, they're a boon.

Oh, they say the crop is great
In the far off Golden State—
Oh, we'll know it when they show
it very soon ;
For each car that carries freight
Rumbles eastward from the Gate,
And it groaneth and it moaneth neath the prune !
—Cleveland Plaindealer.

FRENCH SUGAR BOUNTIES.

The French Government have published a decree fixing the rates of the direct bounties on sugar : French native or colonial sugars (raw crystals), testing 98 per cent., 1 fr. 78c. per 100 kilos of refined sugar ; raw sugar, testing from 65 to 98 per cent., 1 fr. 56c. Other classes or qualities are also benefitted in proportion. It will be seen there may be some encouragement for the lower classes of sugar, owing to the long range of qualities over which one rate of bounty operates. The above, according to an exchange, appears to be only the export bounty, the bounty on production presumably remaining the same as ever.

AGENT FOR SCALES WANTED.

THE CANADIAN GROCER is advised by a correspondent in the United States that a scale and cash register concern of some proportions is prepared to establish an agency in Canada and is looking for an energetic man to appoint as representative. Any letters in the nature of applications that come to us will be forwarded.

"THE COUNTRY IS ALL RIGHT."

Mr. J. J. Roberts, Winnipeg, representative of THE CANADIAN GROCER in that part of the country, was in Toronto last week. He reported that trade conditions and business methods were gradually improving in the West. "Our population is increasing," he said, "but we want more. The country is all right. We have a great country."

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch.

Your idea may be that all starch is starch and that your customers won't detect even a slight difference in quality. You may think that because there is a cent or two extra profit on "Mushroom" brands (that come and go), you can retain the confidence of your trade—it doesn't pay to trifle with the confidence that a customer has in you and your goods.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch is as staple as flour. In the name there is the fame of nearly half a century. In the making there is the skill of long experience combined with honesty of purpose and unequalled manufacturing facilities. Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch represents the highest type of perfection there is or can be in starch. Kegs of 100-lbs.—handsome enamelled horse-shoe tins holding 6-lbs.—handsome 1-lb. packages that give a touch of life and color and "go" to a grocer's shelves.

Buying, Handling and Selling Coffees.

ONE OF THE PRIZE ESSAYS.

By S. A. BRUBACHER, Berlin, Ont.

BUYING coffee, is, I contend, the most important of the three above mentioned. A grocer may be a good seller, but a poor buyer; but as the old saying is, "Goods well bought are half sold," and that applies to coffee as well as to other lines of any description.

In buying coffee, first of all, buy good coffee. It is not good policy for a grocer or any coffee dealer to buy a lot of cheap coffee, perhaps the cheapest he can procure in the market, then as some grocers do, advertise it heavily at a mere cost and supply his customers; in fact, load them up with his cheap trash (as it may be termed), which, in many cases, will lose him customers, because of the poor-quality coffee he supplied them with; also, he has loaded up, perhaps, most of his customers with this low-grade coffee, who have previously been buying good coffee. It is certain if his coffee does not give satisfaction he will lose many future coffee sales as well as sales of other goods. Then he loses the public confidence in his coffee, decreases his sales; and, it is most important to note, that the merchant also deprives himself of his profit in more than one way. In doing this he will have very few customers left to sell coffee to for a time.

IN BUYING CHEAP, LOW-GRADE COFFEE

he can't make a reasonable margin. There are as many pounds of good coffee consumed as cheaper lines; in fact, more pounds if the coffee is good and gives satisfaction. He therefore has an opportunity of selling more pounds, and making a better margin per pound. Consequently it is all important and profitable to buy good coffee.

GOOD COFFEE BRINGS NEW CUSTOMERS.

I may add good coffee will also bring new customers to a store. It is necessary for a grocer to study the wants of his customers when buying coffee. For instance, in buying coffee for a German community, you must buy coffee which has strength, as strength is really more considered than flavor, but both are better than one. Still, a German will, in nine cases out of ten, prefer a cup of strong coffee, where English-speaking people prefer a mild but nicely flavored coffee.

It is not advisable to carry too many lines; a good plan is to

BRING OUT A FEW LINES

of your own blends. Term them, say, "Smyth's Golden Blend"—or whatever you wish to term them. See that you have them blended in the proper proportion so as to produce strength and flavor; both these blends should be advertised in your local paper or papers; also, a nice display of the particular line you are advertising. Then, to do it up proper

HAVE A DEMONSTRATION

in your store. Serve the line you wish to introduce; invite everybody to call in and try your blend coffee. In this way everybody will know about "Smyth's Blend Coffee," and no one else in the country has it for sale, only the merchant who introduces it.

Always strain your coffee before serving as well as not to leave it in the pot, which will in a short time make your coffee harsh and will not retain its original flavor. A lady should serve it, but she should be well instructed how it should be done. Don't forget to have sugar and cream handy. Some prefer it without sugar or cream. It would be well to have a line of low-grade coffee ready to draw, also, to convince your customers of the fact that there is really a big difference in coffee—more so than they thought. When buying coffee for these blends see that you always buy exactly the same in order to keep your blends uniform. When your blends vary you are apt to lose the confidence of the public. They will then say you are selling them a cheaper coffee at the same price. Keep up the standard, and no one else can supply your customers with the same coffee. After you have demonstrated, say, a 25c. line, in a month or so, demonstrate a higher grade, say, a 40c. line.

To make this blend scheme complete, get some nice coffee bags, lined or lead-lined, and have your blend printed on the bags, and never send out that particular blend only in that bag. Don't buy a large quantity of roasted coffee at a time. Even if well kept it is well to buy your roasted coffee in small quantity and often; and have it fresh, which will give your customers better satisfaction and retain its flavor and strength. Should there be an advance in the coffee market, and you wish to take advantage of it, and get them fresh roasted when required; or, if a grocer has time, or means to afford his own coffee roaster, it is well to do so. The fresher roasted you can supply your customers, the better satisfaction they will give; but there are very few wholesale grocers who have their own coffee roasters. They are expensive, and unless the grocer has a large coffee trade it does not pay. Fresh roasted coffee gives the best results in all cases.

BUY THESE LINES GREEN

WHEN BUYING COFFEE,

consider, also, that you have to live from the profits, and consider what you can sell it at retail to get a good reasonable margin. It is good policy to buy from a reliable house whether you are a coffee judge or not. If not a good judge of coffee, it is all the more necessary, but study coffee as well as other branches of your business and learn to be a good judge of coffee. When buying coffee see that your customers are getting value. It is to your interest to buy coffee right; also to buy for your customers' interests. When buying green coffee buy a Golden Rio, Teaberry, or Maracaibo. See that they are all nice, clean and even beans. I, for myself, would not buy a Ceylon coffee. In my opinion it is without strength and has little flavor, while the price asked for it is too high.

I would not advise grocers to buy Mocha or Java coffees green, as the housewife in roasting her coffee in the oven will not get the full advantage of the fine flavors these coffees contain; so it is desirable not to sell them green. A grocer should read the coffee markets daily; also, in his trade journal. He can get weekly reports which are very instructive, and there may be a time, probably not far away, when a coffee stock will be better than the money it cost.

It is well to buy

A SMALL STOCK OF PACKAGE COFFEE

or coffee in tins, so as to be able to supply your customers should they object to buy your bulk coffees. For picnicing buy condensed coffee; it is very convenient. But these are nearly all adulterated, in fact, some bear the label compound, so it is after all best to encourage the sale of your own coffees; and if they want it compound let them do it themselves—let them buy the compound ingredients. Buy a little chicory (English). It is well to have in stock. There are quite a number of brands of cereal coffee in the market. They may be healthful; but when I wish my customers to drink grain coffee, it is not right to charge them 15 cents a pound when grain is worth only one to two cents per pound. In conclusion re coffee in packages, tins, etc., never buy it unless you have a thorough knowledge of their contents; also, if people want to drink health coffee tell them to use a little less good coffee; this is my idea, of course. P.S.—When buying coffee procure a sample—then compare with your consignment.

HANDLING COFFEE.

Handling coffee is the most simple of the three given points in this essay. Although it is important to handle coffee carefully, cleanliness is the essential point in handling coffee. Coffee may be bought right, but if not kept and handled right, it will be a great injury to the stock of the best buyer. Roasted coffee should be kept in strictly clean tins or coffee canisters, air-tight if possible, as roasted coffee exposed to the air will lose strength and flavor. It is also very important to carry your coffee stock away from fish, tobacco, onions, or anything else which may taint it, which it will if too close to those things mentioned. Your coffee scoops should be thoroughly clean. It is better to have scoops for coffee only; thereby you are sure not to mix anything else in your coffee. Handle pure coffee. Keep it in a dry place, as if kept in a damp place it is liable to get tough, lose its strength and get musty, especially roasted coffee. Coffee costs money, so in dishing out coffee, don't spill it.

There are probably more things to mention, which, if observed, save and make money for the proprietor, who has it to sell. Handle it with cleanliness; clean paper or bags to wrap it in; also, it is advisable when wrapping up ground coffee, put two papers around it, and tell your customer to put it in an air-tight jar or coffee tin to preserve its strength and flavor.

SELLING COFFEE

is easier of the two former. Buying and handling are adhered to, but if coffee is well bought, well handled, and no one to sell it, the coffee business will not be a success. Without the proper system for selling it is very clear if "Smyth's" coffees are good. There is no great difficulty in selling them when once introduced. This, however, must be done; all your lines of coffee must be introduced, and by selling constantly good coffee you will create a demand for all your coffees and make them a standard line in your stores. Coffee displays on your counters are nice, if well placed, and the display of a line on your counter will assist in selling them. Sell pure coffee. Encourage your customers to buy bulk coffee. They are sure of getting it pure and good. I contend when you sell package coffee, either you or your customer pays for the package directly or indirectly. You either get less profit or the customer gets less value, and in nine cases out of ten package coffees are compound. So unless they insist on having package coffee, sell your bulk coffee. Don't sell coffee for the fun of it. Sell it at a profit, and a substantial profit, too. A good plan to increase your coffee sales is to say, 1-2c. per lb. on cheap coffee, 1c. per lb. on medium coffee, and 2c. per lb. on the best coffee. This will introduce your coffee, increase your salesmen's salary, and encourage your salesmen to sell the best coffee, which will, of course, increase your profits. This should be done only on certain days when you think advisable. Never misrepresent the coffee. If it is compound, sell it as such; also, when selling fresh ground coffee don't urge a customer to take a large quantity, as it evaporates if too long ground; then both flavor and strength are reduced. Use your coffee mill for coffee only, so as not to taint your coffee with some other spices. I say again, sell good coffee.

THE TWO BUSINESS MEN.

Once upon a time two business men were each confronted with what seemed to be a fine chance to make money.

One man, being of a cautious and prudent nature, said: "I will not take hold of this matter until I have carefully examined it in all its aspects and inquired into all its details."

While he was thus occupied in a thorough investigation he lost his chance of becoming a partner in the project, and as it proved to be a booming success he was much chagrined.

The other man, when he saw a golden opportunity looming up before him, embraced it at once, without preliminary question or doubt.

But alas! after he had invested all his fortune in it, the scheme proved to be worthless, and he lost all his money.

THE LIPTON SYSTEM OF BUSINESS.

By SIR THOMAS LIPTON, K. C. V. O.

THERE is no royal road to riches, and, in a business as big as mine, no back lane. My methods are open, and anybody can see them. A successful concern is created and maintained by the recognition of great facts and obvious principles—the growth of population and the increased facilities of inter-communication among men and nations. These are the great factors in forming great businesses. To supply the many instead of the few, to handle large instead of small quantities, and to be the grower, the manufacturer as well as the vendor and retailer—to do all this is to adopt, in short, a system of business obvious and open to all.

THE LIPTON RECEIPT FOR PROSPERITY.

If I proceed to speak of my own application of these principles, and of the individual qualities necessary to work them out in the details of business, I fear I must fall back on some very old saws. My receipt for prosperity in such a concern as mine, is at the disposal of all. Here it is: "Work hard, deal honestly, be enterprising, exercise careful judgment, advertise freely, but judiciously."

Though he who drives fat oxen need not himself be fat, a captain of industry must live up to his name—must himself be industrious. That is my belief, and it has been my practice all my life. Beginning work at an early age, I left Glasgow for New York, in the hope of finding shorter avenues to fortune than the Old Country afforded. I got experience, at any rate—in New York City, on a South Carolina plantation, and elsewhere. I got a little purse together, too; enough to take me back to Glasgow and my parents, to better whose position was then the mainspring of my effort and ambition.

THE GROWTH OF A GIGANTIC BUSINESS.

"Never despair; keep pushing on!" was my motto during all that time of struggle. No successes have been sweeter to me than those early ones which my parents shared with me. In High street, Glasgow, was opened the first of the provision marts which are now numbered by hundreds through England, Ireland and Scotland. That multiplication of places of distribution was the application, once again, of the great wholesale principles. Expenses of production and of supply decreased as the consumption and the demand increased. I was able to go to my native Ireland as a great buyer of her produce; by degrees I got my own tea plantation in Ceylon; my own carts and ships and ice-storage vans; my own fruit gardens in Kent; my own biscuit factory; my own tin factory. London by degrees became the great centre for collection, for storage, and for distribution, and the monster warehouses in the City Road are the result.

It has been said that a certain attention to business is necessary, even for failing in it. Yes; and that gives some clue to the immense attention bestowed by a successful organizer upon his child—his business. To foster it like a child; to know it cannot thrive by itself; to keep an ever-watchful eye on its thousand details; to tie its very shoestrings, so to speak; and, above all, to do these things one's self and not leave them to the less interested—to do the work that others would do only a little less well—all this is to make the baby of a business thrive and come to a flourishing maturity.

The details of a small business are many; of a great business they are multitudinous. By the number of the details of his work that a man can personally master, one may usually judge of his capacity for success. There are men with a singular grasp for this or that—of a certain limited branch in the great organism of a business, but, outside that special branch, they lack interest and even common intelligence. This may seem to say that the mind capable of large interests and great issues is rare; but I do not intend to say that. The rarity consists rather in the mind of large interests that is able to concentrate itself upon small details and be the master of a hundred branches of a trade, working in all with one object, but having in each, perhaps, a different method of procedure and a separate spirit.

THE STUDIES OF A MASTER TRADER.

Far less facile, for instance, is the mind required in the management of an estate. The manager of a business must have a mind that travels—even as his goods do. Often I have proved to myself the truth of Daniel Defoe's words:

"An estate is a pond, but trade is a spring."

In my case, the spring soon became a brook, the brook a rivulet, the rivulet a river rich and with innumerable tributaries, and navigable for great ships. It is perhaps not too fanciful to say that the master trader's consciousness must follow those tributaries to their own sources. Tea planting in Ceylon, for instance, involves some knowledge of native labor, therefore of native life. Through agriculture the producer touches geology, botany, chemistry, as well as the history of races. It would be unfair to be ignorant of the conditions and circumstances of one's laborers. Under all skies they are sensible of a fellow-feeling. One of the first students of public economy in France in the 19th century said that all the difference between a liberal and successful enterprise, and one that was tyrannical and unpromising, lay between the two phrases in the mouth of the master:

"Go to work" and "Come to work."

He said that in farming, at any rate, "Go to work" meant ultimate failure, and "Come to work," with ordinary luck, led securely to fortune.

Even among people accustomed not only to be commanded but driven, the industry of the overseer, who is present, has its sure effect, and the attention of the master who is seen at intervals has its undeniable influence. How much more is this the case in the European workshop and in the complex work of distribution! Here also there is a ready response to the beginnings of profit-sharing. In the agricultural system of one of the best tilled districts of Europe—Central Italy—the cultivator shares the gross profits with the landlord. This is very far from the English system of wages; but I find that a little interest may be pleasantly combined with the routine of the employee. My packers are at work, so many to a table, and I give a bonus to be divided among the workers at the table that shows the greatest number of finished packages. A zealous workman thus not only earns his own gratuity, but helps to earn his comrades', and is in favor with them. This emulation is combined with good-fellowship, and money-making with a little fun.

THE DAVIDSON & HAY, LIMITED

HARD WORK A LIGHT BURDEN.

How much value I place on industry, and how I believe in devoted hard work at the thing once for all accepted as a man's "calling" in life, may be seen from the fact that even at this stage of my career I generally work from nine in the morning to 10 at night. It has been said by many who have a right to speak, that labor is never anything but painful, however willingly undertaken and courageously done. But I think this was the conclusion of men who had one of two kinds of labor to do—the entirely physical and the entirely mental. It is painful to stoop under a burden all day, and "the man with a hoe" is not one of the favorites of fortune.

Nor is the philosopher grappling with infinites anything else than a voluntary martyr. But a mingling of the kinds of work, a variety of interests and of fortunes, the labor of the directing head and that of the obedient hand, the change that travelling brings, even when it is travelling for a purpose—all these make of business anything but a painful vocation.

THE TALISMAN THAT BRINGS SUCCESS.

What more can I say in answer to your queries? I hardly know. Work, work, always work, is the only talisman. The goods of life are not unfairly apportioned, as some suppose. The man of leisure and of "pleasure" can hardly complain if he is not also a man of wealth and of health. Success in one's career is the reward of sacrifices made for its sake.

I do not say that hard work has not its own liberty, its own enlargement, its own relaxation. It has all these. It has also its own romance that does not exist for the mere dilettante. The trifle trifles even with happiness. I think that a man who makes a great business must put himself into it: but I do not mean by that that he must necessarily become a machine. Against that notion I would put a long list of names, beginning with Peabody and not ending with Carnegie.—Saturday Evening Post.

THE ADVANCE IN BROOM CORN.

In connection with the report of heavy advances in the primary broom corn markets, a large Ontario dealer writes to THE CANADIAN GROCER expressing the opinion that practically all Canadian buyers are on the short side, and that the advances which have been made at primary points, averaging over 60 per cent., are bona fide, and are likely to affect the market here because of the shortage of stocks held by Canadian manufacturers. He states, furthermore, that broom wire is nearly double the usual prices and that broom handles are from $2 to $3 per M. higher than in former years. As a result of this combination of circumstances he predicts a sharp advance in brooms on the Canadian market during the present season.

TRADE IN COUNTRIES OTHER THAN OUR OWN.

CANNED TOMATOES IN THE UNITED STATES.

THE chief feature to-day in this department is the increasing strength shown in tomatoes. Since last report the market shows a perceptible advance in all descriptions and a better buying interest. We hear of sales to-day of Southern 3s. on the basis of 95c. f.o.b. Baltimore, on which basis there the market is reported strong and advancing. It is reported that a little was moved yesterday at 92½c., the transaction covering, it is stated, around 2,000 cases. Gallons continue scarce and sales are noted up to $2.75, with some business up to $2.85. Jersey 3s. are hard to get some holders asking up to $1.05, and a few lots are held at $1.10. Yesterday a sale was reported at $1. To-day we heard of business in Jersey tall tins amounting to 4,000 cases at $1.25 f.o.b. factory, and a lot of 2,500 cases was moved yesterday at $1.20 f.o.b. factory. Some business is noted in 2-lb. Southern at 77½c. Advices from Philadelphia report the market there on 2-lb. up to 82½c. Buying on the spot is fairly active and the tendency of the market is upward. Goods offering from packing quarters both in the South and New Jersey are reported to be limited, and some sections, it is believed, will pro rate heavily on deliveries. In corn the market is quiet. Business in State standards is reported possible at 70c. delivered.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce, October 5.

TEAS IN NEW YORK.

The market for green teas continued to show decided strength. Offerings were very moderate; holders generally expressed confidence in the outlook as the prospects were for short supplies. Business transacted was, at full prices; sales reported were 400 pkgs. country greens and 300 pkgs. Pingsuey, all to arrive. Black teas were quiet but well held. The jobbing business continued to show a fair amount of spirit, the consuming trade being a steady buyer.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

AUSTRALIAN FLOUR IN ENGLAND.

Australian flour is so good that we apprehend it needs only to be generally known to become a serious rival to the article we use at present in this country. At all events, that seems to be the opinion of the members of the conference to further its consumption, held at the Victorian Offices, Westminster, on a recent date. The special produce under consideration was that of flour from South Australia, from samples of which a batch of bread was submitted for the examination of the experts who attended. Mr. D. Tallerman, who presided, pointed out that South Australian flour produced remarkable results. The bread before them was a magnificent product, equal in quality, taste and appearance to that sold in the best shops at 5½d. and 6d. per quartern. Yet the flour only realized 19s. 3d. per sack in London. That quantity yielded 100 four-pound loaves, which at only 5d. each would realize £2 1s. 8d. retail, thus leaving the big margin of £1 2s. 5d. to cover baking, working expenses and profit. At 5½d. per loaf, retail, the margin would be £1 6s. 7d. A very liberal allowance for the purposes named was 15s. per sack. It is at least a reasonable view that if these facts were better known, the colonial grower would receive a much better price for his flour from ourselves.—Commerce.

VALENCIA RAISINS IN ENGLAND.

About 100 tons of Valencia raisins were offered for sale on Wednesday last, the fruit, on the whole, being extremely desirable both in regard to quality and condition. It became apparent, however, at an early stage in the bidding that caution would be the keynote of buyers' operations, and about one-third of the fruit only changed hands. Supplies of high-class fruit being barely sufficient to meet the demand, choice parcels realized fully previous prices, and common and good selected in half-boxes also being in a moderate compass found ready buyers at only slightly reduced values. On the other hand, however, medium to fine qualities in quarter-boxes proved to be in excess of the requirements of the trade, and with some pressure to sell met with a further decline of 2s. to 3s. per cwt. Shipments advised from Spain are by no means heavy, and a steady market is therefore anticipated at the reasonable range of prices now established.—Produce Markets' Review, Sept. 28.

CANNED SALMON IN LONDON

The market for the lower grades of salmon has been quiet, and prices if anything are rather easier. Although there is a fairly good supply of Alaska on the spot, the better qualities, especially in 1-lb. and ½-lb. ovals, are somewhat limited, and valuations are firm. The present low prices have not only increased the home consumption, but a much larger trade has been done for export, and shipments are larger than for some months past, and it is encouraging to see this popular article coming into increasing favor with the consumer, after having, owing to the high prices, been somewhat neglected.—Produce Markets' Review.

CURRANTS IN LONDON.

Only one further cargo of new currants has arrived here during the week, and, with an extremely active market, available supplies are at a very low ebb. This state of things seems hardly likely to be much changed for some time to come, as all consuming markets are unusually active, and Greek shippers are consequently inclined to hold back their fruit to supply actual purchasers, rather than send it on consignment to the English markets. Every fresh arrival brings new evidence of the excellent quality of the crop; prices, although higher than a week ago, are still very moderate, and the balance between supply and demand is, for all the reasons given, very even, with, however, a decided tendency towards the preponderance of the latter over the former. A large business Provincial afloat and for future shipment is being done, and it would seem that purchases of this character are this year on a much safer basis than usual, on account of the universally excellent quality of the fruit.—Produce Markets' Review, Sept. 28.

MONTREAL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE regular monthly meeting of The Montreal Retail Grocers' Association was held in the Monument National on Thursday evening, with President Lapointe in the chair. There was a good attendance of the members including: Secretary J. P. Dixon, P. O'Brien, N. Chartrand, M. de Repentigny, E. W. Farrell, O. Champagne, J. O. Leveque, Ald. Turner, A. O. Galarneau, H. Macy, F. Bigaonette, J. E. Manning, H. A. Laniel, and A. D. Fraser.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The most important bit of business came first, the election of officers for the ensuing year. President Lapointe made a short farewell speech and called for the elevation of the first vice-president, Ald. Turner, to the highest position. Ald. Turner, an Englishman, was immediately proposed by two Frenchmen for the position, and was declared elected by acclamation. For vice-president Mr. O'Brien nominated Mr. Chartrand, and he was elected by acclamation, as also was Mr. J. E. Manning for the 2nd vice-presidency, Mr. F. Bigaonette for the treasurer'ship, and Mr. N. Lapointe for the honorary secretary'ship. Mr. J. P. Dixon was reappointed secretary. Twelve directors were appointed: they are A. O. Galarneau, H. Macy, J. O. Leveque, J. B. Deschamps, M. de Repentigny, P. O'Brien, A. D. Fraser, O. Champagne, H. A. Laniel, P. Daoust, H. Poirier and E. W. Farrell.

The elections concluded, Mr. Lapointe vacated the presidential chair in favor of the newly elected President Turner, who delivered a brief inaugural address, congratulating Mr. Lapointe on his success and pledging his best services to the association, both to make the meetings interesting and to bring in new members. Mr. Turner is one of Montreal's most faithful reform aldermen and it is expected that The Grocers' Association will make rapid strides under his leadership.

Mr. N. Lapointe moved, and Mr. H. A. Laniel seconded, a motion to grant $25 to each, the Notre Dame and General Hospitals, and one of President Turner's first duties was to sign these cheques of charity.

TRADING STAMPS

Mr. J. O. Leveque drew the attention of the meeting to the trading-stamp evil and asked that the association join the crusade against the custom. He had been duped into an agreement to give them and was naturally much incensed. Several others showed how they were losing $1 or $5 a week at the same game and it was finally decided to announce a special meeting to discuss the matter.

SUNDAY CLOSING.

There are quite a number of small grocery stores that keep open in Montreal on Sunday, and it was proposed that the association exert itself to have them closed. Ald. Turner was entrusted with the task of looking after the matter to see what was needed, and the subject will come up again.

CAPACITY OF LIQUOR FLASKS,

The secretary read the resolution passed the day before by The Licensed Victuallers Association, condemning the illegal practice of the grocers selling flasks of liquor containing less than an Imperial pint. It seems that, while there is a law against this practice, there is a tacit understanding with the Government that it shall not be enforced. The president, ex-president and secretary were appointed a committee to interview the Hon. Mr. Duffy on the matter and ask him to tolerate the custom until the Legislature meets to pass a suitable law, giving the grocers legal power to sell these small flasks. It would seem unfair to the grocers to be forbidden to sell small flasks of domestic liquor and yet be allowed the privilege of selling foreign goods in bottles of like size. Quite a number of merchants evade this point in the law by selling these small bottles in pairs.

SCHEME TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP.

The secretary was authorized to send out the following notice to eligible non-members of the association.

Seeing that our association is some 600 members strong, and that there are 1,200 grocers in Montreal to-day, we want you all to join. It is not for the cost of $2 a year you have to pay as a member of that body that we ask you to join us; it is because you can be of great value to us in more ways than one, and the association will give you in return all the benefits of our body of grocers, such as fighting combines, "trusts," seeing that the Governments and municipal bodies give us fair treatment in our lines of business, and that the large departmental stores are taxed so that we in suburban quarters of our city may live without being forced to the wall by those big monopolies.

After passing some accounts, the meeting adjourned.

CANADA'S TRADE WITH RUSSIA.

SOME interest in our trade with Russia has been created by the return from that country of Mr. Wm. Whyte, assistant to the president of the C.P.R. The special object of his visit to that country was to investigate the possibilities of an enlarged trade between it and Canada, the railway with which he is associated having under consideration a proposition to put on a line of steamships to ply between Vancouver and Vladivostock. Mr. Whyte made a tour of the Trans-Siberian road, and the result of his investigation is a report which is to be submitted for the consideration of the directors. He believes that the present is a most opportune time for business men in Canada to put forth an effort to secure a larger share of Russia's trade. What makes the present particularly opportune is, of course, the discriminating duties which have been levied against the products of the United States on account of the countervailing duty which the latter country imposes upon Russian sugar.

The Russian law, under which the discriminating tariff was put into operation against the United States," provides that "Goods which form the basis of manufacture and trade in those countries which do not give Russia the most favored privileges of import and transit are subject" to an increase of 20 to 30 per cent. in the import Customs duty.

In 1900 Russia imported from the United States merchandise to the value of $21,661,515. In view of this it is not surprising that the manufacturers of the United States became much exercised when the Russian Government, in March last, put on a discriminating tariff of 20 to 30 per cent. against them.

Canada's trade with Russia is very small. In 1900 it amounted to less than $100,000, our imports therefrom being $24,659, and exports thereto $70,558.

In exports, there was an increase over the previous year, but in imports there was a marked falling off. Our exports to Russia during 1899 and 1900 were as follows:

|                                                | 1899.  | 1900.  |

Russia is a country of great possibilities. The total exports of the country were $354,604,280, and the imports $294,805,440. And one of the best evidences that its trade is worth looking after is the fact that a sharp, farseeing concern like the Canadian Pacific Railway laying its plans to connect its system with that of the Trans-Siberian Railway.

WILL CONTEST THE LAW.

The Dominion Trading Stamp Co., Limited, who have branches in many of the principal cities of Ontario, have definitely announced their intention to fight the legality of the "Anti-Trading Stamp Act," passed at the last session of the Ontario Legislature, which empowered municipalities to prohibit the use of trading stamps within their bounds. The company will contest the Act on the ground that the Provincial Legislatures have no right or power to pass such legislation.

The legal battle will be watched with interest.

EXCITEMENT OVER SALT TRUST STOCK.

THE new salt Trust has at last started on its business career. The concern was incorporated some weeks ago under the laws of New Jersey, but it was not till October 1 that the plan of organization and the subscription agreement for the exchange of securities were officially promulgated. The proper name and style of the Trust is the International Salt Co., and the prospectus states that it is the purpose of the company to acquire at least a majority in amount at par of the aggregate of the preferred and common stock of the National Salt Co., and at least a majority in amount at par of the capital stock, and a substantial part of all of the first mortgage 5 per cent. gold bonds of the Retsof Mining Co., and the capital stock, bonds or real and personal properties of such other companies or individuals engaged in the salt business or allied industries as may from time to time be deemed advantageous to said International company.

The authorized capital of the company is $30,000,000, all common stock. Of this amount $18,500,000 will be issued to take over the full issue of outstanding stock of The National Salt Co. and The Retsof Mining Co., and to supply $1,000,000 cash as working capital. The remaining $11,500,000 of stock will be held for issue subsequently, as may be necessary for the acquisition of other salt plants. Among the other salt plants which it is proposed to acquire are certain ones in Canada and Great Britain. This is specifically set forth in the circular which the company issued the other day.

A few days after the announcement that the Trust had practically begun business it became one of the cynosures of the stock market. Rumors had obtained currency to the effect that in the absorption of The National Salt Co. by the International company $7,500,000 bonds would come ahead of the stock, and also that the president of the National had resigned for the purpose of assuming a like position in the Plough Trust. There seems to have been little or no foundation for the rumors, but they were sufficient to cause a decline of over 15 points in the common stock of the National company.

The Journal of Commerce, New York, of October 5, in commenting on the decline, said: "It appears, therefore, that yesterday's severe break was due to a misunderstanding of the terms, although the bonus in new stock to the old preferred stockholders and to the underwriting syndicate is, of course, unfavorable to the common stockholders of the National company."

A PLACE FOR SIR RICHARD.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT'S name is now being used again in connection with the Lieutenant Governorship of Ontario. The term of the present occupant will soon expire, and there is certainly no one among those who have been named who would either fill the position better or who has greater claims upon it.

For a generation he has been among the most prominent in Canadian politics, and if he has not always been wise in the course he has pursued there are few indeed in public life to-day who have given more of their time and talents to the welfare of their country.

Now that his years are multiplying fast his fitness for the arduous duties of a Cabinet position is gradually diminishing. This THE CANADIAN GROCER has time and again of late pointed out. Whatever his fitness for the portfolio of Trade and Commerce might have been a few years ago, there is not a shadow of doubt in regard to his present unfitness, partly no doubt due to the fact that it is one for which he is naturally not adapted, but largely on account of his weight of years.

None more than the party of which he is such a prominent and honored member recognizes that the portfolio of Trade and Commerce should be filled by a younger man and one of more practical business experience, but the question has been what to do with him. He certainly could not be cast overboard. His services have been too faithful and his friends are too numerous for that. Some of his friends have gone the length of urging for his appointment to the High Commissionership in London. But that would be, as we have repeatedly pointed out, a fatal mistake.

With the expiration of Sir Oliver Mowat's term as Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, an opening will be created for the appointment of Sir Richard Cartwright to on office which, with his scholarly attainments and many parts, he is eminently qualified to fill. And, what is still more important as far as the commercial interests of this country are concerned, opens a way for escape from what is no doubt an awkward dilemma.

THE LATE N. CLARKE WALLACE.

WE record with regret the death at Woodbridge, York Co., Ontario, on Tuesday, October 8, of Hon. N. Clarke Wallace, M.P., formerly Controller of Customs in the Governments of Sir John Thompson and Sir Mackenzie Bowell.

Mr. Wallace was a merchant for many years and understood business questions. When he took office in 1892 with Sir John Thompson he at once applied himself to the work of his Department in a thoroughly practical spirit. His demeanor and policy exhibited a desire to appreciate and carry out the wishes of the mercantile community, for which we gave him credit at the time and have always since remembered in his honor. He was a useful Minister of the Crown. When he resigned, owing to a difficulty with his colleagues on the school question, the Conservative Ministry of 1895 lost a good member.

During his term of office we had occasion to criticize strongly in these columns certain decisions on tariff matters for which Mr. Wallace was officially responsible, but in relation to which we never doubted his personal rectitude and his wish to do what was best in the public interest. This difference of opinion on public matters never disturbed the friendly relations of the writer with Mr. Wallace. He leaves, despite his short term of office, a record which other politicians can well imitate. His family have our sincere sympathy.

CALIFORNIAN PRUNES IN CANADA.

CALIFORNIAN prunes appear to have effectually driven European prunes from the Canadian market. The latter may still have the preference when the fancy descriptions are considered, but for general consumption the Californian article is the favorite. It is not that its quality is better. In flavor, plumpness and thinness of skin, Bosnia and French prunes have the advantage. But as far as appearance of fruit and package are concerned the American is to be preferred.

This season Bosnia prunes, of the sizes generally consumed in Canada, could be laid down here at rather lower figures than those of Californian growth, but, in spite of this fact, the figures have no attractions for importers in this country. It is evident, therefore, that we have become wedded to the Colifornian prune.

All that importers now seem to care for are the cheaper grades of French prunes when they can be laid down here at a very low figure. How the importation of Californian prunes has increased at the expense of those from the other countries from whom we chiefly import may be gathered at a glance at the following table:

|-----------|--------------|-----------------|----------------|
| 1897..... | 770,388      | 219,844         | 309,304        |
| 1898..... | 2,594,244    | 131,634         | 195,589        |
| 1899..... | 2,166,763    | 912,042         | 267,975        |
| 1890..... | 3,410,065    | 512,554         | 144,057        |
| 1901..... | 3,781,705    | 44,702          | 543,860        |

It will be noticed that in five years our importation of Californian prunes has increased by 3,000,000 lb.

CANADIAN CHEESE WON GOLD MEDAL.

IT is significant that the reports of the remarkable showing of Canadian cheese at the Pan American Exposition at Buffalo have been received with so little enthusiasm by the Canadian public, and particularly by those interested in the Canadian cheese trade.

A gold medal was offered by the Exposition for the best cheese exhibit. The Ontario Department of Agriculture sent over at different times 140 boxes of cheese the product of 57 factories in various sections of the Province. This exhibit, though in competition with the entire United States, as well as all other American countries, proved so superior that it easily won the gold medal.

Each box of cheese was also judged on its individual merit. According to the rules of the Exposition, any exhibit scoring 94 points or over would receive a diploma, and of the Ontario August cheese, which was last scored, only one package failed to reach this standard, while some of the packages scored as high as 99½ per cent.

Such a showing as this is indeed remarkable and furnishes excellent reason for enthusiasm. But the verdict of the judges was received calmly, almost with indifference. Canadian cheese has captured so many honors in competition with the makes of other countries, and particularly of the United States, that the Canadian public appears to believe in its supremacy as a matter of course. A victory for it excites little enthusiasm, but a defeat would arouse a general feeling of amazement.

Canadian cheese, it will be remembered, also received the highest award at the Chicago Exposition in 1893.

A CORNER FOR CLERKS

BY W.T. ROBSON

THE VALUE OF SAVING.

THIS subject is one generally overlooked by the average clerk, not that he does not know the value of money in the world to-day, but he is led away by a desire to have "a good time" and to enjoy all the pleasures of life. That he should have none the less pleasure or happiness is my desire, only for his own sake, for the purpose of future advancement, should he so arrange his affairs that a certain amount, even if it must be small, should be continually set aside for some important purpose. It is a mark of stamina in any young man who voluntarily and deliberately faces his financial problems and so arranges them that he can have his own bank account. To do this one is not required to be mean and small in his relations with other young men. No one has any use for the mean man, but it can be accomplished in most cases by a simple matter of adjusting the necessary expenses. A young man who has not the capacity to master his private money affairs, who will be the slave of his desires, instead of their master, enters life with a serious handicap. The use and abuse of money in the early part of a man's life often determines his success or failure. I care not what his intellectual endowments are, how pleasing his personality, if he is unable to properly manage his money affairs the chances are he will end disastrously. There have been men in the past, it must be admitted, who were notoriously indifferent to personal money affairs—brilliant men of wonderful genius—but under the present condition of affairs, in order to be reasonably successful, a young man must make plans and execute them with a purpose steady and fixed. Thousands of young men are making a failure of life because they have never learned to deny themselves the luxuries and pleasures which are, in their circumstances, beyond their income.

An errand boy faithfully laying aside but three cents a day would have in 50 years (with 6 per cent. interest) about $3,000.

A seamstress on but five cents a day would have almost $5,400 to call her own.

A stenographer spending 50 cents a week for candy would blow in $7,000.

A clerk smoking 10 cents a day would dissipate over $9,500.

A laborer averaging two and a half schooners a day would in that time swallow $12,000.

A shoemaker saving but 15 cents a day could retire on $15,000.

A mechanic on 20 cents a day would be worth $19,000.

A storekeeper cutting expenses 25 cents daily and putting it away, could rest in peace on $26,000.

A lawyer on $100 a year would have $29,000.

A doctor on $150 a year would be considered wealthy with $43,000.

A business man paying himself an extra salary of $50 per month or $600 per year, and putting it away as a sinking fund at 6 per cent. could give his business away in 30 years and live very comfortably for the rest of his days on over $225 per month, income from a $47,000 principal.—Selected.

A PROMISED SALARY INCREASE.

"C. A. E." says: Some time ago I was promised a raise in salary; should I ask for it?

Why, certainly, ask for what was promised and what you had a right to expect. Be courteous and businesslike in your request for information on this subject.

MARY'S GROCER BEAU.

One of the "boys" sends me this:

Mary had a grocer beau,
He worked from dawn till late,
And every time that Mary called,
He gave her overweight.

—Commercial Tribune.

It needs another verse, something like this, I should think:

One day when Mary called,
She saw her beau had left,
And to her horror she has found
That now he's up for theft.

STORE COATS.

The question of coats for the store is bothering some of the boys. The white coat seems to have the call among most clerks. Have it well made, of good quality, always well laundered, and I think they look attractive, giving a uniform appearance to the clerks, and an impression of cleanliness to the customers.

READY FOR CUSTOMERS.

"J. C. H." My idea is, a salesman when disengaged should find some work near the front, so as to be ready to wait on customers promptly, just as soon as they enter the store. Don't make a fuss and swoop down upon them, but gentlemanly and pleasantly, with proper deference, attend quickly to their wants. Try and make your customers feel your interest in their welfare from the time they enter until they depart from the store. Give them a good impression of your goods, and let them feel you value their trade. You won't need to tell them. "Actions speak louder than words," is an old saying, and nowhere is it more true than in a grocery store when serving customers. A frown never made a sale, while smiles have many to their credit. No matter what your feelings are, be pleasant at all times with customers, and you will attract trade just as surely as a magnet will attract a needle.

"Alex. C." tells me of a new game practised by a church to raise money. It is called a "rummage sale." All the old stuff the women can pick up is gathered together and sold for what it will bring. Judging from what my correspondent tells me a sale of this description would be a good place to stay away from. I once took in a "basket social" in a church and that experience will do me for all time to come. If the "rummage sale" is any worse or as bad—"excuse me." I think some stores might adopt the idea, and have a regular time for going through the stock to see what is getting out of date or spoiling and getting for it what it will bring rather than have it waste.

"F. G." Lipton's teas are sold in Canada, but as yet have not had an extensive sale. I do not know of any other products of this firm now sold on this market.

THE MANITOBA WHEAT CROP.

Notwithstanding a few reports of loss from sprouted wheat, the indications are that the Manitoba wheat crop will be fully up to the more conservative estimates. On Tuesday, of last week, G. U. Hastings, Manager of The Lake of the Woods Milling Co., Limited, who had just returned to Montreal from a trip through Manitoba, gave out his opinion that the crop in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories would be close to 46,000,000 bushels, leaving a surplus of 40,000,000 to be disposed of. On Monday, this week, F. W. Thomson, of The Ogilvie Milling Co., Limited, stated that the loss from sprouting would not likely be serious and the crop should net at least $25,000,000.

Taylor Bros., wholesale fruiterers, Winnipeg, Man., will shortly move to 241 to 245 Main street, which premises are being altered to suit their business.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

If any reader wishes to know where any article can be purchased in Canada or abroad, a letter to the Editor will probably place him in communication with the seller.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, October 10, 1901.

GROCERIES.

THE week has not been noted for any strikingly new features. Business is fair. Very little attention is being paid to canned vegetables, all the buying being of a small sorting up character, with prices ruling steady. The firmness in teas noted last week has been maintained, but business is only moderate. Coffees are quiet and fairly steady. Currants are meeting with a fair demand and prices rule firm. Very little is being done in Valencia raisins. The new Californian prunes that are on the market are so far receiving little or no attention. Sugars are quiet and unchanged at last week's decline. The demand for syrups has improved a little, but the demand is still light. Rice and tapioca are in moderate request.

CANNED GOODS.

No particular feature has developed in regard to canned goods during the week. The rather firm feeling previously noted in regard to canned tomatoes has been maintained, but there is very little business being done, purchases being of a sorting-up nature. The idea as to price to the retail trade for tomatoes is 80 to 82½c. for old stock, and 85 to 90c. for new. Corn is quoted at from 80c. up, and peas at from 82½c. up. The demand for canned fruits is picking up and the sale seems to be, if anything, rather larger than is usual at this time of the year. The demand is principally for raspberries and strawberries. The trade is looking for a good demand for peaches, and already there have been some sales to arrive at $1.70 to $1.80 for 2's, and $2.60 to $2.80 for 3's. Canned meats are quiet. There is a small sorting-up business being done in canned salmon, and prices rule as before. In another column we publish a table showing the pack on the Fraser river, the different kinds put up, and the quantity packed by each company. Quotations are:

Fraser River sockeyes, $1 42½ for 5-case lots and over, and $1.45 for less quantities for the well known brands and $1.35 for brands not so well known; Northern sockeye, $1.25 to $1.30; pink salmon, 95c. to $1; cohoes, $1.05 to $1.10.

COFFEE.

The outside markets have ruled steady during the past week, but very little business has been done. Much the same is to be said in regard to the local market. We still quote green Rios as follows: No. 7, 7½c. per lb.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8½c.; No. 4, 9¼c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The representatives of the refineries have been offering all grades of sugar syrups during the past week, but they report there is no demand. Local wholesalers, on the other hand, report that, while trade is still quiet in syrups, there is a slight improvement on retail account. There is also a slightly better demand from retailers for molasses, which remains steady in price.

See pages 31 and 32 for
Toronto, Montreal, and St.
John prices current.

SPICES.

There is just a steady demand locally, and advices from the outside markets report that the visible supply of pepper, mace, pimento, cassia and ginger are steadily decreasing. Higher prices within the next few weeks are expected in some lines of spices.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

In both rice and tapioca there is the usual steady trade being done at unchanged prices. B rice is quoted at 3¼ to 3½c. per lb. and Japan at 5½ to 6c. Tapioca rules at 4¼ to 4½c. per lb.

SUGAR.

The wholesale trade, as a rule, is only doing a moderate business, while the representatives of the refineries report trade almost nil. Raw sugars have shown a slightly higher tendency, there being more buyers than sellers. Receipts at the four United States Atlantic ports last week were only 18,000 tons, while the meltings were 31,000 tons, making a decrease of 13,000 tons for the week. Receipts for the months of November and December at the four ports in question are expected to be light, as shipments from Java at the present time show a considerable falling off, as compared with last year. Mr. Licht's estimate for the approaching crop of beet sugar varies all the way from 6,185,000 to 6,715,000. He favors the mean of these figures and expresses the opinion that the crop will be about 6,450,000, or an increase of 381,000 tons compared with the production of last year. Prices, locally, are unchanged at last week's decline.

TEAS.

The situation in teas continues favorable as far as prices are concerned. Advices from Japan note increased firmness. A cable received in Toronto on Monday asked ½c. per lb. advance on medium grades of Japan teas and 1c. on good teas. Low-grade teas, on the other hand, are considered to be rather lower. The wholesale houses report that they have been doing quite a little in Japan teas during the past week on retail account. In Indian and Ceylon teas, good flavory descriptions at about 8d. are being looked for by importers, but very few of them are to be had, especially under 8d. There are quite a few low-grade teas on the local market, but they are apparently getting reduced. Very little is being done in China greens. Mail advices from London, England, under date of September 27, say that with rather smaller auctions and a revival of trade in the Provinces the market for Indian teas was again strong, resulting in a very steady market for all descriptions. Common whole leaf teas were, if anything, slightly dearer. In regard to Ceylon teas the advices state that with a comparatively light auction and a continuance of the improved quality competition was strong, and prices showed an advance varying from ¼d. to ½d. per lb.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS—The few new currants that are on the local market are meeting with a good demand. The ruling quotations for good, clean fruit are as follows: Filiatras, 7½ to 8c.; Patras, 8 to 8½c., and Vostizzas, 8½ to 9½c., according to quality. Uncleaned fruit is quoted at ½c. less. For November delivery, wholesalers are quoting clean fruit as follows: Fine Filiatras, 6c.; Patras, 6½, and Vostizzas, 8½c., for fine goods. Should the firmness in the primary market be maintained, it is quite possible that prices for futures may be held rather firmer.

VALENCIA RAISINS—There have been some transactions on importation account during the past week, but wholesalers are still inclined to hold off in the hope of lower figures. Holders in Spain, on the other hand, do not appear inclined to make any concession whatever. A cable despatch from Denia says that the market is bare, and is expected to remain so for some time, while prices were expected to rule steady. It is understood from this by local authorities that the growers in Spain are not bringing in their fruit to market. The steamer Bellona is at present loading at Denia for the Canadian market. New fruit at present on the market is being quoted at 7 to 7½c. for selected and 6½ to 7c. for fine off-stalk. There is still some fine, clean selected of last year's crop to be had at 5c.

FIGS—There is only a small demand for the few figs that arrived on this market last week. The prices for 10 to 30 lb. boxes run from 11 to 17c. per lb. according to size. For future delivery tapnets are being quoted at 3¼c. and naturals at 4¼ to 4½c. in bags.

PRUNES—Although there is only a small business being done it is rather larger than is usual at this time of the year. Prices in California are rather easier than they were, for the quotations just come to hand are about ¼c. lower than those previously received. We quote new Californian prunes as follows: 100 110's, 5c.; 90-100's, 5½ to 6¼c.; 80 90's, 6½ to 7c.; 70-80's, 6¾ to 7¼c.; 60 70's, 7½ to 8c.; 50-60's, 8 to 8½c.; 40 50's, 8¾ to 10c. French, 100's, 3½ to 4c.

GREEN FRUITS.

Trade is keeping up fully as well as could be expected. Plums are done, and the receipts of high-grade pears and peaches are light. But grapes, apples and late varieties of peaches and pears are still arriving in large quantities. Cranberries are selling briskly, as are also bananas, oranges and lemons. The sale of other lines is well maintained. We quote prices as follows: Pears, 20 to 40c. per basket; peaches, Crawford's, 60c. to $1; apples, 30 to 40c.; egg plant, 10 to 15c.; tomatoes, 25 to 35c.; cucumbers, 10 to 15c.; peppers, 25 to 50c.; grapes, in 10 lb. baskets, 15 to 17½c.; Niagaras, 17½ to 20c., and 20 to 25c. for Delawares and Rogers; quinces, 30 to 40c. per basket; muskmelons, 25 to 35c. per crate of 12; bananas, $1 75 for 1st and 75c. to $1 for eight hands. New Verdilli lemons are offering at $3.75 to $4.25 per box, and Jamacia oranges at $6 per bbl. or $4 to $4 25 per box; Cape Cod cranberries, $8 per bbl.; Ontario cranberries, $6 per lb.; pineapples, $3.50 per case.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS—There has been an unusually heavy export trade done during the last two or three weeks, and as the local demand keeps active the price of all lines is firmly maintained. As high as 18c. has been asked for cases of selected new-laid, while fresh-gathered range from 15 to 16c. Cold-stored eggs sell readily at 14 to 16c., and limer eggs at 14 to 15c. per doz.

BEANS—The market has steadied since the break noted a week ago, and last week's quotations, $1.75 to $1 80 for prime pea beans, still hold good.

HONEY—Comb honey is 25c. per doz. higher. The sales of both strained and comb have been large. We quote: 9 to 10c. for extracted clover and $2 to $2.25 for No. 1 clover comb.

DRIED APPLES—New evaporated apples are offering at 9c. for carlots and 10c. for cases. There is little trade reported, however. Dried apples are not offering, but nominal quotations range from 5½ to 6½c.

POTATOES—The market is well maintained. Cars are selling fairly well at 50 to 55c. per bushel on track Toronto. Small lots are in active request at 60 to 70c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER—The weakening feeling noted in dairy butter last week is more in evidence this week, and has affected creamery prints, which are ½c. lower. Dairy prints are 1c. cheaper. We quote as follows: Dairy prints, 16 to 17c.; best tubs, 15 to 16c.; poor to medium grades, 12 to 14c.; creamery prints, 21 to 21½c.; boxes, 19 to 20c.

CHEESE—The steadiness of a few days ago has given way to uncertainty, as the export movement is still light and buyers in Great Britain are decidedly cautious. As a result, the jobbing price is ½c. lower, the range being 9½ to 9¾c.

POULTRY AND GAME.

DRESSED POULTRY—The weather is not quite cool enough to cause a big delivery of poultry, and so what does come is readily absorbed. We quote as follows: Chickens, 40 to 60c. per pair; hens, 30 to 50c. per pair; ducks, 50 to 75c. per pair; geese, 7 to 8c. per lb.; turkeys, 10 to 11c. per lb.

LIVE POULTRY—The Canadian Produce Co., 36 and 38 Esplanade east, Toronto, will pay until October 17, for spring chickens, not less than two lb. each, 6c. per lb. For ducklings, 5c. per lb. For hens (including last year's birds) 3c. per lb. These prices are for live weight on arrival. Crates shipped free and express paid up to 50c. per 100 lb. of chickens.

GAME—The demand readily absorbs all offerings which are, however, only fair.

Prices are unchanged at the following figures: Teal and butterballs, 25 to 30c.; pintails and redheads, 50 to 60c.; black ducks, 75c. to $1 per brace.

FISH.

There is an excellent trade doing in trout and whitefish, in oysters and in dried fish. Prices show no change. We quote as follows: Fresh fish—Codfish, 7 to 7½c.; whitefish, 8c.; trout, 7½c.; halibut, 15c.; sea salmon, 20 to 25c.; haddock, 6c.; herring, 4c.; perch, 4c.; British Columbian salmon, 20c. Smoked fish—Ciscos, $1 per basket; finnan haddie, 7 to 8c. per lb. Digby herring, 75 to 80c. per bundle. ## QUEBEC MARKETS.

MONTREAL, October 9, 1901.

GROCERIES.

TRADE does not show much change from last week except that retailers show more inclination to buy dry fruits, now that they can feel pretty sure that the market is stable. Valencia raisins have declined somewhat this week, but the market is firmer again and prices here are not affected to any great extent. Currants are about steady. We understand that some concessions are being allowed on walnuts, but the market is very steady. There is still but little interest taken in canned foods of all kinds. Vegetables are obtainable at former prices and dealers show no eagerness to buy salmon. Spices are all firm and Japan tea is cabled somewhat higher. One of the leading features of the week is the drop in sugar and its continued weakness.

SUGAR.

The drop that materialized in the sugar market last week has not served to steady it any, as dealers are looking for further reductions to a cent at any moment. The raw sugar markets do not seem to show any tendency to recover from their depression and it is felt that the refined prices must come down to a proportionate level. Wholesalers report the demand only fairly good, dealers buying only from hand to mouth. The price of refined is $4.30 for granulated and $3.45 to $4.20 for yellows, as to grade, per 100 lb. City 5c. extra.

TEAS.

The latest cable news from Japan is to the effect that prices are advancing, and have already recovered the decline that took place some weeks ago, putting quotations back to where they were at the opening of the season. Locally, there is not much life to the tea business, although a fair trade is reported by the wholesale houses.

SYRUPS.

There has been a moderate demand for syrup during the past week at unchanged prices. We quote:  $3\frac{1}{4}$ c. in bbls.,  $3\frac{3}{4}$ c. in  $\frac{1}{2}$ -bbls.,  $3\frac{1}{2}$ c. in  $\frac{1}{4}$ -bbls.; \$1.50 in  $38\frac{1}{2}$ -lb. and \$1.10 in 25-lb. pails.

CANNED GOODS.

In spite of the continued reports about a short pack of vegetables, in spite of the advance made by the syndicate, and in spite of the fact that wholesalers have not yet advanced prices, there is little or no speculative demand for canned goods, and there is many a dealer who firmly believes that we shall yet see lower prices. Where he can find a basis for such a prophecy is hard to conceive. It seems that after the heavy decline of last year no one has any confidence in the stability of the canned goods market. At present dealers are offering tomatoes at  $82\frac{1}{2}$  to  $87\frac{1}{2}$ c., corn at  $77\frac{1}{2}$  to  $82\frac{1}{2}$ c., and peas at 80 to 95c. There is nothing fresh to report in regard to canned fruits, which are unchanged.

There is little or no interest being taken in salmon, no change in prices coming from the Coast. Deliveries of contracts are now coming to hand. It seems that the standard brands will not be reduced, as the packers of these goods have but little surplus stock and do not wish to bear the value of all the goods they have shipped just to get quickly rid of a few thousand cases. No private brands of Fraser River sockeye are offered below $4 to the jobber or $5 to the retailer. Rivers Inlet salmon is quoted at $4.80. It is now reported that there is a short run of humpback fish, but this will likely have little influence on prices. Kipperd herring, domestic and imported, is now in stock, the former worth $1 per doz., the latter $1.50 to $1.60 for plain, and $1.40 to $1.50 in tomato sauce.

SPICES.

The latest New York advice is to the effect that the visible supplies of pepper, mace, pimento, cassia and ginger, are steadily decreasing. The prospects are favorable for an exceedingly large demand for consumption during the next 60 days, and "materially higher prices are certainly most probable." Nutmegs are still rather weak. We quote as follows: Nutmegs, 35 to 65c. per lb., as to size; Penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground,  $12\frac{1}{2}$  to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 20c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole, Cochin, 14 to 16c.; Japan, 10c.; Jamaica, 20c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16c.; Jamaica, 25c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Tapioca remains very firm and values are advancing. Otherwise there is no change. We quote in combine district: B rice, in bags, \$3.10; in  $\frac{1}{2}$  bags, \$3.15; in  $\frac{1}{4}$  bags, \$3.20; in pockets, \$3.25. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, \$3 in bags; \$3.05 in  $\frac{1}{2}$  bags; \$3.10 in  $\frac{1}{4}$  bags; and \$3.15 in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth  $4\frac{3}{4}$ c. per lb., and tapioca,  $3\frac{3}{4}$  to  $3\frac{1}{2}$ c.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

VALENCIA RAISINS—There is still some old fruit to be sold; it is now offered at \$1 per box, but is much candied. New Valencia raisins that are on the market are worth 6 to 7c., according to grade. For fruit to come by the second direct steamer, prices are rather unsteady, with an easy tendency, a decline of 6d. to 1s. being recorded this week. The latest turn was upward. Prices for second steamer are about 1s. below those for the first. Dealers are quoting  $5\frac{1}{2}$  to  $5\frac{3}{4}$ c., according to brand, for fine off-stalk on the Escalona, and as low as  $4\frac{3}{4}$ c. for goods off the Bellona, to arrive three weeks later. Selected are  $\frac{3}{4}$ c. higher. Four-crown layers are selling at  $6\frac{1}{4}$  to  $6\frac{3}{4}$ c.

CURRANTS—For fine off stalk Filiatras, in barrels and half-barrels to arrive, 5c. is asked; uncleaned, in half-cases,  $5\frac{3}{4}$ c.; cleaned, in half-cases, 6c.; cleaned in 1-lb. cartons, 8c., and finest Vostizza currants,  $7\frac{3}{4}$  to  $8\frac{1}{4}$ c. The currant market is steady and retailers are placing their orders freely.

SULTANA RAISINS—New goods are being offered at 8 to 9c.

FIGS—Good sales of figs are reported on all sides, particularly for table figs. Some new goods have already arrived, and are selling well. In tapnets, Comadre figs are worth  $3\frac{1}{4}$  to  $3\frac{3}{4}$ c. Eleme figs are worth 8 to  $9\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb. in 10 to 12-lb. boxes.

PRUNES—There are still some old prunes to be had, and they are selling freely. To arrive prunes are worth  $7\frac{3}{4}$ c. for 40 50's,  $7\frac{1}{4}$ c. for 50 60's, 7c. for 60 70's,  $6\frac{1}{4}$ c. for 70 80's, 6c. for 80 90's and  $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. for 90-100's. Some old 90-100's are obtainable at  $4\frac{1}{4}$ c.

CALIFORNIA RAISINS—Some old 4-crown raisins are obtainable at  $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. New seeded raisins are being offered at  $9\frac{1}{2}$  to 10c., and loose muscatels at  $6\frac{1}{2}$  to 7c.

PEELS—English peels for future delivery are worth  $9\frac{1}{2}$  to 10c. for lemon, 10 to  $10\frac{1}{2}$ c. for orange and 14c. for citron.

NUTS.

It is said that this week importers have been offered some concessions on Grenobles. Prices are unchanged for new crop nuts. Grenobles are worth  $10\frac{1}{2}$  to 11c. to arrive, Sicily filberts, 8 to  $8\frac{3}{4}$ c.; Tarragona almonds,  $10\frac{1}{2}$  to 11c., and shelled almonds, 25c. Last year's shelled walnuts are worth 16 to 17c.

GREEN FRUITS.

Business is very active in seasonable fruits, particularly apples and grapes. A few peaches and plums are still coming to the market. Jamaica oranges are a little lower this week. Malaga grapes are now on the market as well as cranberries and sweet potatoes. We quote as follows: Californian Valencias, $5 to $6 per box; Jamaica oranges, $5.50 per bbl.; Messina lemons, 300's, $2.50 to $3.50; 360's, $2.50 per box; Verdilli lemons, $3.75 to $4.75 per box; pineapples, 20 to 30c.; Canadian apples, 15 to 30c. per basket; Californian plums, $1 to $2 per box; peaches, $1 to $1.25; limes, $1.50 per box; Ontario

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

FLOUR—This week buyers seem to have decided to wait for lower prices. Spring wheat brands are inclined to be easier on account of the big crop. Spring patents are worth $3 95 to $4 10; winter patents, $3.55 to $3 75; straight roller, $3.30 to $3.40; strong bakers', $3.50 to $3 80.

GRAIN—We quote: Manitoba No. 1 hard, 75c. afloat October; peas, 81c.; rye, 57 to 58½c.; No. 2 barley, 54c.; oats, 39 to 39½c.; buckwheat, 56½ to 57c.; corn, 63c.

OATMEAL—The market is very firm, and we quote $4.50 to $4 60 as to brand.

FEED—The market is quiet but steady at $15 to $15.50 in carlots for Ontario bran. Manitoba in bags is worth $15.50 to $16. Shorts keep scarce at $17.50 to $18.00.

BALED HAY—There is an active demand for spot hay, and sales have been made at $8 to $8.50 for No. 2. No. 1 sold at $9 50 to $10. Clover is worth $7 to $7.50.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER—The market has sagged about ½c., and is much duller than it was a week ago. Choice creamery has sold at 20½ to 21c.

CHEESE—The depression continues, and the country boards are the scenes of little

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE CANADIAN GROCER.

ST. JOHN, N.B., October 8, 1901.

BUSINESS is good, though there has been a number of failures and there is still a feeling of uncertainty—the more where accounts are felt to be weak. This is among the retail trade. The failure of a large wholesale house holding their paper throws them upon themselves to meet it in full, which, in some cases, they are not able to do. This failure has also disturbed the markets somewhat, as a large quantity of goods were held by different banks, and they are selling the goods below market prices. The past few weeks have been very busy among the wholesale dry goods people, it being the annual millinery opening, and the city has been full of outside buyers.

OIL—In burning oil, the sale is very large, and in prices there is a strong tendency to higher figures. Some lines already have been advanced. Paint oils have a fair sale. Owing to a weak market, dealers have bought from hand to mouth, with the result that the market is quite bare. Turpentine is rather higher. Lubricating oils are quiet, and prices unchanged. Cod oil is quite high. There is quite an export business done in this line. Seal oil is very firm. Candles and wax are unchanged.

SALT—In Liverpool coarse salt there continues a good sale at firm figures. With the opening of winter port business, the Liverpool steamers will bring weekly shipments. In fine salt, business is rather quiet. The sale of wood boxes is not as large as formerly, owing to the higher prices. We quote as follows: Liverpool coarse, 56 to 58c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1; Canadian fine, $1 per bag; cheese and butter salt bulk, $2.40 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $2.85 to $2.90 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.70 to $2.75 per bbl.; 20 lb. wood boxes, 22c. each; 10 lb. wood boxes, 14c. each; cartons, $2 per case of 2 doz.; English bottled salt, $1.25 to $1.30 per doz.; mineral rock salt, 60c. per 100 lb. (Selected lumps.)

CANNED GOODS—New corn and new Nova Scotian tomatoes are on the market. Canned goods are firmly held, particularly peas and tomatoes. Local prices move up slowly. Fair stocks are held. Our market has a fair stock of gallon apples and higher prices are asked. They are Nova Scotian goods. Direct shipments of Singapore pineapples were received during the week. In domestic sardines, kippered herrings and finnan haddies supplies have been received. Kipperd herring will be much short of demand, and there is light stock of haddies. Blueberries, which are largely packed here, are in light supply. There is quite an American demand for clams. These are a very fine line of domestic canned goods, and should have a larger sale west. In the local market lobsters are rather easier, but there is a great range of quality.

GREEN FRUITS—Apples are rather higher. There is fair supply and stock is good. The high price somewhat effects the demand. Very nice Jamaica oranges are now being received, but the sale is not large. Californian fruit business is about done. Few grapes are received. Keg grapes sell very slowly. Ontario grapes have a good sale at even prices. Lemons have but a fair sale, and prices tend lower. Sweet potatoes are fair sellers. There have been some native cranberries received, but they sell below the Cape Cod berry. They have not the high color of the imported berry.

DRIED FRUITS—The interest of the week has been in Californian prunes and quite a few sales have been made. While prices are higher than last year a good business is expected. The supply, including old stock is well below last year's figures. Small sizes are scarce. Present prices are thought to be quite low. In raisins the market seems very unsettled. Some prices have been quoted about  $2\frac{1}{2}$ c. below last year. At the present these seem to be withdrawn. Dealers are slow to buy. Shippers want to sell assortment—two's three's and fours—but our trade will not buy this way. Some Malagas and Valencias have been bought. The market has been weak. Quite a quantity of Valencias are consigned here. No price is yet quoted on new seeded. New figs have been received. Dates are low this year. Peels are shortly expected. Evaporated apples are scarce and very high. No new has yet been received. Onions are high and firm.

DAIRY PRODUCE—In butter, the market is being largely supplied from the west. Much of the stock is not satisfactory, but some good butter has been received. Local supply is short, and quite full prices are asked. For best grades there is a good sale. Eggs are lower here than at outside points. Sale is light. Prices are rather higher. Cheese is dull and prices unchanged. Local demand is for small cheese.

SUGAR—Prices are a little lower. The trade are much pleased with the working of the new arrangement regarding prices. The quality of sugar turned out by the Nova Scotian refinery, particularly in yellows, is not altogether satisfactory.

MOLASSES—There is but a limited sale at present. Fair stocks are held. The demand is for Porto Rico. Prices are unchanged at quite low figures. There is some Barbadoes held.

FISH—Except in smoked herring, the market is tending upwards, and the supply is light. The sale is limited. Fresh fish is very scarce. In dry cod, the supply is not large, and prices tend higher. Pickled herring are short of demand, and are very firm at the present high prices. There is a large sale. Some Shelburne and Canso have been received. Pollock are unchanged, but tend higher. Spot stocks are very light. Boneless fish is very firm and in good demand. Kipperd herring and finnan haddies are a fair supply. We quote as follows: Large and medium dry cod, \$3.50 to \$3.60; small, \$2.50 to \$2.60; haddies,  $4\frac{1}{2}$  to  $5\frac{1}{2}$ c.; smoked herring, 8 to 9c.; fresh haddock and cod,  $2\frac{1}{2}$ c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, \$1.50 to \$1.60 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, \$2.25 to \$2.35 per half bbl.; Canso herring, \$5.50 per bbl.; kippered herring, \$1 per box; Shelburne, \$2.50 per half bbl.

PROVISIONS—In barrelled pork and beef the high prices continue. Local-packed pork is being more freely offered. Canadian beef is also more largely used. In lard, prices continue to advance. There is a good general business.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL—Flour shows a fair business. Values show little change. Feed is almost impossible to get. Oatmeal has been very scarce and very little is offering, even at the higher figures. Oats hold firmer. Beans are easier and buyers backward. Cornmeal, while firm, shows no change and sales are good. Barley and peas are firm. Hay is still being largely exported. We quote: Manitoba flour, $4.60 to $4.70; best Ontario, $3.90 to $4.00; medium, $3.60 to $3.70; oatmeal, $4.50 to $4.60; cornmeal, $2.85 to $2.90; middlings, $22 to $23; oats, 45 to 48c.; hand-picked beans, $2.00 to $2.10; prime, $1.90 to $1.95; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3.00; split peas, $4.50 to $4.55; barley, $4.10 to $4.25; hay, $12 to $14.

FRASER RIVER SALMON PACK.

THE following is the estimate of the Fraser River salmon pack up to September 21, prepared by W. D. Burdis, secretary of the Fraser River Cannermen's Association.

duction, for, to compensate for the fall in prices, as much leaf as possible was taken from the plant, and the quantity was increased at the cost of the quality. This operation again, by lowering the quality, had the effect of maintaining and accentuating the fall in prices. When prices fell

The above remarks, say Gow, Wilson & Stanton, are very pertinent, and well merit the serious attention of producers.

A TEA FIRM'S EXPANSION.

It is little short of extraordinary the way the package tea trade of Canada has developed during the last few years. Among the firms that have taken a prominent part in bringing this development about is T. H. Estabrooks, St. John, N.B. In the Maritime Provinces, where Mr. Estabrooks first introduced his "Red Rose" brand, he had particularly keen competition from British houses to meet. By putting up a good tea and industriously pushing it he finally won success, until to-day he has a dozen travellers covering New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland and St. Pierre. Lately, the readers of "The Canadian Grocer" are aware he has had his travellers doing pioneer work in Ontario, and now he is going beyond into Manitoba and the Northwest Territories with his teas.

The Manitoba and Northwest branch of his business has been placed in the hands of Mr. Stephen Hustwitt, who, during the last four years, has represented Thomas B. Greening & Co., of Hamilton, in that part of the country. Mr. Hustwitt, who is a well-known and experienced tea man, will make Winnipeg his headquarters, and for which place he left Toronto a few days ago.

HOW TO GET BUSINESS.

Now that the fall and winter trade is coming on it is time that all merchants were moving in the direction of acquiring their share of this trade. The man who reaches out for business generally gets it. The fault of a stagnant profitless business is always with the man at the head of the business—not with the community. If you want to do an increased trade, "My Ad. Writer," 33 Clinton street, Toronto, will advise you how, free of charge. Write him to-day. See ad. in another column.

John Sloan & Co. have a handsome Darjeeling tea in stock.

Warren Bros. & Co. are in receipt of a shipment of Rio coffee of desirable color.

Just at hand with W. H. Gillard & Co., "Imperial" 4-crown layer figs in 10-lb. boxes—handsome goods for window display.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. T. F. Courtney, of T. F. Courtney & Co., well-known retail grocers of Halifax, N.S., was in Toronto this week.

INTERESTING TEA STATISTICS.

THE Indian Tea Association has published figures which show that the quantity of Indian tea manufactured to mid-August was below that made to the same date last season, and estimating the total crop at about three million pounds under last season's outturn.

Mr. J. E. O'Connor, C. I. E., in his "Review of the Trade in India," commenting upon the overproduction and consequent low prices during last season, remarks:

"While reduced prices were the consequence of overproduction, they also became the cause of the continuance of overproduction, because tea was produced in excess, the fall induced directors to endeavor, by further increasing production, to continue dividends to shareholders, and this endeavor to increase quantity was inevitably attended by a reduction in quality, the combination of

THE VISIBLE SUPPLY OF LARD.

IN last week's issue a summary of the world's visible supply of lard was given, based on our special telegraphic advices. The following table, compiled by the N. K. Fairbank Company, gives the estimates of the stocks of lard held in Europe and afloat on October 1, to which we add estimates of former years, and stocks in cities named :

NEW ZEALAND FROZEN MEAT.

Consul General Bray, of Melbourne, under date of August 4, 1901, transmits the following statement of frozen meat exported from the colony of New Zealand for the years ended June 30, 1901, and 1900 :

| Description. | 1899-1900.Pounds. | 1900-1901.Pounds. |
|--------------|-----------------------|-----------------------|
| Mutton.....  | 128,822,167           | 97,193,054            |
| Lamb.....    | 54,160,014            | 51,257,841            |
| Beef.....    | 31,854,651            | 29,728,028            |

The decline shown in all of the three lines, and particularly in mutton, is made the more significant by the fact that there has been no increase during the last three years in the exports of any of the products mentioned.

BACON IN LIVERPOOL.

The further weakness in live hogs and products in the United States again keeps the market here extremely quiet, and, with local dealing idle, trading has narrowed down to filling small country requirements. Consequently, the recent firmness has quite disappeared, and a disposition to accept easier prices exists amongst holders, though beyond Cumberland cuts, which are occasionally 6d. lower, no actual reduction is quoted for Irish or fancy selections.—The Grocers' Journal.

CANADIAN CATTLE AT THE PAN-AMERICAN.

One of the most interesting exhibits in the Canadian section of the Pan-American Exposition is the cattle corral, in which are now being shown 30 cattle and 75 sheep from Alberta, Assiniboia, and other Northwestern ranches. They are all fat and well-developed, and as they have been raised on prairie grass, without shelter or grain, they make an excellent exposition of the adaptability of the Canadian prairies for cattle raising.

Canadian cattle have proved their quality in competition at the Pan American Exposition. The following is a comparative statement of the prizes won by them :

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

The receipts of hogs have steadily increased during the past week or so, and, as a result, the prices being paid are fully $1 lower than a week ago. Other meats are unchanged in price, as the supply is up to the average and a normal business is doing. We quote : Dressed hogs, $8.50 to $8.75 per cwt.; mutton, $5.50 to $6 per cwt.; lambs, 6½ to 7½c. per lb.; beef carcasses, $7.25 per cwt. for best and $6 to $7 for mediums; hind quarters, 8c. for best; fore quarters, 4½ to 5½c. for best; calves, $8.50 for best and $6 to $7 for mediums.

The reduction in the price of hogs has taken the stiffness out of the provision market, but prices are steady, as there are practically no surplus stocks to break the market, and, as it is fully a month from the time hogs are bought before they can be sold as bacon. Long clear bacon is ½c. and lard ¼c. higher. We quote as follows : Long clear bacon, 12c. Smoked meats : Breakfast bacon, 15c.; rolls, 12½c.; small hams, 14c.; medium hams, 14c.; large hams, 13c.; shoulder hams, 12c.; backs, 15c. Barrel pork—Canadian heavy mess, $20.50; Canadian short cut, $22. Lard—Tierces, 11¼c.; tubs, 12c.; pails, 12¼c.

MONTREAL.

The scarcity of Canadian mess pork and lard continues and American pork is being brought in. Compound lard continues to advance. We quote as follows : Heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $22.50; Chicago clear pork, $25.00 for heavy and $24.50 for medium; selected heavy short cut mess pork, boneless, $22.50 to $23.00; hams, 13c.; bacon, 15c.; lard, pure Canadian, $2.50 per pail; refined lard compound (Fairbank's), $2.01 for 1 to 24 pails; $2.00 for 25 to 49 pails; $1.98 for 50 pails and over; Snow White and Globe compound, $1.72½ per pail; Cottolene, 9¼c. per lb. in tierces, 10¼c. in 26-lb. pails, and 10½c. in 50-lb. boxes, for Quebec.

KEROSENE IN AUSTRALASIA.

WITH the introduction of bulk kerosene in the Australasian markets, a field of speculation is opened up as to the possible change of method of conducting the trade in the future. It is not more than likely that the retail distribution will gradually drift into different hands. The probability of the kerosene trade slowly but surely changing from the case and tin to the pint and gallon seems considerable. Wherever bulk oil has been placed upon the market—in England, India, Japan, Ceylon, China it has obtained a firm hold.

Handling a tin or case of kerosene is easy and clean. It does not necessitate the grocer constantly washing his hands before serving another customer. But selling it by the pint is quite a different matter. It is almost impossible to measure kerosene without getting some of it on one's hand. Nothing is more penetrating than kerosene, as any grocer knows, and generally after leaving the drum he needs to wash his hands carefully before serving coffee, cheese, or any other unpacked lines. What is a likely consequence? Simply that the trade will drift out of his hands to a very large extent and be sold either by retail distributing carts or at the ironmonger's shops, where the bulk of other oils is kept. Turpentine, methylated spirits, and linseed oil are sold mostly at the ironmongers, although, of course, grocers sell a certain quantity. The same will, in all probability, be the case as regards kerosene. Not only this, but as at present in England, very probably the hawking of kerosene will be gradually extended. What will be the attitude of grocers in the event of this change really taking place it is hard to forecast, but we know that by some at least the innovation would be welcomed should the case trade give place to the bulk.—The Australasian Grocer.

MR. W. H. EVANS FELICITATES.

REPORTING the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Canadian Pacific Railway, The Montreal Witness says: "Mr. W. H. Evans made a clever and humorous speech at this juncture, most of the routine business having been disposed of. He said that he thought they should take notice of the honor which had been conferred upon Mr. Shaughnessy, whether by a formal resolution or by a vigorous hand-clap. (General clapping of hands.) He had marked his career, and now in the place of highest authority he was giving evidence of the greatest ability—ability which was placed at the disposal of the shareholders and which maintained and increased the efficiency of the system. The C.P.R. was now fully on its feet, and he thought they could afford to be retrospective. Mr. Evans here glanced at the early days, when, if you were going east from Woodstock, you would be the only passenger; when, if you were in a hurry with your breakfast, the porter would tell you that 'Jim would hold the train for 20 minutes or so'; when there were breakdowns and long stoppages and generally no certainty as to time. He had been talking recently with some transcontinental travellers about these times, and one of them (at Banff, in the Rocky Mountains) asked if the C.P.R. (in the early days) fed the passengers during the delays. Mr. Evans said: 'Yes; two good meals a day free of charge.' An Englishman said: 'Well, the food was all right, but what about a "bawth"?' 'The company brings the water right to the verandah,' was the reply. (Roars of laughter.) Mr. Evans said that everything on the C.P.R., from the food, the politeness on the train, the prompt time, the care of the passengers, the looking out for boulders in dark passages on the main line—every feature indicated the thought of one man, the president, who had been so signally honored. He cordially approved of the pension fund, and he also thought that there should be something said in regard to the splendid manner in which the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York had been provided for. (Loud applause.)

"Sir William Van Horne, replying to Mr. Evans, said that he was sure that all present were rejoiced at the honor which had been paid to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy—an honor which might also be regarded as a compliment to the Canadian Pacific Railway."

LABOR-SAVING TEA-PACKING DEVICES.

THE following, signed by Andrew Yule & Co., commissioners, Calcutta, appears in a recent issue of Printers' Ink, and explains itself:

"We have just undertaken from the Indian Tea Association the working of a scheme for developing the market for Indian tea in this country, references to which you will, no doubt, have noticed in the newspapers.

"His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General, the Commander-in-Chief, the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab, the Home Secretary and other officials who have been approached on the subject are taking a very keen interest in the undertaking, and have promised their sympathy and support. To capture the Indian market, it will, in our opinion, be necessary to bring tea within reach of the people in a way that will suit their limited needs. As you, no doubt, are aware, the mass of the natives of India are not overburdened with wealth, their daily income being in the region of 4d. When purchasing food, a piece at a time is the usual outlay, say one farthing, and, if they are to be got to drink tea, they must be able to purchase it in the same small quantity as other articles. Tea being a delicate article, quickly suffers from exposure to the atmosphere, and, therefore, needs to be protected by a packing both air and damp proof. A packing is also a necessary precaution against adulteration, to which the Indian shopkeeper is peculiarly addicted.

"We therefore have under consideration the packing of 1-oz., 2-oz., 4-oz., 8-oz. and 16-oz. packets of tea, to suit all classes of the community, and are looking around for some labor-saving appliances for doing so.

"In our copy of Printers' Ink, volume 27, page 12, we read with special interest your account of Middleton's methods, and it occurred at once to us that you, better than anyone else, would be able to put us on to some firm who supplied automatic weighing and packing machines, tin canister-making machines and other appliances suitable for a large tea-packet business; machines that can be worked by hand being preferred. Will you kindly do so, and also refer to us some good houses who would undertake a tea packet agency in New York and elsewhere in America?"

"We need hardly say that we should feel much indebted to you, and would be only too happy to do anything in our power at any time to help you in return."

THE ART OF WINDOW DRESSING.

HINTS FOR THE GROCER.

IN the advertising scale the newspaper ad. ranks first, but the show window should be a good second, running almost a dead heat with the sidewalk bulletin, cartoon or placard, says New York Merchants' Review. Considered with respect to its comparative cost, there is no variety of advertising, no channel of reaching the public, which is superior to the show window.

Of course, its usefulness depends considerably upon the situation of the store. A store on the main thoroughfare will always pay better for advertising through the show-window than a place in a side street.

There is this point, however, to be always borne in mind—the main street usually bristles with window displays, amongst which a single grocery window seldom can cut other than a poor figure, whereas in the side street a display of moderate attractiveness will be noticed because there are fewer windows of merit to dispute the palm with it. It is possible to draw people a few steps out of their way when the window has special attractions.

Some cardinal rules should always be observed in the construction and dressing of a grocery window. It should be as spacious as possible, reaching close to the ceiling of the store, and cut low in order to give plenty of room for dressing. Always plan to have the window roomy and light. Always keep the window clean.

The dressing should, as a rule, be confined to such materials as can be found in the stock. Gimmicks, in the shape of automatic toys, etc., may bring a crowd to the store and yet not sell a pound of goods.

The grocers' stock always contains an abundance of material for a good "trim," as the experts call it, and it is not a very hard matter to decide which things to show. The great point is to make the passerby say to himself: "That looks nice!" Through the eye you want to reach the nerves that connect the brain and palate, and the nearer you can come to making a possible customer's mouth water the better your chance of making a sale.

Therefore pick out your very finest goods—raisins, prunes, fresh fruits, pickles, bottled preserves, evaporated fruits, etc., anything that is appetizing, and put a few of them in the window—the effect of a great quantity can sometimes be produced by using empty cartons, cans or cases as a background to the exposed goods.

There is not much to be gained by showing sugar, coffee, tea, and flour in bulk. Every grocer sells these articles and such goods always look alike to the customer. But if you have either or all of these articles packed under nice labels, you can't do better than trim the window with them from time to time.

If you want to start a boom on flour, get the right brand, procure a label with your own name on it and have it packed, or pack it yourself, in convenient packages under that label. Then push that brand for all you are worth by filling the show-window with dummy packages surrounding a single glass jar of the flour, placed in the middle of the window so as to show its color and grain. If you place a purple silk or velvet patch under the glass jar, and stretch another piece behind it, the flour will gain by the contrast. Printed matter in the window, fostering the notion that the sale is tremendous, will, of course, make the display more effective.

Coffee, tea, butter, cheese, and oranges and lemons in their season, can be treated almost similarly.

No hard and fast rule as to window dressing should be laid down. The writer has seen big sales of fancy goods follow the placing of three or four glass dishes of preserves, etc., in a grocer's window, and equally successful results were seen the following week, when the same window was apparently filled with bananas, the idea of enormous quantity being artfully suggested by using barrels and boxes with a thin layer of the fruit at the top.

Again, success has rewarded the window-trimming tactics of one grocer in this city, who shows a few trays of tea and coffee, some jars of jam, several bottles of pickles, one or two columns of canned goods, an open box each of evaporated apricots and of prunes, and a few tins of spices, each article having its own distinctive price card attached. A few blocks away is a higher class store, where a gigantic dummy package representing a popular table delicacy has the place of honor in the window, flanked on either side by high-class table luxuries, including several foreign varieties. Not a price ticket is to be seen. The desired effect is produced by the manifest superiority of the goods shown, and while it is very different in plan from the other window display mentioned above, it is not less successful as a trade winner.

Who shall decide which is the best display to catch customers when contrasting styles and methods give equally good results?

Above all things keep the window clean, inside and out, and do not let flies gather there.

Keeping everlastingly at it brings success in window dressing as in other things. Considering the great field, the very promising field, for the dealer which lies in his show window, and the abundant scope for ingenuity which it affords, it is wonderful that more importance is not attached to this branch of advertising by the grocers generally.

Conservative window-dressers seldom strive hard to achieve strikingly novel effects, and anything that savors of sensationalism or trickiness is usually repugnant to them.

But why not leave the rats if by so doing one can sell more goods? Grocers are not in business for the purpose of making a reputation as artistic window-dressers, but for the purpose of making money, and should grasp at novelty whenever it comes within their ken, because novelty in advertising almost invariably pays.

Ideas such as the following are usually worth trying: A Philadelphia dealer recently advertised a specialty of his own by placing a pair of scales in the window, with an imitation gold brick in one pan and a ten-cent package of his specialty in the other pan of the scales, the pan with the specialty being tied down so as to give the impression that the goods outweighed the gold brick. Prominently displayed was a placard saying that So-and-So's famous specialty was "worth its weight in gold." Ingenious persons can easily evolve similar ideas for the use of the window dresser of the grocery store.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch.

Your idea may be that all starch is starch and that your customers won't detect even a slight difference in quality. You may think that because there is a cent or two extra profit on "Mushroom" brands (that come and go), you can retain the confidence of your trade—it doesn't pay to trifle with the confidence that a customer has in you and your goods.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch is as staple as flour. In the name there is the fame of nearly half a century. In the making there is the skill of long experience combined with honesty of purpose and unequalled manufacturing facilities. Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch represents the highest type of perfection there is or can be in starch. Kegs of 100-lbs.—handsome enamelled horse-shoe tins holding 6-lbs.—handsome 1-lb. packages that give a touch of life and color and "go" to a grocer's shelves.

SCHEMES TO BEAT THE GROCER.

ALTHOUGH they may cut prices regardless, "run bargain sales, and even "break" each other in competition, the uptown butchers, grocers, and bakers cling together in common support against the bad customers that come to them from the floating population of the tenements, the flat-houses and apartments. In coming into a district a customer must have some something more than a bank-book to show that his "financial intentions are right." This may be a letter, telephone call, or a well-posted pass-book showing the amount of goods purchased with the proper receipts. Among the smaller stores the latter credential is the most common one in use, the clerks receiving the owner about as mechanically as a quarantine officer passes an incoming ship with a clear bill of health.

"And yet they ain't always good," said one west-side grocer. "I got stuck with one of them who had traded at a market in another block until she got a well-filled and

RECEIPTED PASS-BOOK.

Then she left and came to me. I honored the book and she ran up a month's account, disappearing without paying a cent. She probably is working that pass-book yet. We have to watch our trade pretty close, and if a customer leaves with unpaid bills we consider it our duty to follow them up and report them to the next merchant they approach. I've had dealers to come to me from below Twenty-Third street and put me on to customers that I thought were the best of pay. When we are taken in by customers who leave unpaid bills behind, usually we let them go without any attempt to collect. Lawyers' fees are too large for us to afford to go to court; so the account is a dead loss.

"Many times persons come to us without any reference at all. They do not ask for credit but pay cash. They trade with us so long that we finally run into an account with them naturally. They pay at first and then

BEGIN TO GET CARELESS.

Fearing to offend and lose their patronage, we let the bills run on only to wake up some morning to find the customer gone.

"Then there are those persons who have the best of intentions; who are probably honest. They have credit and pay their bills, until, eventually, the head of the house loses his job, his health, or his money, and we are out of pocket just as though the family was the 'slickest' of beats. But we do not look at these cases in this light. Many times we are willing to do what little we can to help the case along, and you will find a whole

CHAPTER OF THIS CHARITY WORK

that is never mentioned in church or society reports. One of my best customers was a famous musician whose concert work netted him over $500 a week. He died suddenly while on a tour, and when the estate was settled it was found that the man's family had lived up to the last dollar. I never recovered a cent."

Another grocer, farther downtown, whose sign has been above his ninth avenue doorway for over 30 years, was afraid that the methods adopted by retired merchants to protect themselves against fraud, did not speak well for the standard of New York housekeepers of to-day, as a class.

"I can remember when the bulk of my customers," he said, "were house-owners. Their dwellings were their

MARK OF RESPECTABILITY.

Some took boarders, but there were few flat houses or apartments. My trade was almost entirely credit business, and I always got my money. Now, these families have all gone. Moved farther up town, I suppose, and their places have been taken by strangers, who come from nobody knows where and disappear just as mysteriously. I do not do so much credit business now. If a customer has not the cash I cannot trouble myself with him.

"The other day a young woman came running in the store swinging her hands and whistling. She appeared to be very happy.

"Make me out a pass-book right away," said she. "I've been married two weeks and we begin housekeeping on the fifth floor, just across the street. John gets $15 a week and is paid every Friday. To-day I want five pounds sugar, a sack of flour, a can of oil—and so on. She went through a bill that figured up to $10 easily.

"I just took her aside and talked to her as though she was my own daughter.

"How much money have you got to start housekeeping on?" and she showed a pocketbook filled with nothing but street car transfers and shirt-waist samples.

"How do you know that John will be working next week?" I asked next. She did not know, but John was always steady, and did not drink. John could do nothing that would be a failure. So I gave her a lecture and she listened to it all. I told her that John might meet all her expectations and he might not, but that he never could pay all the bills that she had begun to run up with his $15 a week salary. I told her to go home and live on oatmeal and bread, if need be, until she had got one month's salary ahead, and then go out and try shopping. She heard me through and then went home looking mad. She probably told John all about it."—N. Y. Evening Post.

INDIAN VS. BRAZILIAN COFFEES.

THE enormous production of coffee in Brazil and the consequent decrease in price has seriously affected the coffee interests of India, according to the monthly bulletin of the Bureau of American Republics. Recently published statistics show that the area planted in coffee in southern India at the close of 1900 was 245,400 acres (99,312 hectares). Since 1897 the decrease in the price of coffee has removed any stimulus to extend the area under cultivation, while the yield has been diminished by disease and by adverse climatic conditions. The quantity produced in 1900 was only about one-half that produced in 1890.

Practically the entire coffee crop of India is exported. Great Britain and France are the chief customers. As France has during the past five years taken about one-third of the Indian coffee exported, the question whether that country will in a few months impose its maximum tariff thereon is of great moment. A decree has been issued by the French Government which authorizes the application of the minimum tariff on products of the British colonial possessions (of which India is one) up to February 23, 1902. After that date Indian coffee will pay a much higher rate than Brazilian coffee, unless, in the meantime, some mutual agreement is arrived at, or unless fresh legislation (which seems improbable) is undertaken in France.

A HEAVY FINE.

The account of a prosecution and conviction in a London police court as published in The Times and reproduced hereunder may be of interest to retailers as well as consumers of butter:

At the South-Western last week Messrs. Pearks, Gunston & Fee, grocers, were summoned at the instance of the Wadsworth council for selling at their branch shop in Streatham butter which contained 6.5 per cent. of moisture. It was stated for the prosecution that the defendants import colonial butter, and by a certain mechanical process, introduce into it a percentage of milk. For the defence it was contended that the defendants issued a label with the butter which disclosed to the purchaser what he was buying, so that he was in no way deceived. The magistrate convicted, imposing a fine of £10 with £5 5s. costs, but granted a case for the high court.

A WINTER TRIP TO THE BRITISH WEST INDIES.

PICKFORD & BLACK are making a strong effort to increase the volume of passenger travel by their line to the West Indian Islands during the winter months. They have already done quite a large amount of special advertising and expect to do a good deal more both in Nova Scotia and the West before the end of February. Mr. Charles S. Pickford, who looks after the firm's interests throughout the southern islands during the winter, is now in Ontario making the acquaintance of people whom he hopes to interest in Trinidad, Barbados and Demerara as markets for Canadian goods and, if possible, to impress upon them the advisability of taking the round trip from Halifax out and back at an early date.

A few years ago a great many Ontario people made it a point to spend their winters at Barbados, Dominica, or some one of the Windward Islands, but, owing to the Halifax service being inferior to that from New York, they almost invariably chose the latter route. To-day, however, with the conditions reversed, it seems probable we shall see a great many western people pass through this city on their way going south.

The Orinoco, the flagship of Pickford & Black's line, is probably the finest boat for tropical service on the North American coast. She was originally intended for the East Indian trade and is magnificently fitted throughout. The other boats of the line are smaller, but, with their deck staterooms and newest appointments, are most comfortable, indeed. We can imagine no more delightful six weeks' voyage than a trip by one of these boats during the winter or spring months. It is an excursion the charm of which cannot be overstated. It takes one into regions where the climate—that all important factor in the development of the human race—has moulded a people whose tastes, habits, and modes of life differ entirely from those of the people from the north; where the sons of the tropics produce a vegetation which embraces every element essential to a really enjoyable time. The bright sunny brilliancy of the day, the pure, soft darkness of the nights, the sparkling glassy seas, the unrivalled scenery of the islands, their mountains, their craggs, their gardens, their forests; the colored folk of all hues of skin, of all types of feature; the rich luxuriant vegetation of the tropics, the strange fruits, flowers, foliage. All these elements combined make a journey which will be stowed away and docketed in the memory of any who may have taken it as "Perfect."

The round trip from Halifax occupies 42 days and the cost of a return ticket, which includes stateroom and meals is $130. From Montreal it is $142.50 and from Toronto, Hamilton, London and other central points in Ontario, it is $143.35.—Maritime Merchant.

CANADIAN PRODUCTS WANTED.

The following were among the inquiries relating to Canadian products recently received at the High Commissioner's Office in London, Eng.:

1. A Rotterdam agent asks to be referred to Canadian exporters of baled hay and to other firms desiring a representative in Holland.

2. The names of the leading cigar buyers in Canada are asked for by an English firm of manufacturers.

3. Inquiry is made for the names of the principal importers into Canada of such small leather goods as laces, straps, belts, etc.

4. An agent at Genoa is open to take up the representation of Canadian firms exporting goods suitable for the Italian market, viz., lumber, etc. He is also desirous of appointing an agent in Canada for the sale of a well-known brand of olive oil.

5. A broker and agent at Durban, Natal, desires to be placed in communication with some good Canadian house manufacturing goods suitable for the South-African markets.

[The names of the firms making the above inquiries, can be obtained on application to the editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.]

"DO IT NOW."

THIS phrase, which is the conspicuous title on a card recently issued by Boeckh Bros. & Company, Toronto, has attracted considerable attention. "Traveller" writes to this paper of experiences which came under his notice as follows:

"A manager of a large business informed me the other day that this card has been a means of helping him along in every-day life. 'We are all more or less inclined to put off what we should do to day,' said this gentleman to me, 'but since I received that card, I not only "Do it now," but insist that all my clerks and salesmen follow the rule. In order to keep abreast of the times and of the keen competition existing in all lines of business, one must be prompt. Constant delays mean a loss of dollars and cents—none can say to what extent.'

"Some of the buyers in retail stores would do well if they adopted the above motto. The time of travellers is worth money, and when retailers are making appointments to meet them or examine samples they should keep those three words in the foreground.

"It should also apply to collections, and to their attention to customers' wants and store requirements generally.

"A young man was engaged by a large mercantile house to start work on a certain day and hour. Owing to some unforeseen circumstances he did not arrive on time, and failed to notify the firm by letter or wire. He was only half an hour late, but when he arrived the manager said to him: 'Young man, you were engaged to report here at an appointed time, but did not keep your part of the engagement. The position is now filled.'

"Punctuality in business is one of the things a lot of people have yet to learn. 'Do it now.'"

Jane Adams, grocer, etc., Acton, Ont., has sold out to George Soper.

ESSEX TOBACCO CROP.

In an interview regarding this year's tobacco crop in Essex County, Mr. Lewis Wigle, of Leamington, the well-known grower, said :

"If last spring had been as favorable for growing plants and setting them out, there would have been a greater acreage this season than last ; but the spring was backward and dry, and we find the crop about equal to that of 1900.

"There will be between two and three million pounds of burley leaf—nearer three than two—and about one million pounds of Zimmer, Spanish and other varieties adapted to cigar making.

"The effect of the very large crop of 1897 is wearing off, and nearly all the factories in Canada consuming Canadian leaf will require some of this year's crop.

"Practical demonstrations have shown that we can grow as good burley leaf as can be grown in any country in the world."

A FIRE QUICKLY QUENCHED.

One evening a few weeks ago, while one of the bookkeepers was busy in the offices of the Pure Gold Mfg. Co., Limited, Front street east, Toronto, he was surprised to find the fire brigade gathering about the

The fire had started in an isolated milling-room and an alarm had been sent in by the Courtland automatic alarm without the bookkeeper having the slightest knowledge of it. The fire was soon put out so that little damage was done to the firm's stock, and work in the factory was in no wise delayed.

BEET-SUGAR GOSSIP.

Residents of Wiarton, Ont., and vicinity have taken nearly $35,000 stock in The Wiarton Beet Sugar Manufacturing Co., Limited. The construction of the factory in Wiarton will probably be started in a few days.

The plant of The Wallaceburg Sugar Co., Limited, Wallaceburg, Ont., which is now being constructed, will be fully as large as was at first anticipated. The main building, which will be constructed of stone, brick and cement, with steel girders, will be 268 x 64 ft. There will also be 10 beet sheds, each 400 ft. long. The warehouse will have a capacity of 20,000 bbls. The premises are to be ready for operation on August 15, 1902, in time for next year's fall campaign.

The Galt, Ont., Board of Trade have, during the last couple of weeks, held a series of meetings in the neighboring district, endeavoring to secure the promise of a sufficient acreage of beets to make the establishment of a beet-sugar factory in Galt a safe investment. Nearly 1,000 acres have already been promised. A committee representing the promoters of a company who desire to establish a factory in Guelph, Ont., are making a similar canvass in the neighborhood of that place.

A DANISH MODEL DAIRY.

It is not surprising that Danish butter has won such a high reputation for itself on the markets of the world. The Danish Export Review of September 12 contains illustrated descriptions of the "Danish Estates Butter Factory," a cooperative concern controlled by the owners of about 50 small and large farms, possessing an aggregate of 6,200 cows which produce 31,000,000 lb. of milk annually. The factory, which is at Hasleo, is a three-winged brick building, covering over  $\frac{1}{4}$  of an acre. The milk is taken to the factory in large wagons built specially for the business; unloaded on a covered, exterior platform; through broad sliding doors into the weighing hall, which contain two scales capable of weighing 1,000 lb. of milk at a time. The plant includes six separators, with an aggregate capacity of 24,000 lb. of milk per hour. These are divided into two series each of which possess their own sweet milk heater and cream pasteurizing apparatus. In the churning room are two triple butter workers, with six churning casks, each able to churn 700 lb. of cream at a time. The buttermilk is used in the manufacture of cheese, as is also much of the skim milk. In the cheese-making room are nine large cheese vats of American pattern, each vat containing 4,000 lb. of milk. The necessary cooperage and tin-smithing is part of the factory equipment. The establishment equipped cost about \$22,000. THE CANADIAN GROCER is indebted to Mr. C. E. Sontum, the Canadian agent at Copenhagen, for the copy of The Export Review.

"PURE GOLD'S" NEW FACTORY.

The Pure Gold Mfg. Co., Limited, Toronto, have secured a site on Russell Square, on King street near John, and will build thereon their new factory. It will be remembered that this company secured a site on Wellington Place some time ago. As, however, the neighboring land was taken up for residential purposes, and the owners of this land objected to the erection of a large factory near them, this site was resold and the new one secured. The factory will be four storeys high and 185 x 60 ft. in dimensions, and will cost about $20,000.

Not only will the factory provide more space, but it will be equipped with the most modern plant. Every department of the company's manufacturing plant will be improved by the installation of the newest, most up-to-date machinery and by systematizing the production of their innumerable lines. A specialty will be made of coffee-sorting and roasting. This department will be equipped with automatic machinery, which will insure a uniform product of the highest quality.

A lunchroom and dressing-rooms will be provided for employes, and a lecture room will be built, in which demonstrations of "Pure Gold" goods will be given for the benefit of the various cooking-schools in the city.

CANS FOR CANNED GOODS MEN.

Mr. James B. Campbell, of the Acme Can Works, Montreal, was in Toronto early this week on his way to the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo.

"We have had a hard time of it filling orders for tin cans this season," he said. "Owing to the strike in the United States the Welsh tinplates that should have come to Canada were shipped to that country. I am thankful to say we have now got over the difficulty, and that everything is now in a normal condition. But I can tell you that in the height of the season we had a pretty uncomfortable time of it, what with our trying to get delivery of tinplates and our customers worrying us for tins. We are now getting ready to supply tins for the fall pack of poultry, meats, etc."

THE chief topic of interest at the regular meeting of The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association on Monday evening was the proposed amendment to the early-closing by-law. In the absence of President Panter and Vice-President Sykes, F. S. Roberts was voted to the chair.

Owing to the holidays last week, due to the visit of the Duke and Duchess of York, the attendance was not as large as was thought advisable in order to make preparations for the campaign re early-closing, which would be necessary if the by-law was to be amended as desired. It was, therefore, moved by A. R. Williamson, seconded by D. Bell, that a special meeting be called for Monday, October 21, to take the means necessary to the passage of the amendment to the early-closing by-law.—Carried.

F. W. Johnson gave notice that at the next meeting he would move that $50 be drawn from the special fund to provide for an oyster supper.

Moved by D. Bell, seconded by T. Clark, that as several prizes were donated by friends of the association for the picnic at Oshawa, and were allotted to events which were not run off, that these prizes be devoted to amusements at social evenings to be held by the association, and that the secretary be instructed to secure these prizes before the special meeting to be held on Monday, when they should be allotted.

This was carried.

An offer of 15c. on the dollar has been made by Merritt Bros., but has not yet been accepted.

CANNED-TOMATO SITUATION.

IT is important to note that the short pack of tomatoes, which the Canadian canners have been prophesying for some weeks back, has developed within the past few days into a tangible form that is far more convincing than the advance recently made by the Syndicate. One large Montreal dealer, who bought so heavily last fall that he had yet a plentiful supply at the end of the year, has been already cleaned out of his new pack, and finds, much to his disappointment, he cannot replenish his stock with his favorite brand. This has led to investigations that have brought forth interesting facts which, we believe, are dependable.

The trade have become accustomed—too well accustomed—to the canners' story of a short pack. It was told last year, but, intentionally or unintentionally, everyone in the trade knows that it was a story of fiction; the pack was exceedingly heavy. So, in spite of the fact that the canners adopted measures to curtail their output this year, buyers refused to govern themselves by the canners' reports, even when the crop itself was a partial failure. A few loaded up, but the vast majority bought lightly. It is not surprising that there are low stocks, but it is surprising that these stocks cannot be readily replenished. It would seem to be a strong evidence indicative of a light pack.

We have been given some figures up to October 4. It is said that the Canadian packers of tomatoes had put up only 219,000 cases, against 387,000 last year, and the packing is now virtually over, as tomatoes will not ripen in frosty weather. Of the 219,000 cases packed, 170,000 have, it is alleged, already been sold. The statistics look strong and are said to be authentic.

There is another circumstance to take into consideration. The tomato crop has been very light in the United States, and the Americans have been buying in this country. From Picton and Trenton two cargoes at least of 5 000 and 6 000 crates have been shipped across to Rochester to supply the canners there, while we have heard that last week a block of 5,000 cases of canned tomatoes were sent into the United States. Both purchases must naturally affect our small market. One large Montreal firm has authorized its travellers to predict $1 tomatoes before next spring. But it is not everybody that is so optimistic.

Already the Americans are advancing catsups and other products containing tomatoes, on account of the high prices of the raw material. One maker of catsup is up 15 to 25c. a case, and Heinz's Montreal agency say quotations are withdrawn.

DYED EVAPORATED APPLES.

LAST season THE CANADIAN GROCER had occasion to draw attention to the harm done to the top layer of evaporated apples by the use in packing of colored paper, or rather the use of colored paper in trimming the top edges of evaporated apple packages. It was conclusively shown that the proper paper to use is a plain white paper for the top, sides and bottom, with possibly a strip of white paper of fancy design along the top edges.

But some packers seem to be still making the mistake pointed out last season. E. S. Shearer, Rounthwaite, Man., sends us a sample of a top layer of evaporated apples. Fancy pink paper had been used in this package, and it had not only discolored the surface of the apple immediately under it, but the dye had gone completely through the fruit.

A word to the wise should be sufficient.

BALED HAY WANTED.

A LONDON, ENG., firm writes that it is desirous of being brought into touch with Canadian shippers of baled hay near the Atlantic seaboard who would be willing to deliver hay in pressed bales f.o.b. steamer at a low price.

Exporters who desire to communicate with the London house in question can do so through the editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Canada's export trade in hay is becoming quite an important one, last year being valued at over $2,000,000, and the number of inquiries that are still being received for this product of the farm is an evidence that the foreign trade is capable of still greater development. Our chief customer is the United States, but it would seem that the market which is capable of the greater development is that which lies beyond the Atlantic. The exports of hay during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, were as follows:

|                         | Tons.   |             |

CANADIAN FLOUR PLEASES THE DUCHESS.

While the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York were in Winnipeg they, accompanied by their suite, spent an hour in the great mills of the Ogilvie Milling Co., Limited, there. Evidently the Duchess has a good knowledge of flour qualities for she was so impressed with the magnitude of the mill, the completeness of its equipment and the excellence of the flour which is produced from Manitoba No. 1 hard that she insisted on arrangements being made so that the bread used in her household shall henceforth be made from Ogilvie's Hungarian exclusively. This should contribute to the reputation and fame of Manitoba wheat and flour, not only in Canada, but also in the many countries to which it is exported, for what is suitable for British Royalty need fear no rival the world over.

It will be remembered that a few months ago the British Admiralty, after a series of tests, decided to use Manitoba flour in the navy.

The merit of Canadian flour is gradually getting the recognition it deserves.

GERMANY'S DISCRIMINATION AGAINST CANADA.

THE official announcement which the Department of Trade and Commerce received the other day to the effect that the favored nation treatment had been denied Canada by Germany, created little or no interest in this country, for it was only an official intimation of what we were already fully cognizant. It is none the less an important matter, for it means that whatever business we do with Germany will be done under difficulties greater at least than some of our competitors. Canada is the only colony in the British Empire upon which this disability has been placed.

The action of the German authorities is, of course, a reprisal upon us for the part we took in 1897 in bringing about the abrogation of the treaties between Great Britain and Germany which prevented Canada from giving the products of the Mother Country preferential tariff treatment.

We cannot but regret the action of Germany. It is unworthy of a great nation. The steps that Canada took to abrogate the treaty were not based on antipathy towards the German Empire. On the contrary, the people of this country have had the most friendly feeling towards the Fatherland. There are a large number of Germans and their descendants in the Dominion, and they are among our best and most highly-prized citizens.

What induced Canada to seek the abrogation of the treaty was a principle. The treaty, which went into force in 1865, bound Canada to conditions which she had no voice in formulating. As they precluded the Dominion according the products of Great Britain a preference under the tariff unless it was extended to Germany, it meant that the self-government for which our forefathers had so long contended before obtaining was still very incomplete, and incomplete in a way that was humiliating.

Possibly few, if any, of those who agreed with the action of the Canadian Government in persuading the British Government to abrogate the treaty expected reprisals from the German Government, but that does not warrant our wishing to recall what has been done.

We contended for a principle, and we won. And even if we have to pay a little more for it than we anticipated it is hardly manly for us on that account to blame those who were responsible for initiating the movement which resulted in the treaty with Germany being abrogated.

In Great Britain there is a feeling in certain quarters that the Imperial Government did not stand up for the interest of Canada when the new treaty with Germany was being negotiated. The Financial Daily News of London, for instance, in a series of editorial articles vigorously criticized the Imperial Government for its apathy in regard to the matter.

We do not know what our own Government has done in the matter. Sir Richard Cartwright, some time ago, told a deputation that his Department had made some representations in the matter. But, judging from Sir Richard's action in regard to other matters, we fear that his representations were not very vigorously pushed upon the Imperial authorities.

Hope may not yet be abandoned, however. Possibly a commercial treaty, similar to that which we already have with France, may be secured with Germany through the Imperial authorities. At any rate, we do not know what we can do until we try. The Government should take the matter up without delay.

Canada's aggregate trade with Germany in 1900 was nearly $10,500,000, the largest on record. But by far the greater part of that amount is made up of imports from Germany, the imports and exports being $8,706,641 and $1,715,903 respectively. Our chief imports from Germany during 1899 and 1900 were as follows:

CHIEF IMPORTS FROM GERMANY.

| Iron, steel, metals. ....     | 414,143    | 678,869    |

Our exports to Germany are largely made up of breadstuffs, manufactures of metals and fruits. This will be gathered from a glance at the following table:

CHIEF EXPORTS TO GERMANY.

The aggregate trade with Germany during the last four years was as follows:

|               | 1897.       | 1898.       | 1899.       | 1900.        |

|               | $6,810,978 | $5,601,232 | $9,542,068 | $10,422,544 |

Germany has evidently the most to lose through unpleasant trade relations between the two countries, but that should not deter the Department of Commerce either making an effort to secure a commercial treaty with that country or at least the removal of what is practically a discriminatory tariff against Canadian products.

APPLE PRICES BEING FIXED.

THE high price of apples is naturally having its effect on the values of gallon, evaporated and dried apples, all three of which are handled by the grocery trade.

When it first became realized that the apple crop was a short one, dealers immediately forsook the low price at which they were clearing last year's pick, some of whom were selling as low as $1.65, and raised their quotations to $2.00, then to $2.25, which was for some time considered high enough. But now we understand that prices have soared to $2.50, $2.60 and $2.75. Most packers absolutely refuse to make quotations on new pack, claiming that it is too risky to estimate what the cost will be. Only the best winter fruit can be put into cans and it would seem that the right goods cannot be got under $3.00 a barrel. Paying this figure it is difficult to see how goods can be turned out at less than $2.50, while some packers talk of $2.75.

Evaporated apples have not yet found their level either. Most packers have been asking 9½¢. by the carload, but values are gradually settling about 9¢. Wholesalers are asking 10 to 10½¢.

Dried apples are worth 6½¢. by the carload in Montreal.

THE AUSTRALIAN TARIFF AND THE CANADIAN PREFERENCE.

AUSTRALIA'S long-expected new tariff has at last been brought down, having been submitted to the Federal House of Representatives on October 8 by the Minister of Trade and Commerce.

The average ad valorem duties are 18.7 per cent. And, while the maximum ad valorem duty is 25 per cent., some of the composite and fixed duties will, it is said, reach 100 per cent. Excluding narcotics and alcohol, it is estimated that the remainder of the duties will average 30 per cent.

The rates of duty, according to the cable information, are as follows:

|                                |                                     |

| Galvanized and corrugated iron | 30s. per ton.                       |
| Agricultural machinery         | 15 per cent.                        |
| Sparkling wines                | 12s. per gal.                       |
| Other wines, bottled           | 8s. "                               |
| in bulk                        | 6s. "                               |
| Tobacco, manufactured          | 3s. 6d. per lb.                     |
| Leaf tobacco, imported         | 1s. 6d. per lb.,excise 1s.      |
| Cigars                         | 6s. 6d. and 15 p.c. ad valorem. |
| Cigarettes                     | 6s. 6d.                             |
| *Sugar, imported               | £6 per ton.                         |
| Cottons and linens             | 10 and 15 p. c.                     |
| Furniture                      | 20 per cent.                        |

*Excise £3 with a rebate of £2 if grown by white labor alone.

In order to encourage the development of the iron and steel industry, a system of bonuses similar to those existing in Canada is proposed. In his tariff speech the Minister of Trade and Commerce said the bonus on pig iron would be 12s. per ton when made from Australian ore and 8s. when from foreign ore. On steel ingots, when 50 per cent. of Australian ore is used, the bonus will be 12s. The bonus will be given from July 1902.

These figures approximate pretty closely to the amount of the Canadian bonus on iron and steel. Turned into decimal currency 12s. would be $2 92. Now, our bounty is $3 per ton on pig iron made from Canadian ore, and $3 per ton on steel ingots made from ingredients of which not less than 50 per cent. of their weight consists of pig iron made in Canada.

One feature in which the Australian bounty differs from the Canadian is that the former will only be paid to works which produce over 100,000 tons annually, while the maximum quantity on which a bonus will be paid will be 150,000 tons. Besides the bonuses already noticed there is one of 25 per cent. to be given on machinery, which in the case of approved reapers and binders will begin at once.

Although we have so far but little information regarding the tariff it is undoubtedly protectionist in principle. It is not evidently as pronouncedly so as that of the United States, which averages over 50 per cent. but it appears to be rather more strongly protectionist than that obtaining in Canada.

Canadians can scarcely be uninterested in the Australian tariff, from the very fact that it affects articles which they export to that country. Our export trade to Australia has not developed to the extent it was hoped it would, its value during each of the four years ending June 30, 1900, being as follows: 1897, $1,422,426; 1898, $1,649,320; 1899, $1,527,810; 1900, $1,653,173. Anything, therefore, that will tend to decrease rather than increase that trade, we can scarcely afford to view with equanimity.

Our chief exports to Australia during the last three years were as follows:

|                         | CHIEF EXPORTS TO AUSTRALIA. |           |            |

Up to the present the tariff of New South Wales was practically on a free trade basis, and as such was one of the British colonies specially mentioned in the Canadian Customs tariff as entitled to the preferential rebate of 33⅓ per cent. of the duty. The question now arises: Does the new Australian tariff place the products of New South Wales without the pale of the preferential tariff? The Act provides that the preference may be extended to "any other British colony or possession the Customs tariff of which is, on the whole, as favorable to Canada as the British preferential tariff is to such colony or possession."

It is evident from what can be gathered from the cabled report of the Australian tariff that it is not as favorable to "Canada as the British preferential tariff" is to New South Wales. It is to be hoped, however, that the Governments of the two chief

"British Dominions beyond the seas" will arrive at same reciprocal arrangement whereby the removal of the Canadian preference on the products of New South Wales may be obviated.

Here is another matter for the attention of the Canadian Trade and Commerce Department.

BARBADOES MOLASSES.

THE situation in Barbadoes molasses is quite interesting on account of the divergent influences which are a work. The larger crop this year naturally means lower prices than those which ruled last year, jobbers in Montreal now selling at 29c. per gallon that which last year realized 35 to 36c. per gallon.

Were it not for other counteracting influences, it is probable the present price would be lower than it is.

When prices in any commodity fall below a certain point they usually stimulate the consumption. This is the experience this campaign in Barbadoes molasses. And it has been particularly so on United States account. For example, that country last year took from 1,200 to 1,500 puncheons, while this year its quota was 10,000 to 15,000 puncheons. In one cargo alone which went to Savannah this year there were 1,000 puncheons. The United States' chief supply of molasses usually comes from Porto Rico.

Shipments into Montreal this year, on the other hand, are smaller than last year, being only about 10,000 puncheons compared with 12,000 to 13,000 in 1900. As a consequence, stocks there are much lower than they were a year ago. It will be noticed by our St. John, N.B., market report this week that a shipment is on the way from that city to Montreal. Last year about 10,000 barrels of New Orleans molasses—about equal to 3,000 puncheons—were sold in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, but the low price of the Barbadoes article has precluded that being repeated this year.

Besides the price-steadying influences noted, it must be remembered that hog products are dear, and that jams and fruits are in lighter supply than usual. Then there are the higher figures ruling on glucose products to be taken into consideration as well.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

If any reader wishes to know where any article can be purchased in Canada or abroad, a letter to the Editor will probably place him in communication with the seller.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, October 17, 1901.

GROCERIES.

TRADE conditions continue on the whole fairly good, although nothing specially new has developed during the week. Canned vegetables are only selling in small quantities, but taking it all around there is a fair quantity moving, while prices rule firm. Canned salmon is also in good demand. The tea market is in a good condition, as far as prices are concerned, all descriptions being firm in price. There is not a great deal being done in coffee, but prices rule firm. Currants are meeting with a good demand and Valencia raisins are quiet and rather easier in price in the primary market. There is just a moderate business being done in spices, rice and tapioca. The demand for sugar is without improvement, and although the raw markets are firm there is not much likelihood of higher prices on the refined article.

CANNED GOODS.

There is practically nothing new in the situation. There is a good sorting-up demand for small lots of tomatoes, peas, corn and beans, the ruling prices still being 85 to 90c. for tomatoes, 82½c. up for peas, and 80c. up for corn. There are still a few odd lots of old tomatoes being offered. These are gradually being cleaned up however. Some of the wholesalers report a good business in canned vegetables and fruits for shipment to the northern lakes. A large trade is being done in jams and jellies, and at least some of the manufacturers are working overtime. Very little attention is being paid to canned meats. A good movement is being experienced in canned salmon. The low prices at which good sockeye fish is being sold are stimulating business. Although there is so much canned salmon of first-class quality to be had at moderate prices there is quite a little inferior low-priced goods being offered. The demand, however, is largely for the better class of fish, at $1.25 to $1.30 for northern sockeye, and for Fraser River sockeye at $1 42½ in 5 case lots and over, and $1.45 for less quantities. Cohoes run from $1.05 to $1.15, according to quality, and pink salmon at 95c. to $1.

COFFEE.

The market for Rio coffees rules strong, and prices are fully ½c. per lb. higher in the primary market than they were a month ago. The high price is being maintained in spite of the heavy receipts at the coffee centres in Brazil. Local wholesalers are holding off on account of the excited condition of the market. The retail trade is moderate. We quote: Green Rios, No. 7, 7¼c. per lb.; No. 6, 8c.; No. 5, 8½c.; No. 4, 9¼c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The position in both syrups and molasses is much about the same as a week ago, the demand only being moderate for both. We quote corn syrup in bbls., 3¼c.; in ½-bbls., 3¾c.; 3½c. in kegs; 3 gal. pails, $1.50; 2-gal. pails, $1.10. Syrups run all the way from 30 to 37c., according to quality. Arrivals of molasses at New Orleans continue light, and they are expected to continue so until the end of the month.

See pages 31 and 32 for
Toronto, Montreal, and St.
John prices current.

SPICES.

There is just the usual moderate seasonable trade being done. Prices rule firm in the primary markets.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

There is a steady demand for both rice and tapioca, and prices both at home and abroad rule much as before. Foreign rice rules firm. We quote: B rice, 3¼ to 3¾c.; Japan, 5½ to 6c.; tapioca, 4¼ to 4¾c. Pearl tapioca rules firm in the outside markets.

SUGAR.

There has not been much change in the sugar situation during the past week. The raw markets have ruled steady to firm, although no actual advances have taken place. Refined sugars, both in Germany and the United States, are in very little demand. No change has been made in prices in either country, and should the price of raw in the United States appreciate it is not likely that the refined article will follow, as the margin between centrifugals and granulated is now $1.10 per 100 lb., which insures the refiner a good profit. One of the features of the situation in the United States last week was an advance of 1c. per lb. on granulated sugar at the Missouri river points. It will be remembered that a week or two ago, in order to fight the beet-sugar industry, the Trust reduced its price at the Missouri river points to 3½c. With the recent advance the price is now 4½c. While the low price ruled large sales were made. The meltings last week were 30,000 tons and the receipts 34,255 tons. The total stock in the four United States ports at the end of last week was 163,615 tons, against 46,790 tons at the corresponding date last year.

TEAS.

There has been a little more disposition on the part of wholesalers to operate in Japan teas, but only a few transactions have taken place, as they are not willing to pay the prices asked. The market in Japan is firm at the present figures, and the third-crop teas are showing comparatively better value than the early teas. Very few teas, it appears, are this year being sent to Canada on consignment. This is not surprising, in view of the poor results that were experienced last year. The situation in regard to Indian and Ceylon teas also continues firm. Although a better feeling exists on the local markets, wholesalers are only buying for immediate requirements, hoping that better prices will rule later. It is worthy of note that Indian teas are just now at their best, being September manufacture, when the leaf is full of sap and flavory. The kinds of tea mostly wanted here just now are medium Pekoes and Pekoe Souchongs. Stocks of tea on the local market appear to be gradually diminishing, as far as we can gather. There are still some old teas on the spot, however, which are not without their influence on the market on new and better quality teas. There is a little inquiry for Ceylon green teas, and a few are being offered, but sellers refuse to accept the bids which are offered. China greens are still scarce and firm, and 1½ to 2c. dearer than at the beginning of the season.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

CURRANTS—There have been no further changes in prices in the primary market since last week, but the market there continues to rule firm. Since the advance took place there has been a little more buying on importation account, although not in large quantities. Wholesalers report a fairly active demand for new currants on spot at 7½ to 8c. for cleaned Filiatras; 8 to 8½c. for Patras, and 8½ to 9½c. for Vostizzas. For November delivery wholesalers quote cleaned fruit as follows: Fine Filiatras, 6c.; Patras, 6½c., and Vostizzas, 8½c.

VALENCIA RAISINS—The Valencia raisin market is rather easier, there having been a decline of 1s. per cwt. in Denia. The lower prices have somewhat stimulated buying, the wholesalers evidently thinking it their only chance to order fruit and get it here before Christmas. The demand on retail account for goods in stock is only light, and the ruling prices at which sales are being made is 6½ to 7c. for fine off-stalk and 7 to 7½c. for selected. For the little old fruit on the market 3½c. per lb. is being quoted for fine off stalk and 4c. for selected. Futures to arrive in three or four weeks are quoted at 6½c. for selected and 6c. for fine off-stalk.

SULTANA RAISINS—A number of small orders on importation account are reported, but none of them are of importance, and the purchases are chiefly confined to the cheaper grades.

PRUNES—The demand is still only light, with quotations as before. We quote new Californian prunes: 100-110's, 5c.; 90-100's, 5½ to 6¼c.; 80-90's, 6½ to 7c.; 70-80's, 6¾ to 7¼c.; 60-70's, 7½ to 8c.; 50-60's, 8 to 8½c.; 40-50's, 8¾ to 10c. French, 100's, 3½ to 4c.

FIGS—There is very little being done. Four-rowed Elemes in 10 lb. boxes are being quoted at 10c. and 1 lb. glove boxes at 9c.

GREEN FRUITS.

There is still a moderate business doing on the Toronto street market. A few pears, peaches and grapes are still arriving, and are readily sold. Foreign fruits are having a larger sale. Cape Cod cranberries, sweet potatoes, Jamacia oranges and bananas continue plentiful and are in excellent demand. Malaga lemons and grapes have arrived this week and are good sellers. Californian lemons are also selling well. The apple market shows a strengthening tone, from $3 to $3.50 being the general quotation for best varieties. We quote prices as follows: Pears, 20 to 40c. per basket; peaches, 30 to 60c.; apples, 25 to 40c.; tomatoes, 25 to 35c.; peppers, 25 to 50c.; grapes, in 10 lb. baskets, Niagaras, 17½ to 20c., and 20 to 25c. for Delawares and Rogers; quinces, 30 to 40c. per basket; muskmelons, 25 to 35c. per crate of 12; bananas, $1.75 for 1st and 75c. to $1 for eight-hands, Malaga grapes are $6.50 to $7.50. Malaga lemons are offering at $3.75 to $4 per box, and Californian lemons at $5 per box; Jamacia oranges are $6 per bbl. or $4 to $4.25 per box; Cape Cod cranberries, $8 per bbl.; Ontario cranberries, $6 per bbl.; pine apples, $3.50 per case.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

EGGS—The market continues firm. The supply is fully up to the average, but as fresh arrivals come on a well-cleaned market they are soon absorbed. The general prices asked for cases of selected new-laid is 18c., while fresh gathered range from 15 to 16c. Cold-stored eggs sell readily at 14 to 16c., and limed eggs at 14 to 15c. per doz.

BEANS—The market is steady. There is a good trade doing, particularly with lumber camps, at last week's quotations, $1.75 to $1.80 for prime pea beans.

HONEY—A good trade is doing. Prices are unchanged. We quote: 9 to 10c. for extracted clover and $2 to $2.25 for No. 1 clover comb.

DRIED APPLES—Trade in evaporated apples is beginning to open up, and last week's quotations fairly cover the situation, new stock selling at 9c. for carlots and 10c. for cases. Dried apples are not offering, but nominal quotations range from 5½ to 6½c.

POTATOES—The market is slightly higher on cars. Cars are selling fairly well at 55c. per bushel on track Toronto. Small lots are in active request at 65 to 65c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

BUTTER—There is a good demand for fresh dairy butter of strictly choice quality, and tubs of this class are 1c. higher, but there is too much held butter of all grades of quality. Creamery makes are in good demand at steady prices. We quote: Dairy prints, 16 to 17c.; best tubs, 15 to 16c.; poor to medium grades, 12 to 14c.; creamery prints, 21 to 21½c.; boxes, 19 to 20c.

CHEESE—The break noted last week has left the market dull and unsteady. The export demand is moderate, and, as large stocks are held here, export buyers are exceedingly cautious and are trying to force a further decline at country boards, where prices are now ½c. lower than a week ago. Local jobbing prices are unchanged at 9½ to 9¾c.

POULTRY AND GAME.

DRESSED POULTRY—Chickens are in excellent demand. The inquiry for other lines is steadily increasing. Prices are unchanged. We quote: Chickens, 40 to 60c. per pair; hens 30 to 50c. per pair; ducks, 50 to 75c. per pair; geese, 7 to 8c. per lb.; turkeys, 10 to 11c. per lb.

LIVE POULTRY—The Canadian Produce Co., 36 and 38 Esplanade east, Toronto, will pay until October 24 for spring chickens, not less than two lb. each, 6c. per lb. For ducklings, 5c. per lb. For hens (including last year's birds) 3c. per lb. These prices are for live weight on arrival. Crates shipped free and express paid up to 50c. per 100 lb. of chickens.

GAME—There is a good demand, and as the offerings are moderate prices are firm. We quote: Teal and butterballs, 25 to 30c.; pintails and redheads, 50 to 60c.; black ducks, 75c. to $1 per brace.

FISH.

The demand for oysters is improving, as is also the sale of both fresh and smoked fish. The reports of a short catch of both cod and herring have been confirmed, so prices of these fish, whether fresh, dried or tinned, will probably continue firm this season. We quote as follows: Fresh fish—Codfish, 6 to 8c.; whitefish, 6½ to 7½c.; trout, 6½ to 7½c.; halibut, 8c.; sea salmon, 13 to 15c.; haddock, 8c.; herring, 5c.; perch, 4c.; British Columbian salmon, 20c. Smoked fish—Ciscos, $1 to $1.25 per basket; finnan haddie, 7 to 8c. per lb. Digby herring, 75 to 80c. per bundle. Prepared fish—Dried cod, in 112 lb. bundles, $4.75 per cwt.; flitched cod, $5 to $5.25; boneless cod, in bricks, 5 to 5½c. per lb.; steak cod, 6½c. per lb.; shredded cod (2 doz. in box), $1.80 per box; boneless fish, loose, in 25-lb. boxes, 4 to 4½c., and 5-lb. boxes, 5c. per lb. Oysters—Standards, $3.75 per small pail or $1.50 per Imperial gallon; selects, $2 per Imperial gallon.

VEGETABLES.

Sales of all lines are large. Parsnips are now freely offered. Cabbage, both red and white, are lower. Gherkins and cucumbers are done. We quote as follows: Carrots, parsnips and beets, 20c. per peck; turnips, 15 to 20c. per peck; lettuce, 20 to 30c. per doz.; radishes, 30 to 40c.; watercress, mint and parsley, 20c.; cauliflower, $1.25 to $1.50; celery, 40 to 60c.; red cabbage, No. 1, 5 to 10c.; cabbage, 25 to 40c.; corn, 6 to 10c.; tomatoes, 25 to 30c. per basket; pickling onions, 30 to 40c. per peck; dry onions, $1 per bush.; potatoes, 60 to 65c. per bush.; egg plant, 30 to 35c. per basket; Hubbard squash, 10 to 30c. each; vegetable marrow, 5 to 15c. each; pumpkins, 10 to 25c. each; citrons, 15c. each.

GRAIN, FLOUR AND BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAIN—Prices are steady throughout. Manitoba No. 1 hard is quoted at 79c. grinding in transit, or 77c. Toronto and west. Ontario wheat is quoted at 65 to 66c. at outside points, middle freights. Deliveries on the local street market are fairly large. The receipts of barley show a great range of quality, and prices cover a correspondingly wide range. We quote: Wheat, white and red, 68 to 73½c.; goose, 65½ to 67c.; oats, new, 40c.; rye, 54c.; barley, 47 to 57½c.; peas, 65 to 70c.

FLOUR — The demand shows some improvement, but there is no change in prices. We quote on track, Toronto (bags included) as follows: Manitoba patents, $4; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.60; Ontario patents, $3.50 to $3.60; straight roller, $3.

BREAKFAST FOODS—There is an excellent movement. We quote: Standard oatmeal and rolled oats, $3.50 in bags, and $3.60 in bbls.; rolled oats, $4.20 in bags, and $4.30 in bbls.; rolled wheat, $2.15 in 100-lb. bbls.; cornmeal, $3.50; split peas, $4.50; pot barley, $4.55.

HIDES, SKINS AND WOOL.

HIDES—There is a good demand. Prices are unchanged throughout. We quote: Cow-hides, No. 1, 8c.; No. 2, 7c.; No. 3, 6c. Steerhides are worth 1c. more. Cured hides are quoted at 8½ to 9c.

SKINS — There is a fair movement. Prices are unchanged. We quote: No. 1 veal, 8-lb. and up, 9c. per lb.; No. 2, 8c.; dekins, from 55 to 60c.; culls, 20 to 25c.; lambs and pelts, 55c.

WOOL—There is not much doing. Our quotations are: Combing fleece, washed, 12 to 12½c., and unwashed, 7½ to 8c.

SEEDS.

A few samples of alsike clover seed of superior quality have come in, and as high as $6 to $7 has been paid for these, but other lots, inferior in quality, have been bought from $6 down. Red clover is in good request at $4.60 to $4.75 for the finest seed, suitable for exporting, and at $4.25 to $4.50 for medium qualities, which would have to be kept over till the spring trade.

MARKET NOTES.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

MONTREAL, October 17, 1901.

GROCERIES.

THE trade is now drawing on to the busiest time of the year. Large importations of jams pickles, liquors; in fact, bottles and cans of all kinds are now being received and at the same time shipped so that the retailer will have his stock before the close of navigation. Canned goods are taking on a more engaging aspect this week by the announcement of at least one large house that they are sold out of new pack of tomatoes and cannot replace their brand. It seems now that the Americans at Rochester have been carrying off a part of our tomato crop. Not only are canned tomatoes firm, but all those goods, such as ketchup, into which tomatoes enter, are also strong. The market for all kinds of tea is strong and there is a better demand than there has been for months. Spices are all firm with pepper back to its old level. Currants are a little higher this week and Valencia raisins somewhat lower, but prices for spot goods are unchanged. New figs and peels are now in stock. On account of the short crop of corn all coarse grains are firm; rolled oats and bolting pens are consequently advancing. Evaporated and gallon apples are very high.

SUGAR.

There is nothing new to report in regard to sugar, except that it is now the opinion of the best informed that the market for raw sugar has "grounded." At present the London market wavers about 7s. 7d. for October raw beet, a point only 1d. higher than the lowest point that was touched. Whether the situation has found its level is a matter of opinion, but at present there is no great confidence displayed. The local demand is fair at unchanged quotations. Refined is worth $1.30 for granulated and $3.15 to $1.20 for yellows, as to grade, per 100 lb. City, 5c. extra.

TEAS.

There is a very fair demand for teas of all grades, much better, indeed, than for months past. China teas are particularly interesting just now as the market is very strong; pin head gunpowders are 20 per cent. higher than at the opening of the season. Stocks in Canada are very light, not only on account of light purchases, but also on account of recent heavy shipments to the United States. Some very fine Formosa teas have come in this week and are offered at 18 to 35c. A little block of cheap Oolong changed hands at 9 to 10c. Total shipments from China to date this year are 6,000,000 lb. behind those of last year, and are little more than half of what they were at this time in 1899. Gunpowders that were bought on the Montreal market two years ago for 12½ to 13c. cannot be secured now under 19 and 20c.

Japan teas are strong. One agent received a cablegram on Saturday advancing prices 1½c. per lb. Importers are now lamenting that stocks here are very light and local values are certain to be raised in sympathy with the primary market. Japan houses are having trouble in getting quality on fourth crop teas and this seems to be the cause of the general advance.

Latest mail advices on Ceylon black teas say that there was a strong demand and prices hardened all round, common kinds showing ½d. per lb. advance, medium ¼d. per lb., and fine teas ¼d. to 1d. per lb. Medium grades of Pekoe occasionally showed a little weakness, but on the whole sold well, and sustained the advance of the previous week. The demand for Indian teas has also been good, the feature of the market being the hardening tendency for common leaf teas and strong, dark liquoring Pekoes and Pekoe Souchong kinds, as well as broken generally.

SYRUPS.

The market for syrups is steady with good sales during the past week. We quote: 3½c. in bbls.; 3½c. in ½ bbls.; 3½c. in ¼ bbls.; $1.50 in 38½ lb., and $1.10 in 25-lb. pails.

CANNED GOODS.

The feature of the canned goods market is the strengthening tone gathering around tomato values. This week one house is sold out of its standard brand and is unable to procure any more of the new pack. We are creditably informed that up to October 1 only 219,000 cases of tomatoes were packed in Canada against 387,000 cases last year, and the packing is practically over. Of the 219,000 cases controlled by The Dominion Syndicate, 170,000 cases are already sold. We know of a block of 5,000 cases that were sold to Americans last week at a good price f.o.b. factory, a price that would indicate a rising market. The tomato crop in the United States has been very short and Rochester packers, at least, have been busily engaged buying Trenton and Picton tomatoes. One boat carried over 6,000 cases across the lake. It is said that ketchups and preparations containing tomatoes will advance in sympathy; in fact, one Rochester house has already advised the trade here that they have advanced their ketchup prices by 15 to 25c. a case. Heinz has withdrawn his tomato goods from the market for the present, so say the agents here.

Sales of canned goods during the past week have been heavy. Tomatoes are obtainable at 82½ to 87½c.; corn, at 80 to 82½c., and peas, 80 to 95c. We understand that wholesalers have so far bought corn very lightly.

Salmon remains very quiet, the trade resting on their oars, awaiting developments. Prices are unchanged both here and at the Coast. Kipperd herring is now being delivered at $1 per dozen for domestic, $1.50 to $1.60 for plain foreign, and $1.10 to $1.50 with tomato sauce.

This week there has been revealed a startling scarcity of blueberries and certain firms have advanced their prices 10c. per dozen; a fair quotation now would be 87½c. Pumpkins are also scarce, being quoted at 87½c. Gallon apples have advanced very materially and although sales are being made at lower prices, $2.75 would be a fair quotation. Canners refuse to give quotations on new gallon apples.

SPICES.

Pepper, cassia, pimento and cloves are in brisk demand and a good spice business is looked for right up to Christmas. Values are firm in all grades. We quote as follows: Nutmegs, 35 to 65c. per lb., as to size; Penang mace, 45 to 50c. per lb., as to quality; pimento, ground, 12½ to 15c.; cloves, 15 to 25c.; pepper, ground, black, 17 to 20c., according to grade; white, 25 to 27c.; ginger, whole, Cochin, 14 to 16c.; Japan, 10c.; Jamaica, 20c.; ground, Japan, 15c.; Cochin, 16c.; Jamaica, 25c.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Tapioca is still firm and good property at present quotations. Rice remains high abroad. We quote in common line district: B rice, in bags, $3.10; in half bags, $3.15; in ¼ bags, $3.20; in pockets, $3.25. In 10-bag lots an allowance of 10c. is made. CC rice, $3 in bags; $3.05 in ½ bags; $3.10 in ¼ bags; and $3.15 in pockets. In the open territory prices are about 10c. less. Patna rice is worth 4½c. per lb., and tapioca, 3½ to 3¾c.

FOREIGN DRIED FRUITS.

VALENCIA RAISINS—The Valencia raisin market is a little lower if anything, but the change is not appreciable, and it looks as if present values would last. Considerable buying has been done during the past week for shipment on the Bellona. At time of writing the Escalona is being expected into port. New Valencias on spot are worth 6c. for fine off-stalk, 6½ to 6¾c. for selected and 7c. for 4-crown layers. Fine off-stalk on the Bellona is offered at 5½ to 5¾c., as to brand, and on the Escalona as low as 1½c.

CURRENTS—After most of the purchases have been made for this market and the goods are shipped, the market has taken an upward turn, gaining about 2s. from the lowest point. Fine Filatras are now called at 16s. 3d. c.i.f. Montreal. The Escalona fruit is offered at 5c. for fine Filatras in bbls, uncleaned, in ½ cases, 5½c.; cleaned, in ½ cases, 6c.; cleaned in 1-lb. cartons, 8c., and finest Vostizza currants, 7½ to 8c. Finest Amalias are worth 6½ to 7c.

SULTANA RAISINS—New raisins are worth 8 to 9c.

CALIFORNIAN RAISINS—Importers of loose muscatels are very much incensed over the actions of the rival factions in California who are threatening one another with all sorts of stabs in the back. As a consequence dealers here are afraid to buy and meantime the trade is passing into Spanish hands. Seeded raisins are selling fairly well at 9½ to 10c. Some old 4-crown raisins are obtainable at 7½c.

PEELS—English peels have been received this week and are selling at 9½ to 10c. for lemon; 10 to 10½c. for orange, and 14c. for citron.

FIGS—New figs are now on the market in quantity and are selling freely. In tapnets, Comadre figs are worth 3½ to 3¾c. Elene figs are worth 8 to 9½c. per lb. in 10 to 12 lb. boxes.

PRUNES—Nice orders have been taken for new prunes. To arrive prunes are worth 7½c. for 40-50's, 7½c. for 50-60's, 7c. for 60-70's, 6½c. for 70-80's, 6c. for 80-90's, and 5½c. for 90-100's. Some old 90-100's are obtainable at 4½c.

NUTS.

There is nothing startling to report in nuts. Orders are being taken freely for walnuts to arrive, while new shelled almonds are selling well on spot. Grenoble almonds are worth 10½ to 11c. to arrive. Sicily filberts, 8 to 8½c.; Tarragona almonds, 10½ to 11c., and shelled almonds, 25 to 26c. Last year's shelled walnuts are worth 16 to 17c.

GREEN FRUITS.

There have again been heavy arrivals of grapes, but the market has not been glutted. Business has been good and and were worth about \$1,000,000. This brings up the total exports to 323,108 packages against 227,193 packages for corresponding period last year, showing an increase of 106,598 packages. The market has lately lost its activity and prices have continued to decline. Fancy creamery is in fair demand at 20 $\frac{3}{4}$  to 21c., while good qualities have changed hands at 20c. Western dairy is slow sale and prices range from 14 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 16 $\frac{1}{2}$ c., as to quality.

CHEESE—There are no signs of the dullness on this article being lifted. Finest western has sold at 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ c. Previously 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ c. had been refused for this lot. Englishmen still desist from buying. We quote: Finest western, 9 $\frac{1}{4}$  to 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ c.; do Eastern, 9 to 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ c.; Quebec, 8 $\frac{3}{4}$  to 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ c.

MONTREAL NOTES.

Japan and China teas are strong. New evaporated apples are worth 10 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ c.

Scaled herrings have been reduced to 13 to 13 $\frac{1}{2}$  and 14c.

Pork has declined 50c. per bbl., and lard is down  $\frac{1}{2}$ c.

Boiling peas are scarce and are now up to $1.05 per bushel.

New Hallowee dates are quoted for very early delivery at 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ c.

Some brands of ketchup have been advanced 15 to 25c. per case.

Gallon apples are up to $2.65 to $2.75 per dozen and are going higher.

Green codfish and herrings are very scarce. Scotia herrings are worth $6 per bbl.; green codfish, No. 1, medium, $6.25 to $6.50 per bbl.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE CANADIAN GROCER.

ST. JOHN, N.B., October 17, 1901.

BUSINESS is quite good. There is a large volume of business moving, but values are somewhat unsettled. Large quantities of all lines of groceries and provisions, hypothecated goods, have during the past few weeks been sold by some of the banks to the trade below market values. This has interfered with regular importations. Outside markets on all lines have been rather firm. This will, in many cases, mean considerable profit to some houses. It means uncertainty as well, as some will cut prices and this will make it difficult to know what competition you will have to meet. Pickled fish, which are now in season, are very scarce. Prices are high.

OIL—Burning oil has a very large sale. The price is firm at the small advance of last week. The oil people now do this business direct, in the cities having tank wagons. The retailer is enabled to buy his oil lower than under the old system. A competition which the oil people had to meet is also done away with. Paint oil has a steady sale. Stocks held are light. In lubricating oils there is light business. Our sawmills are finding it difficult to get logs, and are, in many cases, closing down early. Cod and seal oil are high.

SALT—In Liverpool coarse salt, this business has changed hands. Values are rather more firmly held. Every effort is made to have orders filled when stocks are landing. There is a good demand. In Canadian fine salt, no change in values to report. More small bag salt is being used. We quote as follows: Liverpool coarse, 56 to 58c.; English factory-filled, 95c. to $1; Canadian fine, $1 per bag; cheese and butter salt bulk, $2.40 per bbl.; 5-lb. bags, $2.85 to $2.90 per bbl.; 10-lb. bags, $2.70 to $2.75 per bbl.; 20 lb. wood boxes, 22c. each; 10 lb. wood boxes, 14c. each; car-

CANNED GOODS—New goods continue to arrive, new peaches being received this week. Good stocks of canned goods are held here. In vegetables, tomatoes and peas are the firm lines. There seems to be enough corn. Gallon apples have advanced, and are very firmly held. Quite a quantity have been shipped west. Salmon has been very scarce, but there have been some arrivals during the week. Prices are quite firm. Lobsters are more freely offered this season. Blueberries are very short supply. Peaches, while firm, are a fair stock. Plums, cherries and raspberries are little sold. Kipperd herring and haddies tend higher. Domestic sardines are in good supply. Clams have a steady sale. American demand for this line is growing.

GREEN FRUITS—Apples are being freely received. In Nova Scotia the orchard men are making money. They have a good crop and quality is good. They are getting high prices. In the local market there is a wide range of quality, as goods that will not do for export are sent here. Many of these are sold by auction, which affects regular business. The banana business is over. It seems to cut right off with the coming of the Ontario grapes. Ontario grapes have a free sale at fair prices. A few peaches are still received. Pears are about done. Oranges sell more freely. Lemons have but fair demand. In cranberries, full figures are asked. There are quite a few native bog berries offered. Sweet potatoes have a fair sale.

DRIED FRUITS—There is but a fair business. Markets are unsettled. In Valencias, new goods came on the market last week, and further arrivals are daily expected. Market is easy and buyers talk small quantities. In Californian raisins, the market is very unsettled. Very few have yet been bought. Prices were quoted, but have been withdrawn. New seeded have not yet been offered. In prunes, fair sales have been made. Prices are quite firm. There is some old stock still held. New evaporated peaches and apricots are offered. Prices are quite high. The high prices of evaporated apples have, so far, prevented business. New currants are offered, but the market is weak. In figs, there is a good sale of new goods. Onions have a good sale at full figures. Canadian supply the market.

PRODUCE—In eggs, the market has been dull for some time, and local values have ruled low. There is a tendency to higher figures. Butter is still quite scarce and high. Western butter is quite largely sold. Some stock arriving is very good. Cheese is rather dull. There has been little snap in this line for some time.

SUGAR—At the rather lower prices there is a large business. Some foreign sugars continue to arrive, the quality of which is good. There is considerable complaint about much of the domestic sugar sold.

MOLASSES—The market is rather unsettled. There is quite a range in quality offered. Tendency seems to rather lower values. Some Barbadoes that was held here went to Montreal. Some syrup in tins is offered and has a free sale.

FISH—There is a great lack of supply, particularly of pickled herring. There is neither Bay herring nor any quantity of other grades. It is impossible to fill orders. In dry cod, while there is a fair supply, prices are very firm. There has been an American demand, particularly for large fish. Even pollock, which are not free sellers here, are very firm. Fresh fish is scarce. The one weak spot is smoked herring, which are easy. Quite full stocks are held. We quote: Large and medium dry cod, $3.50 to $3.60; small, $2.50 to $2.60; haddies, 4½ to 5½c.; smoked herring, 9 to 10c.; fresh haddock and cod, 2½c.; boneless fish, 4 to 5c.; pollock, $1.50 to $1.60 per 100 lb.; pickled herring, $2.25 to $2.35 per half bbl.; Canso herring, $5.50 per bbl.; kippered herring, $1 per box; Shelburne, $2.50 per half bbl.

FLOUR, FEED AND MEAL—Flour shows no change, but there is a feeling favoring rather lower values. In oatmeal, new stock comes to hand very slowly. Prices are very high. Oats are high and not freely offered. Cornmeal is high, but sells quite freely. Beans are quite freely offered, and prices tend lower. Barley and peas are high, but there is only a fair demand. We quote as follows: Manitoba flour, $4.60 to $4.70; best Ontario, $3.90 to $4.00; medium, $3.60 to $3.70; oatmeal, $4.50 to $4.60; cornmeal, $2.85 to $2.90; middlings, $2.2 to $2.3; oats, 45 to 48c.; hand-picked beans, $2.00 to $2.10; prime, $1.90 to $1.95; yellow eye beans, $2.80 to $3.00; split peas, $4.50 to $4.55; barley, $4.10 to $4.25; hay, $12 to $14.

Mr. de B. Carritte, representing Paterson-Downing & Co., New York, has taken over the Liverpool salt business formerly done by Merritt Bros. & Co., and has placed R. Max McCarty, formerly with Merritt Bros. & Co., in charge of this branch of their business.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, October 11, 1901.

THE fine weather of last week proved short-lived, and by Wednesday the threshers were once more silent, owing to heavy rain and up to date it has been impossible to resume. There is no disguising the fact that the long and heavy rains have seriously injured all of the grain that was in stock, and in many instances where stacks were not well built, it is little better. It is now admitted that Manitoba's bonanza crop is likely to net her farmers little more than an average good crop, owing to shrinkages in values from rain. In spite of these discouragements business has been good throughout the week, although collections have been slow.

WHEAT—Saturday's market closed at 69½c. for Fort William for No. 1 hard and 66½c. for No. 1 Northern and 62½c. for No. 2 Northern. While wheat at country points has shown small deliveries and prices have been 58c. on a standard rate (15c.) of freight, considerable damp, tough wheat has been offered and this has brought as low as 42c.

"Imperial" Vinegar

tickles the palate—'tis not strange: people will pay more for cream than skimmed milk.

THE CHARACTER and individuality of Imperial are indisputed facts, sustained by the testimony of hundreds of reputable merchants. Think of it! A buyer cannot expect clear, sparkling, fine-flavored goods to be as low-priced as the vague and puzzling mixtures stenciled "vinegar."

Our sale this year is a triumph of quality over inferiority and low price. All other makers of vinegar steadily fall short of the standard we have set for them.

firm with upward tendency, although at present prices are unchanged. We quote: Ogilvie's Hungarian Patent, $2; Glenora Patent, $1.85; Alberta, $1.65; Manitoba, $1.50; Imperial XXXX, $1.15; Lake of the Woods, "Five Roses," $2; Red Patent, $1.85; "Medora," $1.45; XXXX, $1.15.

CEREALS—It is now generally admitted that an agreement has been arrived at among the Manitoba oatmeal mills whereby the price of rolled oats will be maintained at $2.20 for 80-lb. sacks; $1.12½ for 10-lb. sacks and 51½c. for 20-lb. sacks. Standard and granulated, $2.70 for 98-lb. sacks. The quality is very fine. Split peas are in moderate demand at $2.50; barley, pot, $2 to $2.40; pearl, $3.75. Beans are decidedly lower. One house quotes them as low as $2.25, but generally they are quoted at from $2.35 to $2.40. The reason for the decline seems to be that the price ran up to such exorbitant figures there were few buyers, and prices tumbled accordingly. It is quite possible there may be an advance on present figures later in the season. Cornmeal continues firm at $1.70 to $1.80 per 98 lb.

SUGARS—Sugars remain without change for the week although indications pointed to a possible decline in sympathy with the cut in San Francisco, but to date Canadian refiners have held firm and it would appear now as if no material change were likely to take place. We quote: Extra granulated, $5.05; bright yellows, $4.30; lumps, $6.50 to $6.75; powdered, $6.75; extra ground, $6.50.

SYRUPS—Nominal demand at following quotations: Glucose, 3¼ to 3½c. per lb., according to size of package; extra bright, 3 to 3½c. per lb.; medium, 2¾ to 3c.

MOLASSES—Barbados, 55 to 57½c. per gal.; Porto Rico, 45 to 46c. per gal.; New Orleans, 35 to 38c.

CANNED GOODS—The advance in vegetables is maintained and from present indications it would appear that the Syndicate intend to force prices up still further. It is questionable whether the outcome will be such as to justify an advance. Buyers here are extremely skeptical as to the result of the corner. The feeling here is that when vegetables were selling at reasonable prices, the figures were more than double what they are likely to be under existing conditions. In the meantime the large range of brands offered and the variations in quotations by the different houses make the giving of anything like a reliable scale all but impossible. In canned fruit the situation remains unchanged. A shortage in strawberries and raspberries is still reported. There is, however, no doubt in the minds of some that these goods are simply being held back for higher figures, which the knowing ones declare will never be reached.

EVAPORATED AND DRIED FRUITS—New evaporated apples arrived this week. The quality is fine; price, 11½c. Dried are offering rather more freely at 6¾ to 7c. Apricots are firm at 12½ to 13½c. Peaches are also firm at 10 to 10½ for unpeeled and 15 to 16c. for peeled. Currants have stiffened considerably and the new goods, shortly to arrive, will be higher than was anticipated last week. Receipts of new raisins are now fairly large. The price for the present remains at $2.25 for fine off-stalk. New Hall-owee dates which are due to arrive about the end of the month will open at 6 to 6½c. per lb. New figs will hardly arrive before the second week in November. Reports indicate an especially choice crop.

RICE—Buyers are awaiting with interest reports as to the new crop. Likelihood seems to be that prices will open about the same as last year.

FISH—Small quantities of finnan haddies are now arriving by express and jobbing at 12½c. Bloaters are offering, but from American points, and at prices too high for buyers here. New Loch Fyne herrings are in and selling at $1.25 for kegs and $2.10 for firkins. Labrador herrings, in half bbls., $3.75; sealed, 20c. per box.

GREEN FRUITS—A further shipment of British Columbia plums has been received and sold on this market. They were from the Okanagan, and came through in fair shape. Snow apples have arrived and are selling at 86; other apples, $1 to $1.50, according to variety and condition. Advices from Ontario indicate that there will be few more shipments of grapes to come forward and for these higher prices will be asked. Present quotations are: Concord, 27½c. per basket; Niagaras, 30c.; Rogers, 10c.; Cape Cod cranberries, $9 per bbl.; Washington plums, $1.25 per crate, and another week will see them pretty well cleared up. Lemons are $5.50 to $6 per crate; oranges slow and without change at $5.50. New comb honey is on the market: Best white clover, $2.40 per doz.; strained, in 6-lb. tins, 12½c.; 1 lb. glass jars, $2.25 per doz.

BUTTER—Creamery is offering very freely; prices, 17½ to 18c. factories according to grade; dairy butter, fresh made sweet dairy is limited in supply while the demand is active. Prices range from 14 to 16c. for the best and from 13 to 10 for inferior grades.

CHEESE—A good deal has changed hands during the week and at fair prices, 8½c. for large and 9c. for small having been paid in Winnipeg.

Among the visitors in the city last week was Mr. Robert Vick, of George Vick & Sons, Orillia, Ont., millers, bakers, confectioners and pork packers. This was Mr. Vick's first visit to the West, and it was a pleasure and business trip combined.

CANNED GOODS IN LONDON.

THE consumptive demand for salmon at this time of the year has been well sustained, which is not surprising when the relative value of salmon as a food is taken into consideration. Retail prices have been gradually reduced, and are now, except in a few instances, in a line with the wholesale. The market at the close is decidedly steadier for certain grades, but importers are anxious to keep prices near their present basis, and this should help consumption considerably. Although there is not at this season of the year a large consumptive demand for sardines, fine quality fish can now be bought at a price which is unlikely to be repeated later on. Fishing continues on the French coast during November, but the most reliable packers prefer to fill their contracts by the end of October, the fish after this date being more or less out of condition. Choice lobsters are in small supply and full prices are asked for the few lots still remaining on the market. There is a slight improvement in the demand for tomatoes, and valuations are rather dearer both on the spot and to arrive. Gallon apples are also more inquired for, but the high prices asked by packers for the new pack on account of the short crop is checking business.—Produce Markets' Review.

Reporting on figs, mail advices from Liverpool state: "There is a decidedly firmer tone, and although the amount of business is not large, it is in consequence of the higher demands of holders, who are confident that the position warrants a much better range of prices, which should soon be realized."

TEA IN CEYLON.

A. Odell & Co.'s Ceylon market report under date of Colombo, September 7, says:

About 23,900 packages have been offered since our last, of which 19,640 passed the hammer at an average of 37 cents. The market remains very firm, and all fine grades were in good demand and showed an advance of 4 to 6 cents. Medium kinds remained firm at previous prices. The quality continues very good. Shipments for August to the United Kingdom were 6 million lb. and we are estimating shipments for September at 6 million lb. The chamber of commerce quote shipments from January 1 to September 2, 1901:

TEA TRADE FOR SEPTEMBER.

Harrison's & Crosfield's tea market report for September, in part, says: "The steady appreciation of values in the tea market during September seems to call for more than a mere passing notice. To the superficial observer an explanation is forthcoming in the resumption of business up and down the country after the holiday season. But the real reason will probably be found in a careful consideration of the subjoined figures relating to available supplies. The overproduction of low-grade teas last season depressed the market from week to week until prices reached an unprecedentedly low level. Now, however, a variety of influences have combined to shorten supplies from all the producing districts simultaneously and at the same time to improve the quality. The trade have, therefore, been encouraged to secure fair working stocks, having confidence in the quality, and in the assurance that they had a steady market in front of them.

CURRANTS IN LONDON.

Arrivals of currants continue to be on a very small scale, only one further cargo of 800 tons, per Hector, having arrived this week. In consequence of the paucity of supply, and consequent indifferent selection, market business, so far as fruit on the spot is concerned, has been somewhat restricted, and may be expected to continue so until next week brings more liberal supplies. At the same time, duty-paid clearances show that the new fruit is being received with favor by customers. This could hardly fail to be the case, both on account of the excellent quality and reasonable price. There seems to be no probability of any heavy weight of Provincial fruit being placed on the London market for some time to come, as the greater portion of that shipped up to the present has been already disposed of in advance. It is matter for congratulation that the more or less strayed condition of the market has not been seized upon by merchants to exact high prices, which might have been the case owing to buyers finding it necessary to make immediate purchases.—Produce Markets' Review, October 5.

CANNED GOODS IN CALIFORNIA.

A despatch from San Francisco under date of October 11, says: "If the present warm weather continues next week the tomato pack will be of unusually fine quality and ample in quantity. Canned pears are not selling as well as usual. Some outside canneries are offering 75 per cent. delivery of cling peaches. Eastern buyers are demanding full delivery on all lines. The probable output of cured pears is estimated at less than 750 tons. Peaches are a little more than half a crop. The canned fruit market is quiet; only sorting up orders received. The year will go out with first-hand stocks lighter than any preceding year. Asparagus all placed. Peas very light.

OPENING PRICES ON NEW DATES.

The N. Y. Journal of Commerce Tuesday last, said: "Prices on new crop Persian dates, shipment from London ex Kurdistan, due here about November 2, were made to-day by a prominent importer on the basis of 3½c. for Hallowses, 3¼c. for Khadrawees and 3c. for Sairs. Opening prices on the new crop to arrive by direct boat and due the latter end of the month have not been made, but it is expected a basis will be fixed during the week. According to the owners of the cargo the Tabaristan is believed to have passed Gibraltar on Friday, though no definite news has been received on that head. It is stated, however, the direct boat is confidently looked for at this port on or about the 23rd. A cable from Bussorah states that the Georgisttan, the second direct steamer which is now en route, brings a cargo of 99,000 boxes, composed of 46,000 boxes Hallowses, 21,000 Khadrawees and 32,000 Sair. This vessel, according to the owners, is expected to arrive in New York at about the same time as the dates transhipped via England or Continental ports. The Tabaristan will bring 66,379 boxes of Hallowses, 18,674 boxes of Khadrawees and 11,108 boxes of Sair dates, and if here when expected will make the earliest arrival of new dates."

EARLY-CLOSING IN TORONTO.

THE proposed amendment to the Toronto by-law compelling grocery stores and butcher shops to close at 8 p.m. came up for its third reading on Monday afternoon at the meeting of the city council. Deputations representing those in favor of the amendment and those opposed to both the amendment and the present by-law, were present. The "antis" were anxious to have the matter dealt with at once and the by-law rescinded summarily. The "pros" asked that if the council were not prepared to pass the amendment that the matter be deferred for later consideration so that petitions might be prepared by both parties interested. The request of those in favor of the amendment was granted, the council agreeing to hear deputations, representing both parties, and to receive petitions re the question on Monday, October 21.

After the matter had been thus deferred in council, the "antis" held a meeting in one of the committee rooms. William Back, dry goods dealer, occupied the chair, and T. R. Dudgeon, grocer, acted as secretary. After considerable discussion it was decided, as the by-law was objectionable to them, to ask the council to rescind it entirely, and to prepare petitions signed by grocers and butchers against the by-law. It was proposed that the council be asked to submit the matter to the polls at the January elections, but it was decided not to make such a proposal as the majority of the public throughout the city was thought to be in favor of the by-law. It was also decided not to present a petition from the general public for the same reason.

THE PROVISION TRADE.

The Markets—Frozen Hogs for England—Miscellaneous Notes.

FROZEN HOGS FOR ENGLAND.

THE London Daily Mail states that frozen pigs are now being exported from New Zealand to be "home cured" for the British breakfast table. The explanation is that the world is short of pigs, and, as people still insist on eating pork, the shippers and curers are straining every nerve to reach the remotest parts where pig is sold. This is why England is buying bacon from Siberia, Russia, Denmark, Holland, Canada, the United States, Australia and a score more of her colonial friends and foreign rivals.

Hitherto this foreign bacon has always arrived in England already cured, and, since it is "mildly cured" to suit the British palate, a very large portion of the bacon sold to the householder is slightly tainted.

To prevent this, numerous attempts have been made to put the dead pig into ice and turn him into bacon on arrival in England. But the lowering of the temperature below 32 deg. Fahrenheit has invariably faded the flesh into a pale, unpleasant color and alienated the affections of the British matron.

Now, however, by what may be called a triumph of transit and cure, a most promising and important trade has begun between New Zealand and England. By employing the "Vecht" curing process, a New Zealand firm is shipping pigs from that distant colony, placing them in refrigerators with a temperature of 20 degrees Fahrenheit, and curing them here on the banks of the Thames with apparently perfect success.

This success is obtained by first treating the carcasses, before they leave New Zealand, by the "Vecht" curing process, which allays the action of the cold, and so sterilizes the flesh as to prevent the change which has hitherto interfered with the successful curing at home of what is grown abroad.

SMALL LOSSES ON MEATS.

Provision dealers should watch carefully for small losses in their meat trade. The Butcher's Advocate has started a crusade against the habitual giving away of fat and bones, and refers to two cases where retail butchers were steadily losing much more money than they suspected in this way. It says: "A well-known First Avenue butcher was asked what he thought of the idea. 'It's a good one,' he said, 'and I hope to see it succeed. Yesterday, a woman came in my shop and bought ½ lb. of bacon. She asked the man who served her for a piece of fat. He looked at me to see what to do about it, as I had been discussing The Advocate's article on the subject. I shook my head for him not to give it to her, and she paid 2c. for a piece of suet. When the boss is serving customers he doesn't give away any more than he considers necessary, but the clerks are very liberal. I give away no more fat and bones in my shop.' A Ninth Avenue butcher said: 'I am with you on the fat question, but as for bones it doesn't amount to much. About 40c. a week, probably.' We reminded him that 40c. a week amounted to over $20 a year, and he decided to quit giving away bones."

THE PROVISION MARKETS.

TORONTO.

The receipts of hogs, notwithstanding the reduction in prices on the local market for both live and dressed, have been well maintained, and prices of dressed hogs have been forced down another 50c. per cwt. Other dressed meats are unchanged in price, with a good trade doing. We quote as follows: Dressed hogs, $8 to $8.25 per cwt.; mutton, $5.50 to $6 per cwt.; lambs, 6½ to 7½c. per lb.; beef carcasses, $7.25 per cwt. for best and $6 to $7 for mediums; hind quarters, 8c. for best; fore quarters, 4½ to 5½c. for best; calves, $8.50 for best and $6 to $7 for mediums.

Live hogs have been reduced 25 to 50c. per cwt. in price during the week, owing to the liberal offerings, the quotation now being $6 to $6.25. The demand in Great Britain for Canadian provisions, particularly hams, continues keen, and prices there are well maintained. This export demand, combined with the good local trade, has prevented the accumulation of stocks on this market, and so all provisions are firmly held here. We quote: Long clear bacon, 12c. Smoked meats: Breakfast bacon, 5c.; rolls, 12½c.; small hams, 14c.; medium hams, 14c.; large hams, 13c.; shoulder hams, 12c.; backs, 15c. Barrel pork—Canadian heavy mess, $20.50; Canadian short cut, $22. Lard—Tierces, 11¼c.; tubs, 12c.; pails, 12¼c.

MONTREAL.

Although supplies are no heavier the price of hogs has sagged to $6.50 which is the lowest price for choice hogs on this market. Lard has declined ¼c. per lb. and pork is 50c. lower per bbl. Dealers have lost all confidence in the market. Cotto'ene is on the other hand higher by ¼c. We quote: Heavy Canadian short cut mess pork, $22.00; Chicago clear pork, $24.50 for heavy and $24.00 for medium; selected heavy short cut mess pork, boneless, $22.00 to $22.50; hams, 13c.; bacon, 15c.; lard, pure Canadian, $2.50 per pail; refined lard compound (Fairbank's), $2.01 for 1 to 24 pails; $2.00 for 25 to 49 pails; $1.98 for 50 pails and over; Snow White and Globe compound, $1.72½ per pail; Cottolene, 10¼c. per lb. in tierces, 11¼c. in 26-lb. pails, and 11c. in 50-lb. boxes, for Quebec.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

In pork, prices are rather easier, but there has been no change here. It is hard to tell what will be the outcome. Beef is firm. Lard continues to tend higher. Compound sells quite freely.

WINNIPEG.

The market for cured meats and lard remains firm at unchanged prices.

THE NEW ZEALAND MEAT INDUSTRY.

THE following review of the New Zealand frozen meat trade during the year 1900, as condensed from The Lyttleton Times by The National Provisioner, presents an interesting as well as comprehensive report of the situation:

The variation in the price of meat had been most perplexing. Wool had dropped to very low prices, while the tallow market had not been maintained at prices proportioned to the stocks in sight. Prices of preserved meats had been very satisfactory, owing to the war, but in these, as in the lower grades of frozen meat, the country had not been able to get the full advantages, owing to there being no facilities for direct shipment. It might be interesting to review the course of the year's operations, especially in regard to meat. It would be remembered that at the close of last season London was blocked with large and late shipments of both mutton and lamb. The London salesman held the most desponding view as to the future. It was with great difficulty that sellers could induce them to hold for reasonable prices or anticipate the better prices which they saw were sure to come. Prices were improved, and continued so for some time, but as soon as large shipments reached London in the hands of irresponsible salesmen, prices fell again much below anything that was warranted, taking into account the reduced supply at this end. It was not to be wondered that prices were not regular under the circumstances, when they compared the arrivals from New Zealand in London.

Arrivals of frozen meat in London from New Zealand during 1900, were: Mutton, 1,820,515; lamb, 1,295,359; total, 3,115,877.

Frozen meat imported into the United Kingdom from Australia and River Plate during 1900:

Australia.—Mutton, 697,868; lamb, 360,900; total, 1,058,768.

A marked contrast was the regularity of shipments from the River Plate: Mutton, 2,359,629; lamb, 2,876; total, 2,362,505.

Arrivals of frozen meat in London from Canterbury during 1900, were: Mutton, 687,670; lamb, 927,457; total, 1,615,127.

not better regulated, but it must be borne in mind that nearly all growers showed extreme impatience if their stock was not shipped straight away after being frozen, and without regard to the requirements of the market. They would notice how much care was required to work in between these extreme prices and bring out satisfactory results. There was no country or part of any country that is so well adapted as Canterbury for maintaining regular trade in mutton and lamb. While a large number of farmers considered that they should have a free hand to ship when and to whom they like, regardless of the effect on the market, or how it would effect their own or their neighbor's returns, there would not be much chance of regular prices. Fortunately the prices at the worst being spread over a large number of producers did not mean a serious item of loss individually. It was, however, disappointing that in a trade which lends itself to thorough organization better results are not attained. There was no doubt that the failure of the turnip crop greatly reduced the quantity of stock usually available, especially of mutton. There was no doubt that far too much mutton was exported towards the end of 1899, and it would have paid better to have kept more of the wethers in the country. It was doubtful whether they exported too many lambs, and the result of the year's demand in London seemed to show that if the arrivals had been somewhat more regular, the large quantity could have been taken up at satisfactory prices. A question of vital importance was, could we keep up the supply? And in this connection it was to be regretted that the Government stock returns were not available at an earlier date, and, further, that the Government did not take steps to ascertain the results of the season's lambing, so that the figures could be available before the farmer disposed of his lambs and bought his ewes and store sheep. Dealing with the stock returns for 1900, now available, it was found that the stud flocks and merino flocks had been fully maintained and showed a slight increase for the whole of New Zealand. Cross-bred flocks, which more immediately affect the freezing industry, were as follows:

|                                                 | Increase. | Decrease. |

| Lambs, 1900.....                    | 93,932  |

The total sheep in New Zealand on April 30, 1900, was 19,355,195. Of these 10,341,625 were ewes, 5,276,811 were lambs, 3,736,759 were wethers and rams. It was apparent that breeders were alive to the importance of increasing their ewe flocks, and as many run-holders were laying themselves out to carry more ewes, and fewer dry sheep, a still greater increase in breeding ewes, with a correspondingly large increase in the whole flocks, might be expected. When it is considered that there were in the colony 7,930,872 cross-bred breeding ewes, an increase of 592,664 on the previous year, while in Canterbury and Marlborough there were 2,157,897, an increase of 218,341 on the previous year, it was fully justifiable to anticipate more lambs in Canterbury than in any previous year, and that any shortage would be overtaken. Given a favorable season, the exports should be fully up to last year. There was also a large supply of ewes from which farmers could draw their supplies, and it was doubtful whether it was wise or profitable for the small farmer to do anything else than turn off his stock as soon as he could find a profitable market, leaving it to the larger holders to supply him with ewes. Canterbury, from its peculiar and special advantages of climate, had become the great fattening and finishing ground of the colony. Other districts could breed as good sheep and lambs, and it should be their aim to get as many of these as possible. It was satisfactory to note that the freezing industry had proved such a boon to the farmers, and at the present time they were obtaining high prices for their lambs. But this was not without a considerable element of danger. Less suitable districts might be tempted into the trade, while there was always a risk of diminishing consumption. Either of these meant lower prices.

Before the freezing industry was started in the country they tried boiling down; then they tried tanning, but that took too much labor and money. The freezing business had been a success, and had given employment, not only to people in Canterbury, but to every seaport in New Zealand, and had done more for the colony than any Government that had sat on the benches at Wellington.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch.

Your idea may be that all starch is starch and that your customers won't detect even a slight difference in quality. You may think that because there is a cent or two extra profit on "Mushroom" brands (that come and go), you can retain the confidence of your trade—it doesn't pay to trifle with the confidence that a customer has in you and your goods.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch is as staple as flour. In the name there is the fame of nearly half a century. In the making there is the skill of long experience combined with honesty of purpose and unequalled manufacturing facilities. Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch represents the highest type of perfection there is or can be in starch. Kegs of 100-lbs.—handsome enamelled horse-shoe tins holding 6-lbs.—handsome 1-lb. packages that give a touch of life and color and "go" to a grocer's shelves.

We are proud of our record

and we want to tell you WHY

WE commenced in the Canning business last season and placed our goods before the trade for the first time during the year 1900, and we must admit that we found it difficult to secure orders for our pack. We were not discouraged. Our goods and our brands were unknown and wholesalers and retailers were slow to buy unknown brands.

We finally sold our entire pack to a syndicate of wholesale grocers in Hamilton and Toronto. The goods were distributed throughout Canada.

Our labels, which are without doubt the handsomest in Canada, were on every can we shipped.

WHAT WAS THE RESULT ? ? ? ? ? ? ? ?

There is such a demand for our goods this season that we have been unable to fill all our orders, wholesale houses refusing to allow us to substitute other goods under old and well-known brands that have been on the market for years, stating that

They preferred our Goods and would accept no other Brand.

Where they are once sold, the CONSUMERS ask for them, the RETAILERS demand them and the WHOLESALERS must supply them.

Just a word about ..... Pork and Beans

Why are Canadians buying PORK AND BEANS shipped from the United States and paying exorbitant prices? Simply because they think they are better than the Canadian goods. We can satisfy you that our PORK AND BEANS are equal, if not superior, to the imported.

If retail grocers will kindly drop us a postal, we will mail them samples free of charge, and postage prepaid.

Empty a tin of our brand on a plate beside any other brand in America, and we have no fear of the result.

OUR PRICE is about half the price of imported brands.

Write for samples and prices, and name the wholesale house you prefer to do business through.

CEYLON AND INDIA TEA

BLACK

The merit of the Black Teas has established them high in popular estimation. They are drunk wherever the English language is spoken. They follow the flag and drive out less meritorious growths.

OR

But some consumers are wedded to light drawing kinds, with pale liquor and without the full body and richness of the black kinds.

GREEN

The Green Teas of Ceylon and India are made expressly for this trade. In Make, Quality and Price they challenge comparison with other growths.

They are grown, prepared and packed with the same skill by the British Planters who have revolutionized the black tea trade.

They have caught on in Canada and are no longer in the experimental stage. Try them.

may be that all starch is starch and that your customers won't detect even a slight difference in quality. You may think that because there is a cent or two extra profit on "Mushroom" brands (that come and go), you can retain the confidence of your trade—it doesn't pay to trifle with the confidence that a customer has in you and your goods.

Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch is as staple as flour. In the name there is the fame of nearly half a century. In the making there is the skill of long experience combined with honesty of purpose and unequalled manufacturing facilities. Edwardsburg Silver Gloss Starch represents the highest type of perfection there is or can be in starch. Kegs of 100-lbs.—handsome enamelled horse-shoe tins holding 6-lbs.—handsome 1-lb. packages that give a touch of life and color and "go" to a grocer's shelves.

Dawson

By Henry J.

As It Is

Woodside

FROM a mosquito-haunted muskeg in 1896, the city of Dawson has sprung up like magic, and is now a place of probably 7,000 inhabitants. It has broad wooden sidewalks, well-graded streets, an excellent system of drains and ditches, electric lights, telephone system, telegraph service south and north, and many fine buildings, two of them solid brick, and a great number of warehouses.

Lieut. Schwatka, passing down the Yukon river in 1883, notes that there is a fine stretch of hay land at the mouth of the Troandike river (now Klondike), which would make a good grazing place for cattle if the mosquitoes would not eat them up. The cattle graze on the side-hills now, and there are not as many mosquitoes in Dawson in summer as there are in the city of Chicago. The drainage system and civilization are too much for the northern bloodsuckers.

The town-plot proper of Dawson was what is technically called a "nigger-head muskeg," that is a stretch of soft black muck strewn with little bristly round hillocks of turf, over which a man may walk at night as freely as a drunken man walks a tight rope. It was formerly sprinkled with bushes, and along the river front grew a fringe of spruce trees. The town plot is about ten feet above the level of the river at low water. It is about a mile long, by over a quarter of a mile in width. It is bounded on the north and east by steeply sloping mountain and hillsides, on the west by the Yukon river, and on the south by the Klondike river, which comes into the Yukon at right angles from the east, from the Rocky Mountains over one hundred miles away. At the lower or northern end of the city plot, a great landslide came down the mountain, and is said to have buried a small tribe of interesting aborigines. Over their reputed grave it piled up small loose rock and gravel in high mounds and terraces, and thus made an ideal plot for dry-celled private residences, where the wives and families of Dawson citizens may look down on the Yukon river flowing from 50 to 100 feet below their piazza.

In the rest of the city the foundations of buildings are laid in trenches six feet deep, chopped down into the eternally frozen black muck. Smaller dwellings have their foundations on the frozen soil, below the upper covering of moss. When this covering of moss is removed the sun in spring and summer thaws a considerable distance into the soil, and thus gardens are formed where wanted, although the flats of the river beds and the warm hillsides are the favorite places. The climate is so dry that gardens have to be watered or irrigated. This can be done artificially.

The Klondike river has two mouths, and between them a low island, where a large sawmill is operated. Here are several fine vegetable gardens which produce luxuriantly. Beyond or south of the branches of the Klondike river is a little town plot nestling against a high hill, called by some Klondike City, but by the pioneers here the sinister name of "Lousetown." A suspension foot bridge crosses each branch of the Klondike river near its mouth, and connects Dawson with Klondike City. The latter was ambitious to become the metropolis at one time, but there was not room enough in it for the necessary number of cabins. A cabin is usually a small unpretentious log house, with enough yard in which to cut wood and throw slops; but at one time there was such an epidemic of cabin building that no ordinary townsite could accommodate the number built here. As I stumbled around the country on the Sabbath day, for a couple of summers past, and located fresh cabins in batches everywhere I went, it was my intention to lump the probable number at ten thousand, more or less, but a more careful revision of statistics keeps the number down to about one-fourth of that figure. Fires have run over the hills, and have cleaned out groups of from 10 to 40 log cabins at a time, and although they stayed cleaned out, with their contents, yet the number did not seem to be much decreased. The log buildings of the business streets, between fires and discomfort, are making way for frame and iron structures, many of them with pretentious fronts and plate-glass windows. Some of these old three-storey log buildings cost from $40,000 to $60,000 in 1897-98. They were chiefly saloons, gambling and dance houses, and their owners expected to recoup themselves within a year in the gold swim. The heart of the city was burnt over twice, in one spot thrice, and as often has the plot been rebuilt, each time better than before.

In the gold rush of 1898 Dawson became a canvas city, and the white tents gleamed all over the flats and up the hillside. In autumn everyone who could built a cabin. As it was impossible to obtain a satisfactory title to lots in much of the plot, and lots down on the flats were held at very high figures, the cabin builders had to take to the hillside, and over its top, and up the valley of the Klondike. Ornate highly decorated cabins, plain, common-place cabins, and delapidated, unsightly cabins or "shacks" fresco the whole upper landscape. They perch in all sorts of crannies and nooks, hanging by their eyebrows on the steep incline; they nestle at the foot of rocky cliffs, where masses of overhanging rock appear ready to wipe them out of existence; they sprinkle the narrow flats of the Klondike, and form an almost solid three-deep fringe along its banks for miles, wherever the banks permit of it.

These cabins cost high in work or in cash, for suitable logs were scarce and dear. But their era has passed. Many of them are being pulled down and sold for firewood. The new houses are of wood or galvanized iron. They look roomier, cleaner and lighter than the log cabin, with its chinked crevices, its mossed and earthen roof, a tremendous weight that frequently broke down with the steady strain. There was another order of buildings, unique in their beauty and grace. That was the scow cabin, built of two sections of a scow cut across the centre. One section formed the floor and half of the walls, the other the roof and remaining half of the walls, with a little insertion in the middle to make the roof high enough for a man to walk erect under it. Then there was always, until recently, a where, until opposite the lower, or northern end of the city, where the western hill slopes gently down to a flat. On the slope, West Dawson, a suburb, has sprung up. It is reached by a small steam ferry-boat in summer and by an ice trail in winter.

South Dawson is that portion of the city built on the Klondike banks, beginning where the river issues from the shadow of the cliffs, or golden gateway, and running west to where the Klondike joins the Yukon. It is about a quarter of a mile long and is separated from Dawson proper by the Government reserve. It is a rapidly growing district, and has quite a business of its own in all lines.

On the Government reserve is located the N.W.M.P. barracks, prison, police warehouses and drill square, and officers' and men's quarters. Around or near these are clustered the old court house, church. The Yukon council is preparing to erect a $25,000 central school and a building for the Yukon museum. New public buildings to the value of over $150,000 are to be erected this year, including the new court house, the administration building, the Gold Commissioner's office, commissioner's residence, and one or two others. The new post office, completed last fall, cost the very reasonable sum in this country, of $13,000, and is furnished in an up-to-date style. In it are housed the Customs officials, with an attached examining warehouse, crown timber and lands' offices, registrar's office and Government telegraph offices. It is furnished with brick vaults, and is heated with the latest hot-air appliances.

The Roman Catholic church, a lofty log structure with frame spire; St. Mary's Hospital, a three-storey building, recently enlarged, St. Mary's school, and the commissioner's residence, are located on the fringe of floating palaces or cabins on scows adorning the upper water front. In springtime, after the ice had gone out, the wide bar opposite the police barracks is covered with scows that have been built at the lower end of Lake La Berge, and have been the first to arrive with loads of fresh meat, vegetables, fruits and luxuries.

It is hard to satisfy some men, but if I had the laying out of Dawson town-plot and its environments, I would have raised the whole flat ten feet higher, removed the mountain to the southwest and placed it northwest, where it would not obscure the sun two hours before it sets, and remove a southern range of hills that prevent the sun from shining on the city for six weeks in December and January. With these trifling changes, Dawson's situation would be much improved. On the west side of the city the banks rise so steeply from the water that a cabin can hardly get foothold any-

On the Government reserve is located the N.W.M.P. barracks, prison, police warehouses and drill square, and officers' and men's quarters. Around or near these are clustered the old court house, the foundations for the new one, the residence of Government telegraph staff and architect, the Gold Commissioner's office, the residence of Judge Craig, and police hospital. The Royal wood factory, or the "woodpile," in local parlance, is located back of the barracks, and here those who fall alive into the hands of the men of the yellow stripe, for various misdemeanours, do hard labor, sawing Government wood instead of breaking stone. The woodpile is a mighty influence for morality in Dawson, and is a greater restrainer than potassium bromide. On the northern edge of the Government reserve is located the Good Samaritan Hospital, founded by Dr. Grant; the Episcopal, Presbyterian and Methodist churches, and Salvation Army barracks; also two of the schools, and the kindergarten school. These are as yet all log buildings, but the Presbyterian congregation is having plans drawn for a $12,000 terraces of the north end. The two principal hospitals of Dawson, the Good Samaritan and St. Mary's, are aided by Government or council grants, and have done a great and good work in the Klondike district.

The schools have been established from six months to a year, and are rapidly filling up with children. There are already five teachers employed. The buildings and equipment as yet are crude. The system of schools in vogue in the Northwest is followed here. The churches, although small, have been conducted by pastors of acknowledged ability, who are striving to keep pace with the growth of the country and to improve the moral tone of the community. This, although orderly and law-abiding, tolerates some things not seen elsewhere in Canada—open gambling and dance houses. These evils were very prominent and numerous, and are an importation from the Western States, but, in future, thanks to the efficiency of the police, these will be reduced to a minimum, and another cause for stumbling on the part of our miners and citizens will cease to exist. The scarlet women, who have held the whole of a long block on Fourth avenue, have been warned to vacate, and are removing to places outside the city limits.

The city, from an original front street along the river, has successively overflowed and occupied Second and Third avenues, as well as their intersecting streets, Harper, First, Second and Third streets. Fourth avenue is not wanted for business purposes, and Fifth avenue is wanted for schools and residences. The avenues run parallel to the river and the streets from it toward the hill. Sixth avenue runs along the base of the hill.

The administration of justice in Dawson is the admiration of foreigners. Canadians are naturally proud of it, but take it as a matter of course. Two judges, Mr. Justice Dugas and Mr. Justice Craig, hold territorial court, and are constantly unravelling the tangled skein of mining rights, with an occasional criminal case thrown in to add spice. The chief murder cases of Dawson have been those of dance-house women by their paramours, who have in nearly all cases been good enough to commit suicide as well. There have been half a dozen of these double tragedies. Two Indians and one white man were hanged in 1899, and a couple of white men in 1900, for murders up the Yukon river. One murderer has had his death sentence commuted to life imprisonment, and it is expected that another one will be dealt with so before the sentence is carried into effect. There were extenuating circumstances in both cases. Another man is in jail awaiting his trial for the most atrocious murder of Relfe, Clayson, and a telegraph lineman on Christmas Day, 1899. These three bodies were pushed under the ice, but contrary to its custom, the icy Yukon cast up their bodies in the spring, with the damning bullet wounds in their heads and bodies. For such a cosmopolitan country, crime is remarkably scarce.

There is a body of about 275 N.W.M.P. in the Yukon, of which 125 are in the upper, or White Horse division, and 150 in the middle Yukon or Dawson division. The whole force in Yukon is commanded by Major Z. Wood, with headquarters at Dawson. A large portion of the force is scattered along the Yukon river in detachments, and along the gold creeks. There are usually about 60 men available for service in Dawson between the downtown station and headquarters. The admirable system and conduct of this force is a matter of the greatest pride to Canadians, and it is due to them that the law is so rigorously enforced against crime, so that life and property are as safe in this city as in any other in Canada. It is a wonderful contrast to the condition of mining towns in the United States.

The Territory of Yukon is governed by a body called the Yukon Council, with limited right to legislate. The commissioner of Yukon is chairman of the council. The Government at Ottawa appoints five members, and two are elected by the British subjects. The elected members are Messrs. Wilson and Prudhomme. The council in time will become entirely elective, and will gradually merge into a Provincial Legislature. Dawson not being incorporated the council legislates for it, and the arrangement is very satisfactory to the citizens. Thanks to the energy and persistence of Commissioner Ogilvie and the council, Dawson is in such a position that a small but noisy band of "incorporators" are unable to influence public opinion in favor of incorporation, with its added expense, and vexatious problems. The News, the American newspaper here, is working hard to promote the matter, without success. The streets are well drained and graded, and are furnished with electric lights. The city is provided with an excellent fire brigade of paid members, three large steam fire engines, hook-and-ladder apparatus, double chemical, etc., and, thanks to the efficiency of Chief Stewart's men, the city has escaped this year the customary conflagration of former winters. During the winter time two of the fire engines are kept housed on the river ice with steam up all the time, ready to pump as soon as the hose is laid.

The Dawson Electric Light and Power Company is growing to be a large concern under good management. It furnishes 3,000 16-candle lamps and 300 32-candle lamps for private consumers, and 78 32-candle lamps for street lighting. The company is providing electric power for machinery in the city and on the creeks. The telephone company is another well-managed concern, having 140 telephones in the city, and 26 scattered along the creeks: also orders in for many more when they arrive over the ice. Capt. Oleson, an Orkney man, manages both of these prosperous companies. The city is supplied with the purest cold water, pumped from a well near the confluence of the two rivers. This well was sunk to a depth of 20 feet at a venture, and struck a strata of sand and gravel free from frost. The water is pumped to the surface, and is then forced through a system of iron pipes laid along the principal streets. It is kept flowing steadily, and this, with a little artificial heat, has kept the pipes free from ice all during the severe winter, although the pipes are only laid a few inches below the surface of the ground, in wooden boxes. The hydrants are covered with small houses furnished with stoves.

Dawson has a first-class hotel, The McDonald, with a capacity for 70 first-class guests, and there are several other good hotels. The city swarms with restaurants, as only a small half of the inhabitants keep house, except as a sleeping place. The price of standard meals remains at one dollar. There are some places where cheap meals may be had for 75 and 50 cents. Meat of all domestic kinds and poultry remain high, ranging from 40 cents to a dollar per pound. It would be still higher if it were not for the immense quantities of caribou and moose brought down the Klondike from the foothills of the Rockies. This is sold at from 25 to 35 cents per pound. Eggs are $1 per dozen. Flour averages $5 per 50-pound sack. Prices are very variable, and the least sign of scarcity sends the price of an article up, as for instance, flour went up this spring to $7 per sack, owing to a supposed shortage. Fresh vegetables are always dear, but an increasing quantity of them are being grown each year. The great bulk is imported, and is kept in warm storage during the winter.

Furnished rooms rent from $50 to $35 per month. There is a lack of privacy in all the hotels, owing to the thin partitions. The price of lumber, ranging about $100 per thousand feet, is responsible for this. Many rent cabins to sleep in, and get their meals at the restaurants. Spruce logs for cordwood sell at $15 per cord in eight-foot lengths, and it costs about $4 to have it cut up into stove lengths. Local coal is coming into use rapidly, and retails for $30 per ton.

The banking interests are in the hands of two strong Canadian concerns, branches of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and the Bank of British North America. The latter has a modern building equipped with fireproof vaults, etc.; the former is engaged in the work of erecting one for its use. These banks have sometimes as much as a couple of million dollars' worth of gold dust lying in their vaults. They are guarded at night by detachments of N.W.M.P. inside the building. In a country where such an enormous amount of machinery is used, valued at between two and three million dollars, machine shops will naturally flourish, and there are four of them equipped with large modern machinery, and a foundry. A dozen steamers lie up at Dawson, and furnish much repairing. The innumerable steam-thawing plants on the creeks furnish more.

Three or four big sawmills supply the demand for lumber, plain and dressed, and to see the succession of long rafts of sawlogs that arrive at Dawson during the season gives one the assurance that there is much good timber on the Upper Yukon and its tributaries. All the timber in the country should, as far as possible, be reserved for lumber alone. The city is well supplied with newspapers. There are the two afternoon papers, The Klondike Nugget, and The News, The Morning Journal and The Weekly Yukon Sun; also a couple of mining journals, The Yukon Mining Journal and The Record. The former is an excellent illustrated monthly journal devoted to Yukon interests alone. The Sun and Journal are Canadian, The Nugget, Canadian-American, and The News, purely American, devoted to the interests of Alaska, where it should have been located.

The aggregate amount of goods landed at the extensive system of well-built wharves fronting the city, or from scows at the bar, runs up close to ten million dollars ($10,000,000) per year, of which half comes from Canadian cities, the remainder from across the line. Some 12,000 tons come by way of Behring Sea and up the Yukon. The same quantity comes over the Pass and down the river by steamer. Scows bring about 5,000 of corrugated iron, and will store about 50,000 tons of goods, or say the freight of 5,000 ordinary freight cars. One company, The Alaska Exploration Company, have seven, with a capacity of 10,000 tons. There is a row of warehouses on the wharves, another row on the opposite side of First avenue, and blocks of them or single ones elsewhere through the city. Every care is taken to protect them from fire, and so far they have escaped the destructive conflagrations of earlier years. The destruction of one or more of them might mean a serious shortage of provisions for the rest of the winter. There are several warm storage buildings, one of them solid brick. In these are kept the perishables and vegetables.

The trade of the city and Klondike is largely in the hands of eight big trading companies. They are, McLellan, McFeely & Co., hardware, of Vancouver, companies here, The Alaska Exploration Company deserves most credit, not only for its very handsome stores, but for developing coal and quartz mines. With that end in view the company is having a diamond drill shipped to Dawson, to further test the quartz ledges in which it is interested; also the great conglomerate gold-bearing reefs. The N. A. T. and T. Company have developed a coal mine a short distance below Dawson and have placed hundreds of tons of coal on the market this winter.

The placer gold fields within an area of 50 miles southeast of the city produced on an average $20,000,000 worth of gold per year for several years past, and the output is likely to be increased this year. There appears to be enough alluvial earth in sight to last for ten years yet, and the field is broadening. We appear also to be on the eve of great quartz development.

A very fair system of roads up the different gold-bearing creeks has already been constructed, and the programme for this year is more extensive than ever, involving the expenditure of about $200,000 in much needed highways to open up the remoter creeks. A fine new steel bridge is now being built across the Klondike two miles above its mouth. Horses are the principal draft animals, but dogs are much used on the narrow trails. Stages run from Dawson to points along all the creeks, and the automobile has made its appearance in competition for the passenger traffic. Two well-equipped automobiles, carrying half-a-dozen passengers each, are in commission on the creek roads. Bicycles are used very extensively in and around Dawson, especially in winter time when the creek roads and trails are smooth and hard, and good time can be made over them. Regular horse stages run between Dawson and Whitehorse. They follow the ice of the Yukon much of the way, but leave it in a couple of places to make cut-offs that shorten the line greatly. Mails come and go by the same route weekly. The service has been very good this winter. Canadian newspapers are brought in by mail; the contract is for 700 pounds of letters and papers per week each way. The telegraph line gives connection with the head of Lynn Canal, on the North Pacific, and despatches are carried by steamer to and from British Columbian cities. On August 1, the through telegraph line from Atlin to Ashcroft on the C.P.R. will be completed, and Dawson, which is now in connection with Atlin, B.C., will have a through service direct to all Canadian cities. The Dominion Government deserves great credit for the way in which the country has been opened up by telegraph lines.

Building material is naturally costly, both lumber and brick. Lumber of the rough class is usually not lower than $75 tons more. The total tonnage landed in Dawson last year was 30,000 tons.

To handle this bulk of goods some 20 small, medium and large stern-wheel steamers connect at Whitehorse with the White Pass and Yukon Railway, running inland from the Lynn Canal 110 miles, and run to Dawson, 450 miles by the Upper Yukon and Lake La Berge. Passengers and tourists get first-class accommodation. The travel for various reasons is large during the summer; the first and last boats are always crowded. On the Lower Yukon run, another 20 steamers of the largest class, some of them rivalling the big Mississippi ones, ply between St. Michael, at the mouth of the river, and Dawson. They have to bring their load over 1,200 miles against a stiff current, in a shallow and shifting channel or channels.

The number and extent of the warehouses in Dawson is a marvel to a newcomer. They number about 50, all built who, I am informed, did the largest business of any firm in Yukon last season; The Alaska Exploration Co., London and San Francisco, whose palatial Dawson branch netted a profit of $187,000 last season; The Trading and Exploration Co., of London; The North-American Trading and Transportation Co., of Chicago; The Alaska Commercial Co., of San Francisco; The Seattle-Yukon Trading Co., of Seattle; The Ladue Co., and The Ames Mercantile Co., of American cities. These companies in the autumn carry enormous stocks to last about nine months, or until the opening of navigation at the end of May. Many smaller Canadian firms are working up a good trade in the respective lines of dry goods and groceries, and, as elsewhere, the trade of the country will pass gradually into Canadian hands and into Canadian channels, if a sustained effort is made with that end in view by outside manufacturers and merchants. Of all the big per 1,000 feet. Brick are 10 cents apiece, or $100 per 1,000. A very good quality of brick is manufactured close to the city, and a complete new brick-making plant is now on the way in. Good lime is burnt within a few miles, so that with lime, brick and plenty of building stone, the material is at hand for permanent dwellings and stores. The stone foundation is now being laid for another solid brick block.

Dawson is gradually turning from an aggregation of log cabins and tents, a flaring canvas-sign mining camp, to a city of wide streets, pleasing blocks, and up-to-date conveniences of every kind. With the advent of warm, properly heated buildings, much of the terrors of the climate will disappear. As it is now, more than half the people here are living in stores and dwellings not fit to be inhabited, so far as comfort is concerned, even in the southern part of Ontario. Fortunately it is a city of almost perpetual calm, and of little rain.

Its permanency does not seem to be doubted by those shrewd financial men who so freely invest their money in various kinds of permanent enterprises on the strength of an assured future. Prices have come down in nearly all lines of clothing and furnishings, as well as in some lines of eatables, but there is still room for a big decline in that respect.

The open gambling and dance-houses which surprise eastern visitors will, in a short time, be a thing of the past. Their going is hailed with satisfaction by the best business class, as they are parasites on the miners. There will be two things still left to surprise visitors in summer. One is the perpetual daylight for a couple of months, when travel and work goes on steadily the 21 hours. The midnight sun is not visible at any time from the highest mountains near Dawson. The other is the number of dogs around the city. These spend a good deal of their time in adjusting differences that have laid over from the busy winter time.

When the time does come to incorporate the city there are two provisions that should be inserted in the charter. One is that the N.W.M.P. should be in charge of the law and order of the city, and the other is that only British subjects should be allowed a vote in the elections. The usual specious pleading is being made by those desiring incorporation, that our American cousins should be allowed to vote for councillors. Inasmuch as British subjects are not allowed either to vote in any elections, or to take mining property in the neighboring Territory of Alaska, the plea does not come well. Moreover, British subjects who are to remain permanently in Canada are better qualified to say who are the best people to govern the city. The Americans can push a city best, but Canadians can govern it better than they, and we do not want any wide-open place here like those in Alaska, or even such a place as Seattle, where many of our miners are robbed of their gold dust in a manner that would not be tolerated in Dawson.

The amusements of the city are furnished by theatres, with more or less good drama or horseplay. A good public library is partly sustained by grants from the council. A well-managed, privately owned reading-room has 1,500 members. The curling rink is well patronized by crack curlers from Ontario and the Northwest. There is a large skating rink and a couple of hockey rinks. Half-a-dozen hockey clubs maintain a contest for the championship of Yukon. St. Andrew's Night and some other special nights are celebrated by balls of great magnificence, as there are hundreds of wives, mothers and sisters here now from Canadian and American cities. The 21st of May is celebrated royally, with games and parades. The 4th of July, a compromise between the 1st or Dominion Day and the American holiday, is also celebrated in true Western style, with a parade of gorgeous floats symbolizing historical events and conditions.

One word about advising Canadians to come to Dawson. I do not see any reason why a young man who is of an adventurous disposition should not come here rather than go across the line to United States mining camps. If he has patience, energy, and is resourceful, he should do well here. It is far better for the new comer to secure work before going out to mine on his own account. Mining, while a perfectly legitimate industry, has many blanks for the prizes. The average wage on the creeks is from $4 to $5 per day and board. Good mechanics are usually paid somewhat higher, or get $1 per hour straight, and board themselves. The Yukon Council has passed a by-law to pay its employees at the rate of at least $5 per day and board. Our friends from the United States pour in fast enough, and usually do well both at mining and commercial ventures. A man coming here to succeed should especially eschew wine, women and gambling; they are the vices of a mining camp or city. I hope to see the trade not only of Dawson but of all Yukon in the hands of Canadians before many years pass, and Canada will then be getting more value from its most northerly inhabited territory. I am satisfied as to the future. Letters should be addressed to Dawson, Yukon, Canada, not to "Dawson, Alaska."

One way for the merchant who doesn't advertise to put in his time is over the pawnbroker's counter.

USE YOUR MONEY IN YOUR OWN BUSINESS.

IN the present rapid age the desire to "get rich quick," remarks an exchange, has blinded many merchants who several decades ago would use all their brain energy in developing their business, and has made them alert for outside schemes and propositions which promise riches in a remarkably short space of time. Their business is secondary to this inclination to invest in outside schemes.

A New England merchant advises merchants to use their money in their own business, and gives as the key to success the discounting of bills. He is undoubtedly right and mentions a thing that too few merchants look seriously upon.

The average country merchant will usually take the last minute of the eleventh hour to pay his bills, looking upon discounting in the light that his money is worth as much to him as the earned discount, or he doesn't think of it in any light except that a bill must be paid on such a date and waits until the last minute of that date before mailing a check, although his money may be idle days before that date.

Merchants in general should give this matter more serious consideration. It is a matter of profit in many ways to the small dealer as well as the large one.

Manufacturers and jobbers favor cash buyers to the limit of their terms, besides favoring them with "good things" in the way of bargains which are never suggested or shown to slow-pay dealers. Clearings and jobs are always offered first to the cash buyer. He invariably gets the best there is of all deals and it is his discounting his bills that works in his favor.

Bills taken up in advance, even if it be at the cost of unusual exertions, save money and worry to the merchant and buy favors at the hands of the men he deals with. He will not only feel the beneficial effects in this way, but will feel them in the freer swing given to his business. A forestalled obligation gives a merchant an independence that is worth much and makes him a keener, shrewder business man.

The danger that besets a merchant who has money on hand is that of the temptation to use it in some outside speculation—in schemes foreign to his business and his knowledge, and for which he relies upon the arguments and persuasion of the projectors. A man with a keen shrewd mercantile spirit and training is not usually keen in matters foreign to merchandizing, and the majority of those who enter into speculative schemes in their anxiety to get rich rapidly prove to be the most fallible of lambs in the hands of unscrupulous operators.

IDEAS FOR MEN WHO ADVERTISE.

THE ADVERTISEMENTS OF COUNTRY MERCHANTS.

By W. L. DISPLAY.

I SPENT a few hours the other day glancing over the advertisements of merchants published, for the most part, in country weeklies. And I meditated as I glanced, for the character of the advertisements made one do so.

In spite of all that has been said and written about the folly of crowding too much into an advertisement, there is still a great deal of it being done in the advertisements of country merchants. What is to be objected to is not so much the amount of matter that is put into the advertisement as to the number of goods that are enumerated. Here, for instance, is one of this kind:

Bargains!

In Watches, Clocks, Silverplated Goods, and all Jewellers' Sundries; bought at the rate of 33c. on the dollar—all new goods. Now is your chance to secure the greatest bargains ever offered. Goods must be sold in this department. I have secured the services of MR. J. S. BLACK, the Practical Watch-maker and Jeweller, known as an expert throughout Canada. Having bought my stock for Repairing Watches, Clocks, Jewellery, etc., at the rate of 33c. on the dollar, I can do your Repairing cheaper than any other house in Canada. All work guaranteed, also all Watches and Clocks bought at this Store. Every day a Bargain day with us.

A Full Line in Gent's Furnishings.—A few Suits of Blue and Black English Serge; also a few Rubber Coats left. Call and get the greatest snaps ever offered in these lines.

Bargains in Groceries.—Call and get prices in Groceries before buying elsewhere.

Granite, Tin and Woodenware.—All kinds, including Washers, Churns, Wheelbarrows, Brooms, Brushes, Mops, and Housecleaning Utensils.

Wall Paper.—The cheapest in town.

Crockery.—A few odds and ends in Crockery at your own price.

Paints.—Dry and in Oils; Putty, etc.

Hardware.—Rakes, Forks, Hoes, etc.

No matter what you want, call and get it at

BLANK'S DEPARTMENTAL STORE!

BLANKVILLE.

N.B. — Hard and Soft Wood for Sale.

Instead of being crowded into one advertisement there is enough in the above for a dozen. If Mr. Blank is the expert he is declared to be, there was evidently a good opportunity for an advertisement dealing solely with the department over which he presides. Then, as another example may be taken the reference to wall paper. What is the use of declaring it is "the cheapest in town?" That is a statement that has become too well worn to interest people now-a-days. An advertisement that treats on one line is more effective than that which treats on a score, just as the man who aims at the bull's eye and only fires once is likely to make a better score than he who fires a dozen shots at random. If the wall paper was "the cheapest in town," the mention of some of those prices in a nicely displayed "ad.," all the other articles being omitted, would have produced infinitely better results than I can imagine the "ad." as it appeared ever did.

Here is an advertisement with the one-line idea which, aside altogether from the price the teas were quoted, no doubt caught the eye of all through whose hands the newspaper containing it passed. The firm name, like that in the above advertisement, is substituted for the real one.

PER POUND.

HALSH BROS.

If any objection is to be found with the advertisement of "Halsh Bros." it is in regard to the price of the tea. A 15c. tea retail is a pretty low-priced tea. "Halsh Bros." have wisely not said that it was "an excellent" or "first-class" tea at 15c., like some merchants have in effect when advertising low-priced goods. Through the large department stores consumers have already received too much education that is not commendable in regard to low-priced goods. As a rule, the better the price the better the quality; and, furthermore, the better the profit.

In my perusal of the country weeklies I came across the advertisement of one merchant who evidently believes in quality. And, although the advertisement was not by any means as well "set" as it should be, the spirit of it is decidedly commendable. This is the advertisement, although reduced in size. It was originally two columns wide.

Good Value

That's what the buyers want.
That's what we give.

Inferior goods

We could sell cheaper goods—inferior goods—at less prices, but good goods is what the buyer wants. He may be attracted by the cheapness of the inferior article, but that will captivate him only once.

Those who want GOOD FRESH GROCERIES—groceries that have not lost their quality—get them at The Popular Corner Grocery.

ORDERS DELIVERED PROMPTLY TO ANY PART OF THE TOWN.

JOHN JONES.

I would by no means urge a hard and fast rule, but it pays a merchant better in the long run to keep hammering away on quality than on low-priced goods. That which determines the value of an article is its price relative to its quality, for one article quoted at a dollar may be infinitely cheaper than another at one half the price. Impress this on your customers, in and out of season, through your advertisements; and in fact through every and any medium.

HOW SHOULD A GROCER ADVERTISE?

By W. T. ROBSON.

This question must be answered according to the varied conditions and locations of the business. An advertisement that would be effective in a large town or city would be too elaborate for a smaller town or an agricultural district, while an advertisement effective in a small place, might not produce results in a larger location. Thus the writer, with his varied experience, can only lay down a few principles of general application which he considers essential to success.

The store, as far as circumstances will admit, should be up-to-date in fixtures, attractive, and orderly. The windows must be clean, frequently and tastefully

ARRANGED WITH SEASONABLE GOODS.

Display goods that the customers are most likely to want in such a way as they may be most tempted to buy. Don't forget that with most people the price is the important item. Therefore, always use neat and distinct price tickets.

ENCOURAGE YOUR CLERKS.

Try and make them feel they have a personal interest in the welfare of your business. Whenever you receive a new line of goods, explain their merits to your clerks; else, how can they properly present them to their customers. Spare no effort in securing for your store a reputation for the character of your teas, coffees, and other special lines. Do not exaggerate; be sure the quality is as described, and never run down your competitors' goods.

THE BEST PLAN

is to let your opposition severely alone. It generally keeps most men well employed to run a retail grocery store now-a-days. Confine yourself to praising your own goods; that is perfectly legitimate. Let the other fellow look after his. Anything you say about other people's goods is that much free advertising for them, and does you no good.

KEEP YOUR EYE OPEN

for new comers in your locality. They are fair game for you, but let your competitors' customers alone unless they happen to give you a fair chance to talk business to them; but don't use any underhand methods to wean customers away from them. Play the game fair always.

Learn what newspaper or magazine has the largest circulation among the class you specially cater to, and utilize it according to your judgment, means and ability.

HAVE YOUR ADVERTISEMENT BOLD, without being commonplace or vulgar. Be as original in your methods as possible. Make a discriminate use of hand bills, but have them removed from the old stereotyped form. Try and word them well, and so arranged that people will read them. Offer your customers samples (judiciously), of such goods as you have unbounded faith in. They will appreciate them.

If you have a

SOLE AGENCY,

advertise it; make all you can out of it by giving it prominence. Have your delivery prompt, and see that the harness, horses, rigs, are kept clean and in good repair. They constantly remind the people of your store.

I like the idea of a small frame arranged in the side of

and a neat card reminding the public of a special line of goods on sale. This card must be frequently changed, and always very distinctly printed.

See that your clerks are always clean, quick, and obliging. Keep in personal touch with your customers as far as possible; so serve them as to gain their complete confidence, and they in turn will be the best advertisement you can have, for a pleased customer is a valuable asset to any business. And always remember you can supplement greatly your advertisements in the press by the treatment your customers receive when they enter your store.

BE VERY CAREFUL

of advertising schemes which are so prevalent at the present time, programmes, time tables and so many other different traps are constantly being bated to catch the retailer. Church picnics, committees of the local ball team, all consider him legitimate game for a "hold-up." And these people are not troubled at what you are going to get out of the advertising, but how much they can work you for. If the cause is worthy, help it; but do not place what you give in your advertising account, but rather to benevolence or charity.

THE ADVERTISEMENT THAT TELLS.

An ad. that is a reiteration of the articles a merchant keeps in stock without comment on any particular feature that makes them desirable, is not apt to hold attention and induce custom as will an ad. that tells something about the things advertised.—Ad. Writer.

RETAIL ADVERTISING TO-DAY.

There was a time when the retailer considered that his advertising was done when he hung up over his door a sign on which was printed his name and his kind of business, but that was a hundred years ago. To-day it might do if none of his competitors were doing any better, but energetic shrewd men who have stepped into the business arena are becoming commercial giants, are amassing rapidly huge fortunes, simply because they have recognized in judicious advertising a most powerful weapon to turn the current of traffic to their doors.—Tips on advertising.

WASTE IN ADVERTISING.

There are some men who might make money if they advertised, and there are others who would make more if they didn't—or not quite so much, writes J. George Frederick in Printers' Ink.

Some men shave off a hundred or two from a hard-working clerk's salary to cut down expenses, and in the same breath sign a big check for advertising that isn't worth three cents.

Other men carry hundred-dollar bills to the bank when they ought to be carrying thousand dollar bills, and say advertising pays.

So it does, but waste doesn't. Wasting isn't advertising.

One-fourth of most advertising is waste.

In proportion to the detection of waste and its elimination is advertising power constituted. You may employ the wrong mediums, advertise at the wrong time, at the wrong place, in the wrong manner, in the wrong proportion, or in many other wrong ways; and unless you realize it, blame advertising.

The bright business man shuts off every unnecessary and unremunerative penny of expense. The bright advertising man blue-pencils every unremunerative agate line, and every blue-penciled agate line brings results. But every bright business man is not also a bright advertising man—such are the incongruities of life.

Advertising is wasted in a hundred ways—bad printing, cheap appearances, unsaid arguments, vulgarity, irrelevancy, poor cuts, and so on through a big list.

If it would be remembered that the reason men prepare and print advertisements is to sell goods and nothing else there would be less waste. Good salesmen don't talk about the inhabitants of Mars to prospective customers. Yet some advertisers talk about the canals on the moon and the people on Mars in their ads., and think it ought to sell goods.

There isn't a better argument to be found that good advertising pays than that firms who waste a quarter of their advertising are not bankrupt, but actually making money.

Cocoanuts in South America.

How they are Grown and Sold.

AN interesting report regarding the production of cocoanuts in South America was recently issued by the Consular Department at the city of Washington.

The countries dealt with were Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, The Guianas, Peru, and Venezuela. And the report was based on information received through the consuls at the places mentioned.

COCOANUTS IN BRAZIL.

Although a great many cocoanuts are raised in the Bahia consular district of Brazil, it does not produce one-third as many as the Pernambuco district, which is particularly rich in cocoanut palms, on account of its peculiar coast formation.

In the Bahia district, the trees are found wherever there is a settlement, but grow chiefly on the strip of low-lying sandy land along the coast. This land is the most desirable for cocoanut plantations, as the proximity of the salt water makes the trees more productive and the fruit a better quality. Occasionally a piece of land is found at a considerable distance from the coast upon which the palms will flourish, but this is unusual. Single trees are scattered here and there inland; but these are raised with considerable difficulty, produce only an indifferent fruit, and die at an early age.

The number of trees and their productiveness increases as the Pernambuco district is neared and decreases in the same ratio southward. The largest plantations are a short distance north of Bahia City, where there is one that has more than 7,000 and several which have as many as 5,000 trees each; but no particular efforts at cultivation are made. The cocoanuts have simply been planted and allowed to come up and produce what they will, the fruit being gathered from time to time. The owners are usually engaged in other businesses; the proprietor of the large plantation above mentioned, for instance, is a local merchant.

It is impossible to get any information as to the extent of the cocoanut crop. The nuts are gathered in all seasons and are used both in the green or soft and in the ripe or hard state by all classes. The yield, however, must be enormous, as there are few households that do not use the nuts in some form or other, and in spite of the vast number of trees, the supply does not seem to equal the demand.

Before the shell of the nut becomes thick and hard and while the meat is soft and about the consistency of clabber, many of the nuts are gathered and sold upon the street corners and in the drink shops. The nuts are cut open with a machete. The milk proves a most refreshing drink, while the meat is eaten with a spoon or, more often, with a sliver cut from the shell. No attempt is made to husk the nuts so used, though frequently a portion of the husk is trimmed off to lessen weight for transportation.

The hard-shelled or ripe nuts have various uses. When of good quality, they are sold at retail. Many kinds of sweetmeats are also made from them, while the milk and the meat, variously prepared, are constituent parts of many articles of daily diet, such as fish, stews, beans, rice, corn, etc. The ripe nuts are always sent to market husked. They are brought to Bahia by small sailboats, which ply up and down the coast, and on account of the demand are sold at comparatively high prices. The price paid for them at the plantations ranges from 9 to 14 milreis ($2.18 to $3.36) per hundred (without respect to size), according to season, the wholesale price in Bahia City being a couple of milreis higher per hundred. The retail price is from 120 to 320 reis (2.88 to 7.68 cents) per nut, according to size and season.

There is such a demand for good nuts at Rio de Janeiro and other points south that it is far more profitable to ship the nuts there than to utilize them in the manufacture of copra; and even if the prices at local markets were not so good, there would, nevertheless, be no nuts for foreign export.

It is only the nuts that have been left too long on the trees that are utilized in the manufacture of by-products. From these nuts the oil is crudely extracted by grinding the meat, submitting it to pressure and purifying the resulting liquid, or by grinding and boiling the meat and skimming the oil. This oil is used for machinery, lamps, cooking, soap-making, etc. It is also used by the resident Africans for hair oil and for anointing the body. It sells at wholesale at the place of manufacture at from 800 to 1,200 reis (19.2 to 28.8 cents) per liter.

There is still a great amount of uncultivated land well suited for cocoanut plantations. Few trees are being planted; yet it requires no labor other than that of putting a mature nut into the ground prior to the rainy season, and that after five or six years the trees will bear almost indefinitely.

COCOANUTS IN COLOMBIA

The consul at Cartagena, Colombia, was placed at a disadvantage in gathering data for his report on account of the revolution in that country. "Under ordinary conditions," writes the consul, "the raising of cocoanuts is an interest of considerable magnitude, and a fair amount of attention is bestowed upon the groves and the collection, husking, sorting, and packing of the nuts. It may be said that, with rice, the cocoanut is the main source of food supply of the natives of the coast."

"Owing to the above mentioned conditions, the extent of the cocoanut crop of this district is unknown. Cocoanuts are grown both for home consumption and export. They are not shipped in the husk. The price at the present time is from $12 to $14 gold per thousand."

"Cocoanut plantations in the Colon district of Colombia, are confined to a strip of land contiguous to the Atlantic Coast, and to the Island of San Andres, belonging to Colombia, lying about 275 miles from Colon in a northwesterly direction. There are no plantations in the interior. On the coast, by far the greater proportion of cocoanuts is raised by the San Blas Indians, on a strip of country about 125 miles long, extending from Point San Blas to Point Tiburon. Besides the plantations owned by these Indians, there is only one other on the coast—the Caribbean Cocoanut Plantation, at Point Toro, across the bay from Colon. This plantation consists of about 20,000 trees."

"The entire cocoanut crop of the coast amounts to about 4,000,000 nuts a year; that of the Island of San Andres to about 2,500,000."

"Cocoanut trees are raised by first putting the dry nut on the ground and allowing it to sprout until it attains a height of about two feet. The nut is then put in a hole just deep enough to receive it, the sprout remaining above ground. The only attention the palm requires is to keep it free from weeds and other plants until it is five or six years old. After this age, it is able to protect itself, and the ground requires very little cleaning. Trees properly attended to will bear in from five to six years."

"All nuts raised in this district are sent to the United States. They are never shipped in husk. The market price fluctuates between $21 and $40 per thousand. From March to September, it rarely reaches more than $25; from September to March, from $25 to $40.

COCOANUTS IN ECUADOR.

"The cultivation of cocoanuts receives very little attention in Ecuador, most of the palms being grown as side issues upon the various estates. The few raised are for local consumption only; none are shipped. The price is 10 cents silver ( $1\frac{1}{2}$  cents in United States currency) per nut, retail.

COCOANUTS IN THE GUIANAS.

"The coconut crop of British Guiana amounts to about 5,000,000 nuts annually. The cultivation of cocoanuts receives considerable attention in the district of Mahaicony, about 30 miles up the east coast from Georgetown, in the vicinity of the Decerara and Berbice Railway. The nuts are mostly made into oil at the oil and fibre mills at Mahaicony, and the product is sold and consumed in the colony. Less than 2,000 husked nuts were exported last year. These were shipped to the British West India Islands.

"The prevailing price in the local market is from $8 to $10 per thousand.

"Only about 500,000 nuts per annum are produced in Dutch Guiana, and an insignificant number in French Guiana. These are consumed locally.

COCOANUTS IN VENEZUELA

"At La Guayra, the annual crop of cocoanuts amounts to about 1,000,000. At Barcelona and Cumana, however, it is much larger; the latter could easily furnish 5,000,000 nuts a year. The cultivation of cocoanuts receives very little attention in La Guayra, and practically no efforts are made to extend their growth. There is no reason, however, why the present area should not be increased, as the palm thrives wonderfully along the coast, and nearly all of the land within half a mile or a mile of the sea could be utilized.

"The nuts grown in the La Guayra district are mostly absorbed by the local retail trade of the cities of La Guayra and Caracas, a great many being sold to the natives, who drink the milk. The nut is also used for cooking, confectionery, etc. In Cumana, most of the crop is manufactured into oil. This oil is said to be of an excellent quality. A few nuts are occasionally shipped from La Guayra to the United States, but the trade is not profitable. The harbor dues on all kinds of freight is $4 a ton, and planters find that it pays them better to hold the nuts for local consumption. Cocoanuts are never shipped in the husk.

"In La Guayra the price of cocoanuts is from $2.50 to $5 gold per hundred; in Cumana, from $2 to $3.

"The production of cocoanuts in the Puerto Cabello district of Venezuela is limited, as there are but few trees. Very little attention is paid to their cultivation and the supply is decreasing. The soil, however, is excellent for the growth of this palm.

"The nuts are marketed here green for the cocoanut water they contain; ripe, for the meat, from which oil for soap-making and other purposes is extracted, and as copra, for foreign shipment. The green cocoanuts are sold for about 1 cent each, ripe ones at about the same price, and copra for about  $2\frac{1}{2}$  cents per pound."

ART OF PREPARING TEA FOR USE.

It is singular, to say the least, that nothing is ever done by tea dealers in this country to educate or enlighten their customers in the proper manner of preparing their tea for use, to study the character of the water or to preserve its aromatic properties after purchasing. Good tea, like good wine, can be kept intact for years with considerable advantage to the dealer and consumer alike, and there is no valid reason why consumers of tea should not be as particular and fastidious as drinkers of wine. But to obtain a good cup of tea, in the first place the consumer should purchase only the best tea, it requiring much less of the finer grades to make good tea than of the common kinds, and will prove the most economical in the end.

In the proper preparation of tea for use, the quality of the infusion is much affected also by the character of the water as well as by the method of making or drawing it. Tea being an infusion and not a decoction like coffee, it should be brewed not stewed, the chief object being to extract as much of the theine or refreshing principle as possible and as little of the tannin or astringent property as can be, at the same time without either boiling or overdrawing it. Many tea drinkers who imagine erroneously that a very dark-colored liquor indicates strength boil the leaves, while others again spoil the infusion by first putting the leaves in boiling water. Some again place the leaves in cold water, and then put the vessel on the fire to boil, prolonged infusion being another serious mistake. All of these improper methods produce the same evil results, viz., that of extracting an increased amount of the tannin, thereby destroying the true color and flavor of the tea by imparting a blackish color and giving a bitter or astringent taste to the liquor. When tea has been once boiled or overdrawn, the increased quantity of tannin extracted can be readily detected by the extreme dark color of the liquor as well as by its bitterly astringent flavor. Another reprehensible practice of some tea makers is that of adding fresh leaves into the teapot with those that have been already once drawn, as it cannot add to either the strength or flavor of the tea by putting more leaves in the teapot after the first drawing, for the simple reason that the tea water will not extract the theine from the dry leaves of the fresh tea. Only fresh boiling water will do this effectually, the water once used only increases the amount of tannin extracted, thereby darkening the color and destroying the flavor and merely adds to the quantity of leaves already in the vessel without at all affecting the active principle, theine. So that if it be required to increase the quantity or strength of the infusion already in the pot, some fresh tea leaves must be drawn in a separate vessel and the liquor poured in that already made.

In the proper preparation of tea for use, therefore, the object should be to extract as little of the tannin as possible and as much of the theine and volatile oil as can be extracted without permitting the infusion to boil or overdraw. To best obtain these most desirable results, put the requisite quantity of tea leaves in a covered china or earthenware pot—all tin and metal vessels should be avoided—and pour in freshly boiling water that has been boiling for at least three minutes, and then allow the vessel to stand where it will keep hot, without boiling, for from eight to ten minutes before serving, according to the variety of tea used. There will be a sparkle and aroma about tea made from fresh boiling water in this manner that it will not receive from the flat, hot water that has been boiled too long or repeatedly. In the stated time while the tea is drawing only the refreshing and exhilarating properties—the theine and volatile oil—are extracted from the leaves, a longer infusion only dissolving and extracting the astringent and deleterious principle—tannic acid—which impairs digestion and injures the nervous system, for which causes alone all boiled or overdrawn tea should be avoided.

In moderate strength it requires about one teaspoonful of good tea to a half pint of boiling water and an ordinary half teacupful of leaves to every quart of boiling water, the latter making a fairly strong infusion for five persons. China and Japan teas require from eight to ten minutes to draw thoroughly, the former requiring but little milk and sugar, while Japan teas are more palatable without the addition of either. India, Ceylon and Java teas generally should not be allowed to draw more than from five to seven minutes at the outside after the boiling water has been poured on, as prolonged infusion makes the flavor of these varieties particularly mawkish and bitter, while the addition of an extra quantity of both milk and sugar greatly improves their drinking qualities.—Joseph M. Walsh.

HOW SHOULD CLERKS BE PAID--FIXED SALARY OR COMMISSION?

VIEWS OF TORONTO MERCHANTS ON THE QUESTION.

HOW can an employer get the best service from his clerks? What system of payment will best develop their ability as salesmen, and will make them most valuable to their employer as well as to themselves?

The almost universal system of payment in Canada to-day is a specified salary, so much per week or per month. But here and there are to be found men who have partly adopted a system that is quite common in some branches of industry—that of making part of the remuneration of their help a commission on their sales, or on the gross income of the business. Which system is the most practical, all salary, or salary and commission?

COMMISSION WOULD BE A MISTAKE

"To pay clerks a commission would be a mistake," declared Mr. J. F. Morrish, Yonge street. "If a clerk found out that his salary was governed by the extent of his sales, the natural result would be that he would do everything in his power to increase his individual sales, and might possibly neglect other essential work about the store, thus impairing his usefulness or value to his employer. Serving customers is only one part of a clerk's duties. He has to assist in receiving and opening out goods, in keeping up stock, in window dressing, and in many other ways. All these duties he might easily neglect.

"There would be, moreover, an eagerness for a young, inexperienced clerk to serve customers who should be left to the older clerks. An inexperienced clerk, eager for his own advancement, might easily do much injury to his employer's business by pushing forward to wait on a customer who manifests a desire to be served by another clerk. A body of clerks are most valuable when all work together. Each one develops a sort of connection with the customers, which should always be recognized.

"As a rule, when there is other work to be done in the store or warehouse, the senior clerks should serve the customers. If a commission on sales was paid, the junior clerks would consider it an injustice that they should be kept busy rearranging goods on shelves, putting up sugar, or some such work, while their brother clerk was adding to his sales account, and thus to his salary.

"To pay a commission might increase a clerk's activity—his enthusiasm. But if he gets every week what he is worth he will be just as loyal and just as earnest as he would be if he was impelled by the more directly selfish thought of a commission to work hard."

DESCRIBED AS A HUMBUG

"Commissions in a retail grocery business are a humbug," said Mr. Henry Swan, of Swan Bros., King street east. "Instead of developing a clerk in ways that would increase his value, they become an incentive for him to sell the goods that are most easily sold, whether they be the most profitable lines or not.

"The payment of commissions is a fad—one of the oldest fads that grocers have had to consider. What makes it seem feasible is that it is possibly a good thing under certain circumstances. A grocer finding that he had too much of any line in stock, might find it a good move to offer his clerks a commission on their sales of that line to clean it out. This might be a good move, but I have not even enough faith in that to adopt it. Commissions are like piece work, and I never yet knew a man who was working on piece work, but would prefer a straight salary. Commissions demoralize one's staff, and decrease the feeling of respect and confidence between clerks and employers. There are a few clerks who might like commissions for a while; but, they either get tired of it very soon and want a straight salary, or they would be leaving before long to start up in business for themselves."

PAY ACCORDING TO THE INCOME OF THE BUSINESS.

"I am a thorough believer both in the principle and practice of paying commissions," said Mr. Wm. Radcliffe, Queen street east. "I believe this is to be the solution of present difficulties between capital and labor. The laborer, the skilled workman, or, to bring it closer home, the clerk who by his energy, skill and courtesy contributes largely to the steady growth of his employer's business, should receive benefit for his labors more than a paltry salary.

"I do not believe the best method is to pay each clerk according to his sales. A far better plan is to pay him a certain proportion of the gross income of the business. This arouses his interest in every part of the business, and effects economies at one end and larger sales and better prices at the other.

"An employer can soon gauge which clerks are contributing the most to the profit of his business, and he can fix the proportion paid each clerk according to his individual value. Thus, a double incentive is given the clerks—their salary depends on the gross income of the business and on the proportionate value put on their services by their employer.

"I have tried this system of payment with my head clerk for some years; but I have seriously been thinking of adopting it in regard to all my help, even to my messenger boy. The principle is sound, and the day is coming when it will be generally applied."

PREFERS A STRAIGHT SALARY.

"I prefer to pay a straight salary," said Mr. R. Barron, Yonge street. "I believe in paying a good salary. A man ought to be paid according to his value. But I do not believe that the payment of a clerk, by a commission on his sales or on the turnover is the surest way of rewarding him, according to his value. I see and hear what my clerks are doing, and I know which are making most money for me, and therefore I can tell which should get the best salaries. And it is the clerks who are worth it who get it.

"There is no doubt that many things might be said in favor of commissions, but my experience tells me that a straight salary is the safest and best way to pay clerks."

"We never did give commissions," was the reply of Mr. Simpson, of F. Simpson & Son, Yonge street. "We prefer to pay straight salary. Our clerks are as enthusiastic and loyal as we could wish, so the salary they get must be sufficient incentive to bring out their best qualities."

* MR. BUTCHER'S EXPERIENCE

"I have never tried commissions as an employer," said Mr. John Butcher, Queen street west. "But I had one experience of them when I was a clerk, not long out from England. I had been employed for some time by a grocer in the city, and had come to the conclusion that I was worth more money than I was getting. So I asked for a raise.

"'No,' said my employer; 'I cannot give you more salary, but I will give you 5 per cent. on your sales.'

"I jumped at the offer. When the first month was ended my share startled the grocer, and he quit commission and gave me the advance I asked for without a murmur.

"The reason he was startled at my sales was that I spent my time outside the shop getting customers. Whenever I met any of my friends on the street I asked them to deal with us if they could, as I was getting a commission on my sales. I got such a lot of trade that way that it would have paid my employer to keep me on commission."

LIPTON PAYS COMMISSIONS.

"Commissions are commonly paid in England. Sir Thos. Lipton pays them in all his stores. The usual practice is only to pay them on certain lines. Here, we could pay them to best advantage on teas, coffees, spices, baking powder, toilet soaps, imported bottled goods, etc. The most sensible way to do would be to pay all clerks about $6 a week, and a commission on certain lines. Each clerk gins, of R. Higgins & Son, Yonge street, "nor would I like to inaugurate such a scheme. It bears too close a

RESEMBLANCE TO THOSE GIFT SCHEMES which are so common in the trade, and which I have practically no use for. A good clerk should be paid well, and a good employer will pay his men what they deserve. A clerk is not always responsible for the sales he makes. He may sell twice as much per day in one store as in another. A clerk contributes to a store's connection, but he does not make it by any means. It's reasonable that a traveller who carries side lines should receive a commission, for his sales largely depend on his own efforts. But few clerks would go after customers, no matter how large was the commission offered them.

DIFFICULTY OF GETTING A BASIS.

"We have never tried the payment of commissions to our clerks," answered Mr.

occasion to dismiss any of them for this, or, in fact, any other reason.

"Our system does not lend itself readily to commissions. Some of our clerks are not salesmen; most of their time is spent putting up and sending out orders. To arrange payment of commissions to these would be a most difficult task."

TINNED ANTS WITH BEEF.

Ants are now regarded as a great delicacy, and the only trouble is that there is not enough of them. Men who do hard manual labor in cold climates acquire a strong craving for something sour, and they have found out long ago that ants are a palatable substitute for pickles. They use only a peculiar variety, large and red in color, and found in immense quantities under the bark of dead trees. It is not very hard to collect a quart-pail full, and, after killing them by scalding, they are spread on a should have a counter of his own. The sales over some counters would always be greater than those over others, thus opening to the junior clerks a hope of advancement from the poorer to the best counters. This, of course, would only be possible in a large store where several clerks are employed.

"An employer would have to keep his eye on his clerks just as much as if they were working under these conditions as he has to do now, for there might be a tendency to push articles that added to one's commission, but which the customer did not want. Then there would be difficulty in keeping track of sales. But I think all objections might be met and the scheme worked to good advantage. But, in the meantime, I am going to continue paying my clerks a straight salary. Commissions may come later."

"I have never had any experience with commissions to clerks," said Mr. F. Hig-

A. Stone, of Michie & Co., King street west. "It would be difficult to fix a satisfactory basis for such a method of payment. Much would depend on the store system; much on the clerks' desire for such a method; much on the extent of the clerk's influence in extending his own sales.

"Only a few years ago many clerks had big connections, and contributed much to their employer's turnover. Modern advertising has done away with much of that, so that to-day, when we are engaging a clerk his connection is never taken into consideration. We appeal to a certain class of trade and so feel that we are not dependent on the connection of any of our clerks. If they were discourteous to our customers they might drive them away, but we would soon see that, and we would then drive the clerks away. But we are careful in selecting our clerks, so have rarely had board, and dried in the sun. When ready to eat they look like coarse, brown powder, and have a very agreeable smell.

With a view to making this new delicacy more generally known, a syndicate is at work collecting and tinning ants, preparatory to placing them on the market generally.

MEN WERE DECEIVERS EVER.

He was a hard-working fancy-dealer, and he had ransacked the whole shop in his efforts to please an old lady who wanted to purchase a present.

For the fifteenth time she picked up, and critically examined, a neat little satchel.

"Are you quite, quite sure that this is genuine alligator-skin?" she inquired.

"Positive, madam," quoth the dealer.

"I shot that alligator myself."

"It looks rather soiled," said the lady.

"That, madam, is where it struck the ground when it tumbled off the tree."

Royal is the baking powder of highest character and reputation, the favorite among housekeepers. The cheapest to consumers, the most profitable for dealers to handle.

Those grocers who are most successful in business---who have the greatest trade, highest reputation, the largest bank accounts---are those who sell the highest quality, purest, best known articles.

It is a discredit to a grocer to sell impure, adulterated and unwholesome goods; nor is the sale of such goods, even though the profits on a single lot may be larger, as profitable in the long run as the sale of pure, wholesome, high-class articles at a less percentage.

Trade is won and held by the sale of the best, the highest grade, the most reliable goods.

Talks With Men Behind the Counter.

Conducted by W. T. ROBSON.

THIS issue marks a mile stone of time in the history of this "Corner." A year has passed since this department was commenced, and from a business standpoint we should to-day do a little stocktaking and consider if our labor has been profitable or otherwise to those for whose benefit this "Corner" was intended. Let us find out

WHAT HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED, wherein we have failed in the past, and how our usefulness may be increased in the future.

These are the days of rapid changes. A very large number of those who were clerks when we commenced this "Corner" are to-day in business for themselves; and their interest seems to grow, so that through this "Corner" is intended for clerks, yet there are more merchants writing for information than clerks.

IT IS REGRETTABLE

that correspondents sometimes ask questions that only a knowledge of local conditions would enable one to give a satisfactory answer, and my friends will understand how difficult it is to obtain satisfactory information for them. Again, owing to the rush of questions, some letters in their turn have had to wait much longer than was my desire. Our friends will pardon this delay, which, in future, we will endeavor to obviate as much as possible. It has given me much pleasure to have my friends speak so kindly of the efforts put forth in this department. Oftentimes one feels his inability to satisfactorily answer the questions given; yet, I have always tried faithfully to obtain the required information, and when I have failed it has not been from lack of honest effort.

It has also been

VERY GRATIFYING

to me to note the increased interest in this "Corner" among the clerks generally, and also with the merchants, some of whom have sent in, for their clerks, subscriptions to this paper, believing that the additional information the clerks thus gained concerning the grocery business compensated them for the outlay.

SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR CLERKS.

One of the most progressive grocers in Ontario sent in seven subscriptions, one for each of his clerks, recently, and this idea among merchants is on the increase, thus giving the most effective evidence that this paper is appreciated and of value to the grocer and also to his clerk. What has appeared in this "Corner" has not been all that has been done. A number of questions have been of a private and personal nature, not of interest to the general trade. These each and everyone have had attention, and sometimes with the expenditure of considerable time and trouble. One wonders if those who have received replies of this nature have fully appreciated our efforts on their behalf.

HELPFUL LETTERS.

Now, permit me just here to say how helpful were the many letters sent from a large number of clerks situated in all parts of Canada, and, while reading them, this thought so often came to me: "How much we have in common." Clerks in grocery stores can assist each other in the knowledge of selling goods, and in the numerous problems that daily confront one in the life behind the counter. So, in the coming year, more than in the past, let us express our views with freedom and discuss with each other those topics of interest to grocery men in particular and young men generally.

One cannot foretell the good a single letter may do. It may be just the particular information someone may want and be anxiously waiting for. If you know of anything that may be of interest, kindly send it forward. Because our friends have done this; to them the credit of this "Corner" is due. Let us continue helping and be helped. Just so long as the interest is taken by the friends of this department there cannot be any doubt as to its helpfulness and success.

During the coming year we may

and embrace all subjects that improve a man, with a preference for those directly pertaining to the grocery business.

During the past year a number of questions came in regarding amusements and how time outside the business should be spent, which were not discussed owing to lack of space. We hope these subjects will receive the attention they deserve this coming year. I hope we shall have the same hearty cooperation in the future that we have had in the past, and that the spirit of goodfellowship may continue to grow among our readers.

ON ORGANIZATION OF GROCERY CLERKS.

Mr. James McGrath, President of The Toronto Retail Grocery Clerks' Association, is an enthusiast on organization among grocery clerks as a means for improvement, and thinks all clerks should cooperate for advancement.

He says: "The movement is steadily growing, because of the example of what other trades have accomplished through united effort. Organization is the spirit of the times. It's in the air we breathe, and every body of men must unite in order to have justice done themselves, and their trade placed on its proper basis. Don't make the common error of supposing we have any antagonism to our employers, for we have not. On the contrary, our only desire is to so improve ourselves that we may the more worthily represent them behind the counter, and thus increase our efficiency. The ranks of the merchants, as a rule, are recruited from the clerks. As a natural order of events, the two are inseparable. That which produces the better clerk will make the more efficient merchant.

"In some sections shorter hours are needed, but no clerk wants them at the expense of the business. We are making satisfactory progress along this line through educating the customer. Retail merchants would not keep open their stores if people did not buy goods. If the public generally, by encouragement from pulpit and press, were to say: 'Hereafter we will not buy any goods after a certain hour; and, furthermore, we will not patronize any store which keeps open after that hour,' the end of this 13, 14 or 15 hours a day of labor would soon end.

"Public opinion is something that any merchant who attempted to fight it on a matter of this kind would soon discover he was 'up against it' good and hard.

"So push the work of organization along, for our objects are all good. We have the most hearty sympathy of our employers, and endeavor to have more interest than ever in our business and in our employers' welfare. They in turn realize this, and are helping us along. We are working together. Our interests are mutual, and what injures the one is detrimental to the other. The Grocery Clerks' Association is a growing institu-

From Sudbury comes to us the following. The writer, a well-known clerk, modestly wants his name withheld:

What the grocery clerks of this country need is organization, under a central head, say in Toronto, with local branches in every town of over 1,000 population. This would cultivate a fraternal feeling, adjust many things in connection with our business, and be helpful to the trade generally. Wisely ran, with good energetic officers, great good would result. Will you not help to this end?

I shall be most happy to do anything in my power to further the interest of clerks in this matter. It is something to which considerable thought must be given, and our friend strikes the key note when he says: "wisely ran, with good energetic officers." There, to my mind, is the fundamental part of the whole concern. So after organizations are side-tracked in their mission by the officers in charge. However, we would like to hear from the clerks on this subject. It is of great importance to clerks. Please express yourselves freely on this matter.

Do you think the clerks generally would take an active interest in an organization run on the lines mentioned by our friends? Is there sufficient cohesion among grocery clerks to sustain a Dominion Grocery Clerks' Association? I would like to hear from the presidents of the other associations of Canada on this subject.

THE FUTURE OF A GROCERY CLERK.

The average clerk lives too much for the present. He is interested in the fun and the pleasures of the day and he is very apt to overlook the fact that there is a future for him. Thus we see so many clerks when they reach the declining years of life, and even at middle age, thrust aside by younger men. They can not get a situation, for no one wants an old man behind the counter.

It is pathetic to see them going from place to place, meeting with rebuffs and refusals; and this happens before a man has really become aged. At 40 a man finds it much more difficult to get a situation than at 30. At 50 it is well nigh impossible. These are the facts, and every young man behind the counter must face these conditions in the trade to-day. He should plan to secure for himself a permanent position from which he cannot be thrust as years begin to tell on his energy and usefulness. Sometimes one wonders what becomes of the older men. As you go into the banks and business places everywhere you see three-fourths the hands employed apparently men under 35 years of age.

The ordinary clerk spends his earnings with a lavish hand, forgetful of the advancing years, unmindful of the increased responsibility which comes with them. The possibility of having to support two or more people with his wages does not come to his mind, it is simply, "How can I have a good time?" Then, some day the idea occurs to him to have a home of his own. He knows someone with whom the thought of a life partnership is a pleasant dream. The bond is entered into; as a rule the wages of the average clerk are not enough to keep a home and save money. So they drift along until some day his services are no longer required—a younger man is wanted. Then, to what occupation can he turn?

The avenues of most businesses to a man of 40 years or past are closed. What is there left for the ex-clerk? Only some menial position, because his training has not fitted him for any special work, once his usefulness behind the counter is past.

Let clerks remember their work is but a stepping stone to something better, and to be continually fitting themselves to take a superior position, either as owner of a store, or by study and saving seek to enter into another field where there is more permanency of employment.

Behind the counter is a great training school for many other vocations. Some of my friends among the "knights of the grip," graduated from a clerkship. I know politicians, wholesale merchants and others holding high positions who say the training received as a clerk has been of great value to them.

My intention is not to speak in any way disparagingly of the work of a clerk. On the contrary, it is an employment worthy of any young man; for the man himself either ennobles or degrades his work; and the grocery clerks will hold their own with any other body of young men. It is the common fault of youth to take life easy. So I wish just to expose the serious side in the hope that the brief contemplation may be helpful to my many friends engaged in this work.

HOW TO SUCCEED.

It is a great pity when a young man complains and loses ambition to better himself, but it becomes a calamity when a young man gets disheartened and thinks he cannot improve his position. I would be sorry, indeed, to unsettle any young man in his present employment, but what is required by most young men is higher ideals and a knowledge that his work, no matter how humble, will not debar him from the highest positions in the land.

Look at the men in the forefront of the affairs of this and other countries, and you find them men who have stood the hard knocks of the world and a large majority of them have risen from humble homes and surroundings not of an inspiring nature. Make no mistake; it was no influential friends, or "pull" of any description that has placed them in the position they now occupy. It was their own honest hard work. Too much is said these days about having "the pull" (as we young men call it) in order to secure a position of value. Ability counts to-day more than ever before.

What business men want and must insist in an employee is competency to perform his work. Every man is expected to earn his wages, no matter what position he is in. It makes no difference if he is junior clerk at $7 a week, or the manager at $2,000 a year, if either are incompetent they are detrimental to the firm and should be replaced.

A few days ago I read of the appointment as President of the St. Louis Exhibition of 1903 of Governor David R. Francis, of Missouri, who not so long ago was a grocery clerk in just as hard a place as anyone. From grocery clerk to State Governor is the epitomized story of his life. "It is just a matter of luck," says one, or "he had influence," says another. It's neither—but perseverance, energy and indomitable will power coupled with business ability. If an employer sees in an employee a strong desire to succeed he would be a very strange man if he does not assist him.

Now, how can a clerk show he desires to progress? By being willing and courteous. Do as much as possibly lies in your power for the store in which you are working, and always remember that your employer's success is your success.

Be five or ten minutes ahead of time in commencing work and don't think your duties are always over on the regular closing hour. While in one sense this may be true, yet often in the few minutes spent after hours an employer learns more of the true value of his clerk than in all the hours of the day's business; and thus cultivates that degree of intimacy which so often results in a superior position or a raise in salary. Another thing, and keep it always in your mind, and that is: No grocery clerk ever knew it all, and we are never too old to learn. Be never self-satisfied but always and ever on the alert to improve one's knowledge of his business. Have confidence in your ability (not egotism or vanity), but a firm assurance that you are able to perform the task assigned. Don't become too anxious and expect results at once; growth and development take time.

Over anxiety leads to failure. Many a good man has wrecked his prospects because he was unable to wait until he had sufficient schooling to fill the position he desired.

BUSINESS MEN AND TOURIST TRAVEL.

How They can make it Redound to Their Welfare.

NE of the sources of wealth which has been so far but little developed in Canada is that derived from tourist travel. Our greatest industries are, of course, the farm, the factory, the forest and the mine. And while all these are undoubtedly capable of enormous development, there is probably none of them that promises to yield better returns for the efforts put forth than that of summer tourist travel.

As a land for summer tourist travel Canada has been richly blessed by Nature. The Atlantic Ocean laves her shore on one side and on the other the broad Pacific. And in the heart of the country are inland seas of fresh water girted by

SHORES OF PICTURESQUE BEAUTY.

While of rivers, where can we get anything more to be desired? The St. Lawrence—the highway to the inland seas—dotted on either shore with places already famous as summer resorts, and many others which in time will be. Then there is the St. John river, the Rhine of America, with its variety of scenery and wealth of color; the Miramichi with its dry and bracing air and its rich fisheries; the Richelieu and the Ottawa rivers with their glorious and historical recollections, and the Saguenay with its Capes Trinity and Eternity, with their towering height of a thousand feet ever guarding its doorway.

Then the Rockies, who can describe them? The pen of the artist has given us some conception; but it is only a small conception. A sea of mountains, perhaps, but a sea of glorious beauty nevertheless, which, while it may make a man feel smaller as he gazes in rapture upon them, enlarges his mind and stimulates his aspirations.

PARADISE FOR SPORTSMEN.

And for the sportsman, what is there not within the Dominion that he cannot get to satisfy him? All that the most fastidious can desire is to be found in the innumerable bays which dot her sea girt shores; in the lakes that are to be found everywhere throughout her broad territory; in the rivers that, like great arteries, give life and health to the country; and in the depths of her forests and on the wide stretches of her western plains.

But, after all, of what value to the commercial interests are the great and varied attractions to tourist travel which this Dominion affords? Not much unless we deign to make them so.

WE MUST EXERT OURSELVES.

In order to get results from tourist travel anything in proportion to the possibilities, we must not only exert ourselves, but base our exertions on business principles. In other words, we must go about it in a businesslike way. Theorizing from now to the end of time will possibilities are great or small, the very best efforts should, notwithstanding, be put forward in order that the maximum results may be obtained.

THE NEED OF ORGANIZATION.

The first step should be organization. It may be made a part of the duty of a board of trade or a mercantile body bearing some other name; but where it is possible, an organization whose special duty is the promotion of the locality's advantages as a summer, winter, or any other kind of resort, should be created. The cities of St. John, N.B., and Halifax, N.S., have probably done more in this respect than any other separate com-not accomplish much; but a great deal will be accomplished in a year or two if the business men throughout the country will put their shoulder to the wheel in their respective localities, and do for them what they would were they part and parcel of their own mercantile establishments.

OPPORTUNITIES EVERYWHERE.

There are few places in Canada which do not offer some attractions to tourists during one or more of the seasons of the year. Only a few, comparatively, may perhaps ever become great centres of attraction for tourists, but whether the munities in Canada. The tourist associations in those cities are largely composed of business men; and they have certainly gone about their duties in a businesslike way. Take the St. John Association as an example. Before the tourist travel season opened this year it secured the services of a bright woman, well supplied with executive ability. Upon her devolved the duty of organization. During the early part of the year she visited a large number of places in the Maritime Provinces, and especially in New Brunswick. Here a note was taken in regard to the attractions of these localities, their hotels, homes for tourists, and

VALUABLE FUND OF INFORMATION. for travellers. At the last annual convention of the Maritime Board of Trade, when the question of tourist travel was being discussed, the Secretary of the St. John Board of Trade said that daily during the summer season a large number of travellers called at the office of the tourist association in quest of information, and that in many instances these travellers had afterwards come back to express their thanks and appreciation of the information which had previously been accorded them. Besides the bureau of information which the association in question organized, it also issued a hand-alone, but in every one of the large cities in Canada to which large numbers of tourists are annually attracted.

It is a great convenience to travellers when there is such a bureau to which they can go and obtain information, not only in regard to points of interest, but also in regard to hotels or private houses in which they can find accommodation, according to their means. By setting themselves to provide information of this kind and making it convenient for tourists to get it, the merchants will be going a good step in the right direction.

NATURAL ATTRACTIONS AND HUMAN EFFORT.

No matter what natural attractions a locality may have they must be supplemented by human effort if they are ever to amount to a great deal. Where, for mind at the moment. It is about 12 miles from Halifax and is known as Cow Bay. It is one of the most delightful little spots for a summer resort that the mind of man could conceive of. The bay is two to three miles across, I should think, is horseshoe in shape, and the shore, except for a low pebble ridge well in the rear, is as smooth and free from obstacles as a billiard table. Back of the pebble ridge is a narrow grove of trees and back of that again a small body of fresh water, where lilies abound and where boating is safe and pleasant. But there is no accommodation at all for tourists, or was not when I was there a couple of years ago. The only building I could see was a farm house at one end. And its reputation is only local, although the farm house up to two years ago had a dog which had secured a reputation throughout the Maritime Provinces by swimming out to a wreck and bringing in a rope by which the crew was brought ashore in safety. This is only one of many places in Canada which could be made famous summer resorts if people with capital and enterprise would only interest themselves.

And they are not by any means all on the seashore either.

THE MUSKOKA DISTRICT

in Ontario is gradually obtaining a reputation, at least, continental in extent, for the dryness and salubrity of its climate, the uniqueness and grandeur of its scenery and the innumerable islands of its lakes. But the one-half has never yet been told about Muskoka as a summer resort, and it is only of late that anything like a well defined effort has been put forth to provide proper accommodation for tourists.

THERE'S MILLIONS IN IT.

It has been estimated by authors of guide books that tourists expend from $5 to $10 per day. But suppose we take a lower estimate and place the sum at $20 per week, which is undoubtedly below the actual figure. Multiply that by a few thousand people and see what it will bring. It was estimated, for example, that during the summer of 1900 no less than 5,000 people were coming into the chief ports of Nova Scotia every week from the United States. Estimating at the low figure of $20 for each and we have $100,000 a week, or $1,000,000 for ten weeks. And this summer tourist travel in the Maritime Provinces has been greater than it ever was before.

HINT TO THE PEOPLE OF WESTERN CANADA.

Nine-tenths of the summer tourist travel in the Maritime Provinces comes from the United States, and particularly from the New England States. This is scarcely creditable to Canadians in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. True, the numsomely illustrated folder, in which were given many views of places of interest, lists of hotels and their rates; the districts in New Brunswick where shooting and fishing were to be had and the kind of game and fish for which these localities are noted. The names of guides and their terms are also given.

BUREAUS OF INFORMATION.

While the Industrial Exhibition is open in Toronto a bureau where information can be obtained free is established under civic control on the principle of thoroughfare leading from the chief steamboat landing. This is very good as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. Instead of being for a couple of weeks it should be at least for the whole of the summer months. And not in Toronto example, would the famous Atlantic City be were it not for human effort? It would scarcely have more than a local reputation. The climate, it is true, is dry and delightfully bracing; but the shore is low and the scenery is decidedly commonplace. But it has a boardwalk along the shore as wide as some streets on which one can walk or be wheeled nearly five miles straightaway. Nature provided the climate, but the boardwalk and the splendid hotels which front upon it are the result of organized effort.

A FEW EXAMPLES.

There are many places in Canada where the climate is just as good as that at Atlantic City and where the scenery is infinitely better. There is one little spot on the Atlantic Coast that comes to my Pure Sugar is one of the most important ingredients required in the preparation of medicinal syrups, elixirs, etc., and I have found considerable difficulty in obtaining, until recently, a grade of sugar that would meet the requirements.

Two years ago I purchased, for the first time, some of St. Lawrence Refining Co.'s best brand Granulated Sugar, for use in the Laboratory of the O.C.P. by the students, in the preparation of syrups, etc., and, as a direct result of that test, I have used only the above mentioned brand of Sugar up to the present time. One summer is ended; but the time has arrived when it is opportune to prepare for the possibilities of another as far as tourist travel is concerned.

HALIFAX AS A TOURIST RESORT.

Halifax is the Acadian capital, the Mecca of all Provincial tourists and the centre of the country's business, educational and religious life. As it is today in natural ruggedness, so it was a century and a half ago when Col. Cornwallis first set England's standard there and marshalled around it his few hundreds of faithful, loyal followers, marking the country irrevocably for Great Britain. Col. Cornwallis named the spot where he landed his expedition, Halifax, in honor of the Earl of Halifax, a contemporaneous English statesman and poet. The Indians used to call this land about the harbor Chebucto, meaning "Chief Port," and the French spoke of it as Baie Saine. Halifax has always been an English port. Dartmouth, just across the harbor and occupying a veritable amphitheatre of hills, experienced many Indian attacks. By way of preparation to ward off the attacks of these marauding invaders, Halifax built on its central hill a blockhouse, and this was the nucleus and starting point of the now world-famous citadel, where, by the way, the Imperial Government maintain at all times a garrison. In the harbor may also be seen British warships.

The opportunities and advantages presented by Halifax as a vacation and tourist resort were early recognized by the great transportation companies, and the city is as accessible now from the United States and Western Canada as any of the resorts along the coast and within the borders of their own territory. Saying it in the way that means most, Halifax of getting better acquainted with. Something important in our task of nation-building.

VALUE OF TOURIST TRAVEL TO MAINE.

But this is digressing. Maine may be taken as another example of the importance of tourist travel. According to a report prepared two or three years ago under authority of the Government, it was estimated that the tourist travel in Maine was worth something like $12,000,000 annually to that State. Since then tourist travel there has increased rather than decreased.

LAUDABLE WORK OF THE RAILWAYS.

The railway companies, such as the Grand Trunk, the Canadian Pacific, and the Intercolonial, are doing a great good work by their illustrated booklets to excite interest in Canada as a scene for tourist travel. But, of course, the chief object of the railways is to bring grist to their own mill. And while this is both legitimate and laudable, duties of this kind should not devolve upon the railway companies alone. What is wanted is the cooperation of the people in every community throughout Canada that possesses advantages that should attract tourist travel.

Window Trims in the Grocery Store.

SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR PROGRESSIVE GROCERS.

WINDOW DISPLAYS MUST INTEREST—HOW TO MAKE THEM DO SO.

I HAVE lately made a tour of inspection of the Montreal grocers' windows, in search of ideas in window dressing. I didn't visit all of the 1,300 or more displays, but I managed to have a look at a great many of the best stores and I feel that I can speak with authority about the class of Montreal window displays. As a rule the stores are provided with

GOOD FACILITIES FOR DISPLAY.

They are high, well lighted and well painted, while nearly all are furnished with plate glass. Those are the primary requisites demanded by a good window dresser. But, yet, I came back without just the ideas I was looking for. There was no very original striking display that I could see, and if a person like myself, bent on searching out a forcible display could not find it, I can hardly see how a less receptive person, the ordinary passer-by, is impressed by efforts of the Montreal grocers.

THE OBJECT OF WINDOW DISPLAYS.

I have come to the conclusion that the trouble is the retail grocers dress their windows with the idea of telling people that "this is a grocery store," not with the idea, "here is a good article, buy it."

To impress upon storekeepers the necessity of utilizing their window space to the best advantage is no longer necessary. They have learned long ago that a window must be dressed, but they must now learn how to dress it. Most of them are content with cleanliness and a fresh display, peculiarly grocer-like. That is not enough. The attempt should be made to interest the man or woman every week who passes the store once a week. The window display should not be a mere sign; it should be an advertisement. And in an advertisement one does not say merely, "John Smith is a grocer at 347 St. Blank St."; an earnest attempt is made to push goods.

So should it be with the window. Then, the first thing to do is to cut out the general displays. They are products of by-gone days. They do not interest, they merely indicate.

To interest—that's the trick of the window dressing business. Yet I fancy if I were in the business, I could find time to do it. I'd pick out a certain man that goes past the store every day and see how often I could stop him to look in the window. Certainly you can't do it with merely a bright, clean window, such never fails to make its impression on his conception of the worth of the store, but it does not interest. Something more is necessary. What is that thing?

That thing is "just one thing" not "everything." Use the window for booming purposes and remember that you cannot boom everything at once.

GET SOMETHING TO BOOM.

But first of all get something to boom, something with which people can connect your name. It is useless to try to boom granulated sugar, if all your competitors have the same kind. It would be of no avail to try to increase the sales of "Early Rose" potatoes. It would be highly foolish to dress a window with nutmegs. It would be senseless even to make a display of oatmeal or many brands of canned tomatoes.

Yet, a grocer can make a good window of oatmeal or tomatoes, if he goes about it right. First of all pick out a make of oatmeal that you think is the best, and get the control of it for your town. If you are a good grocer and promise to push it hard you will likely succeed in getting the agency. Then make an appropriate display of the cereal, placing a card in the window, tersely describing the superior qualities of the article. Tell the people what you know. At the same time, advertise the article in the newspapers.

And you can make a good show of tomatoes. Pick out your best brand as before and get the agency of it. Boom it in the same way, telling the people why you believe it to be the best. Work it hard.

Some people object to this procedure because it is helping somebody else, the manufacturer of oatmeal, or the canner of tomatoes. Don't be so jealous that you will bite off your nose to spite your face. Use the property of the manufacturer or canner to your own advantage. Connect your name with his brand, and while you are increasing his assets you are also adding to your own.

There is vastly too little of this done and yet it is a

NO MORE EXPENSIVE POLICY.

than this one of general advertising. Most dealers are content to change their general window display once a week, insert a fresh all-over ad. in every issue of the local paper and yet, by the end of the year their assets are little greater, from this source, than they were a twelve-month before. It's time for a change.

There is one firm in Montreal which approaches very near to this policy I advocate; that is, Fraser, Viger & Co. They have the reputation of being the highest-class retail grocers in the Dominion. And by the way, Mr. Fraser, says business was never better. But this firm does not pursue the policy of pushing branded goods; they have merely established the reputation of carrying the best of everything. They don't need to push brands, they have one of their own. Mr. Fraser has control of Gorman's melons for Montreal and advertises the fact. He has insight enough to monopolize a brand when he can, and when he started to handle the melons he immediately wanted entire control of the garden. He realized that it is little use to advertise merely Montreal melons, and he did not want to advertise Gorman's melons for his competitors.

Then, having established our belief in the expediency of taking up special agencies, let us come back to our starting point. How will this effect an interest in the window display. I believe it furnishes the essence of the attraction. A window display of these goods which no other grocer in the town or district handles with the qualities clearly set forth cannot fail to leave its mark on the observer's mind. Moreover, the grocer sets himself up as an authority when he has this card in the window:

This is a display of "Blank" canned tomatoes, which are grown in the best growing district in Canada and packed as no other canners can pack them. We control them for the town.

Such a policy as this cannot fail to put new life into a grocery business. There is too little of this enlightening of the customers going on. Grocers should not fail to talk of the excellencies of their goods; it is news to the consumer. Moreover, do it in the window, from which we reason back to our first contention that grocers should desist from dressing their windows with a general line of goods.

PRICE TICKETS.

Signs and price tickets and signs and yet more price tickets—in the windows—on the goods—everywhere, remarks Printers' Ink. What with new goods arriving shrewd grocer directs his whole business so as to attract some particular class of customer; the three divisions being the wealthy, the middle, and the poorer classes. The man who tries to reach the wealthy and the poor customers at once frequently fails to attract either, and practically never gets both. Sometimes it is possible to reach both the wealthy and the middle classes; but, as a rule, the safe method is to appeal directly to one of these three classes, and have one's window displays as well as one's advertising directed to this end. This method is followed by many of the shrewdest of retail grocers.

Two window displays made by a couple of Toronto grocers a few days ago were striking illustrations of this habit. One Caddy, 30c."; "Strong and Wholesome, 25c." In an especially prominent position was a card, "Special sale: 10 per cent. off on orders of 5 lb. and up."

The other grocer whose window I referred to, seeks his trade from the middle class; from people whose constant aim is to get groceries of good quality at the lowest possible prices. He also was pushing tea a few days ago; as, in fact, he is most of the time. His display was no elaborate arrangement of high-grade goods in fancy canisters and measures, but merely two large teacheests, canted toward the window, and surmounted by two large cards, which read as follows: "London Blend Tea, 25c."; "Thick and Strong, Indian and Ceylon Tea, 5 lb. for $1." In the 25c. caddy was a small card, "It is greatly feared by business men who fear keen competition."

Which of these displays was the better? It is doubtful if an answer could be given, as both are so different, both in their purpose and their effect, that there is no means of comparing their usefulness nor of estimating their results. It is, however, in this case, the grocer who appeals to the middle class that has the bigger trade.

SOAP WINDOWS.

Here are a couple of cuts showing window displays of soap. No. 1 is particularly attractive. The dolls are dressed to represent fairies. The background was made of white cotton pleated. Cut No. 2 on page 51 also shows a soap display, but the idea is one that could be applied to any line of package goods.

A WINDOW FIXTURE.

A good idea for a grocery-window fixture (while not a new one) is made and used in the following way: Have made, say, three or four planed boards, about four feet long and one inch thick. Have the edges bevelled or rounded. Then have them enamelled in white, with gilt panels on edges. Suspend these from the ceiling with brass chain (that does not cost much in any hardware store). On these can be arranged packages or bottles, etc. The rough drawing shows the idea.

A NEW IDEA FOR PUFFING BACKGROUNDS.

The following will explain a simple idea for covering framework for backgrounds. Say, for instance, you have an oblong frame you require puffed. You, first of all stretch white cotton over it tightly, and on this lay and new ways of displaying stock the store is a wilderness, even to regular customers. Price tags and explanatory legends enable them to gather information other than by the crude method of asking questions. When a customer has asked ten questions without buying he feels that his allowance in this kind has been reached, although there are many more things he wants to know. Plain marking permits him to help himself to information. Again, clerks who do not answer several hundred trivial questions each day are sure to be in sweeter temper and the saving of time all around is conducive to quicker sales.

TWO TEA DISPLAYS.

What to display and how to display it depends largely on the class of people it is desired to reach. As a rule, the store appeals particularly to wealthy customers who buy high-grade goods. The firm make a specialty of teas. One of their windows, which is at the corner of the store, was devoted to displaying them. The back of the display was made of tea chests, in front of the centre of which high-class teas in packages and canisters were shown on an adjustable display table. At either side of this table bulk tea was displayed in several measures of various sizes, but all of attractive appearance. In the centre of the foreground was a large urn filled with "Ceylon Orange Pekoe Tips at 80c." The qualities of the tea shown may be judged from the following cards, which were distributed throughout the exhibit: "Choice English Breakfast, 40c."; "Splendid Value, 50c."; "The Finest Obtainable, 60c."; "Our Royal

The show window rouses presumption of what there is within the store—hence, the importance of always having it well dressed and frequently changed.

AN OYSTER TRIM.

As most grocers keep oysters, and as the oyster season is just on, why not make a nice trim to advertise this line? It could be done in this way: Secure from the nearest woods enough green foliage, such as ferns, etc., to cover the bottom of window. Have a painter paint a picture of the interior of an oyster shell. Stretch this on a frame and arrange it on back of window, and festoon spaces around it. Suspend oyster boxes with colored cords from ceiling.

ducts. The same with corn products. Get a lot of corn stalks with the ears of corn on them; arrange them in different ways in the window making a solid backing of them, and in the window show nothing but canned corn, cornmeal, corn starch, etc.—everything made from corn. This is the sort of trim that catches the eye, and is something out of the ordinary common trim of canned goods, etc., as seen in the average grocer's window. An appropriate card, nicely printed, calling attention to your stock of whatever you are showing, should be placed in centre of the trim. Price tickets should always accompany each line of goods. Without them the window is robbed of half of its effectiveness as a sales factor.

A COMMON DISPLAY.

There is no necessity that a display should be common or unattractive because the goods shown possess little attractiveness in themselves. For instance, it is possible to make a fairly interesting display of glass preserving jars. During the past month or so these have been freely shown in the windows, but seldom have the displays been as attractive as they might have been. One display caught my eye the other day. It was one large pyramid of bottles. The inside of the pyramid was made up of the jars in their original packages. In front, at the side, and on top of these individual glasses were arranged so as to hide almost entirely the packages within. The top five bottles were full of fruit, most attractively put up. On each side and at the front of the pyramid, and immediately below the bottles which were filled was a card: "These are tempting, but not more so than you can make yours." A big card near the bottom of the pyramid gave prices, and added: "These prices are rock bottom."

EXTRACTS AND JELLY POWDER.

One of the daintiest windows I have seen for some time was a display of baking powder, extracts, and jellies. The window, which was a corner one, was decorated with flags, the bright colors of which were nicely off-set by the foliage of a large rubber plant at the rear. At the three corners of the triangle, formed by the shape of the window, the baking powder was arranged in tall, conical-shaped piles; in the space within the triangle the jellies, extracts, etc., were displayed in similar cones. Of course, in a display like this, much depends on the ability and artistic sense of the trimmer. It is necessary to make the window enticing so that it will "sell goods." This window was, I should judge, calculated to have that power. It was dainty enough to secure attention, and the done you will have a nice even puffing. Arches, circles and different designs in framework can be covered in this way. The rough sketch shows the idea.

THE ADVANTAGE IN CHANGING DISPLAYS.

The common-place show window may be pertinently compared to a stuffed animal; it does not fool anybody as to its lifelessness. It is also true that a show window that remains unchanged month after month conveys the impression, at least, that the stock has not been turned over for "many moons," and people pass by to the store of the merchant who shows a current change in his window.

Arrange fancy dishes with oyster biscuits here and there. A large card calling attention to your stock of fresh oysters should be placed in the centre. Fowl or fish can be shown in same manner.

A CEREAL DISPLAY.

Should you want to make a display of some food product made from oats, an idea would be to send out to the nearest farm and secure a cart-load of new-grown oats in the sheaf. With this you can cover and line the whole window, walls, background, floor, and all. Stack a few sheafs here and there, and throughout the window arrange the oat-food pro-goods were seasonable and saleable, so should have been in good demand.

A HONEY WINDOW.

Quality is always a big consideration in honey, so the enterprise of a Toronto grocer in paying a rather high price for the honey which won the honors at the Toronto Exhibition, on conditions that he also have the use of the "First prize" ticket for a window display was a bright move, and one which should be suggestive to grocers all over Canada. It should be to a grocer's interest to be known as the one who handles the butter, the cheese, the honey, etc., which took the first prize at the local fair. A good method of displaying any of these goods is to build a false bottom about three feet above the floor, to cover this with dark cloth or crepe tissue, say, brown, dark blue, or black. Arrange the goods to best advantage on top of these. As a rule it is best not to show too much at once. Use a card reading about as follows: "We always keep the best quality, and we keep it at ordinary prices. Just try us once."

CHEWING GUM'S RAW MATERIAL.

By EDWARD H. THOMPSON, U.S. Consul, Progreso, Mexico.

THE so-called chicle gum of commerce is the sap that exudes from wounds made in the rough bark of the tree. This sap, of a milky whiteness and consistency when it first issues, partly coagulates after continued exposure to the air, but becomes, after boiling, a hard heavy mass. It is in this state that it is known to commerce.

The achras sapota (white sapota), known to the Maya Indians of Yucatan as "ya," is the tree that yields

THE MILKY SAP.

It is found growing all over Yucatan, sparsely in the north and west, but in belts of increasing size as one penetrates into the rich northeastern and southern section of the peninsula.

Under favorable conditions, the tree grows to a height of 70 feet or more. With its dark evergreen crown of glossy leaves, the tree is always a prominent landmark in the monotony of the surrounding forest. The fruit much resembles a russet apple in color and general appearance, but has a flavor wholly its own.

HARVESTING THE GUM.

From May to June, bands of men under experienced leaders get together their outfits and go into the deep forests of Yucatan as "chieleros." A chielero is one who extracts the well-known Yucatan gum, or chicle, from the tree, and after several months of work in the tropical forest emerges with the large bricklike blocks of the hardened gum.

A rope, seven-eighths of an inch in diameter and 28 yards long, of special strength and make (for the life of the chielero literally, as well as figuratively, depends upon it), a long heavy knife or machete of special make, pails for the crude sap, and ladles for dipping it are the articles of the individual outfit.

The general camp, or central station, where the chieleros gather at least once a day, contains, besides the usual paraphernalia of a large camp in the woods, large boiling kettles to when brought in by the chieleros, box molds to shape the hardening gum after the cooking process, and scales with which to weigh the formed and dried blocks before it is placed to the credit of the chielero. A large chicle camp in full operation, with its kettles of boiling sap and general air of industry, bears a certain resemblance to a northern maple-sugar camp.

METHODS OF OBTAINING THE GUM.

The gum itself, as I have stated, is obtained by cutting canals in the rough bark, down which the sap flows into the receptacles below. These canals, if cut by unskillful hands, may not only fail to extract the sap, but may ruin the tree as well. A healthy, well-grown tree may be tapped once every three years, but even then, and under expert handling, at least 15 per cent. of the trees will die.

Large tracts of sapota forests near Tuxpan, the original base of supply of the product, have become of late years practically unavailable from this cause. The average tree will yield about six pounds of the gum, but often tree after tree, even in the most favorable season, will be tapped and not yield enough to pay for the work. Why this is so, no one knows, although every chielero has his pet theory to account for it.

THE BOILING PROCESS.

When the sap is collected, it is brought in pails and buckets to the central camp for boiling and molding. The boiling is done by practiced hands, closely watched by vigilant inspectors. This vigilance is necessary to prevent the chieleros introducing foreign materials during the cooking. Stones of various sizes and often dirt are found in the centre of the blocks, despite all care. The men are paid by the pound for the finished product and naturally wish to increase the weight. The gum when undercooked becomes quite hard, but contains a large percentage of water.

First-class well-cooked chicle is nearly white when fresh and clean. Red gum is produced when the gum is overcooked, though some trees yield a gum which has a distinctly red color, even when well baked.

CHARACTERISTICS OF PERFECT CHICLE GUM.

The perfect chicle gum is tenacious, firm, aromatic, and very elastic. It is estimated that there are to-day 700 chieleros in the woods, and that the product this season may reach 1,000,000 pounds.

During the year 1900, 900,000 pounds of chicle were exported from the ports within this consular district. Ninety-eight per cent. went to the United States; the remainder to France, England and Germany.

The finest class of chicle, like the large hammoek of Yucatan, is not known to commerce, being all required for home consumption.

This gum, called "siete" by the natives, is produced by picking the unripe fruit of the sapota and collecting the thick drops of milky white sap that accumulate in the wounds made therein.

The work of collecting the siete is tedious and is generally done by the women, but the product is the perfection of chewing gum. It cannot be purchased for less than $1 a pound, and, as a rule, it costs more. It is highly aromatic, extremely elastic, and snow-white.

CANNED GOODS AND KINDRED TRADES.

OUR CANNED GOODS INDUSTRY.

NO one who is at all conversant with the matter will for one moment claim that the canned fruit and vegetable industry of this country has reached that stage of importance which its possibilities warrant. And yet it has reached that stage where the wisest council would seem to advocate promoters of new enterprises to "make haste slowly."

What is wanted just now is not so much additional factories as the development of those which already exist. How best to do this is a question of prime importance.

THE IMPORTANCE OF QUALITY.

The first essential in canned goods, as in practically everything else, is quality, for it is quality that gives character and character that creates fame.

It does not follow that he who starts out to make quality his motto will encounter no obstacles. On the contrary, he will meet with many deterring influences just as does the man who starts out in life with the purpose of making a good name for himself.

There are, for example, a great many buyers who are looking after

GOODS FOR PRICE.

They pretend that anything as long as it bears the name of tomatoes, corn or peas will do. But even these people are not as blind to quality as they pretend. They know that the same doctrine does not hold good with their customers. But even the men who profess to be wedded to price are not as numerous as they were. Fortunately, the pendulum is again swinging more vigorously in the direction of quality than it was. Consequently the encouragement to those who aim at quality is greater than it was a few years ago. The craze for low-priced goods has about run its day. But what ever craze may be in vogue it in the long run to be jealous of the quality of his output. In no other way can a permanent business be established.

PAYS THE CANNED-GOODS PACKER

Poor quality canned goods may be sold sometimes, but they cannot be sold all the time.

CANNING FACTORIES.

There are in Canada nearly 50 factories turning out canned fruits and vegetables. Nearly all of these are in Ontario, and something like two-thirds of them are members of The Canadian Packers' Association. The capital invested in the canned fruit and vegetable industry is probably in the neighborhood of $800,000. In 1900 the members of The Packers' Association alone put up, all told, 22½ million tins of fruits and vegetables, or about 80 or 90 per cent. of the whole.

At the present stage of the industry it obviously would not be wise to recommend the multiplication of new factories. If those engaged in the industry will devote their energies to improving the quality of the brands that are already on the market the launching of new enterprises will be made less possible. Of all the brands on the market there are probably not at the outside more than a dozen different brands that can be termed first class.

THE SYNDICATE AND PRICES

Another deterrent is price. The pack of canned fruit and vegetables is, for the present campaign at any rate, controlled by the syndicate. As long as it is contented with moderate profits there will be little inducement for the starting of new enterprises. Should it, however, not be contented the omnipresent promoter will be not slow to seize the opportunity for inducing the people in one or more of the many localities, who believe they possess the ideal spot for the establishment of a canned-goods factory, to embark in the enterprise.

Price, too, it will be remembered has a greater effect on the consumption of canned goods than even upon the starting of new factories. When tomatoes, for example, cannot be retailed at three for 25c., the consumption falls off about one-third.

Next to the question of quality there is scarcely anything that demands more attention from the canned-goods packer than

THE EXPORT TRADE

Unless the export trade is developed the industry will be dwarfed all its days. At present the canned fruit and vegetable trade in this country is suffering from overproduction, while our export trade is an insignificant affair. All told, last year it only amounted to $224,927. The exports of canned fruits and vegetables during the last six years were as follows:

|            | CANNED ORPRESERVEDFRUITS. | CANNEDVEGETABLES. |
|------------|-----------------------------------|-----------------------|
| 1896 ..... | $ 86,755                         | $ 3,207              |
| 1897.....  | 141,934                           | 9,664                 |
| 1898.....  | 159,778                           | 10,037                |
| 1899.....  | 293,589                           | 19,671                |
| 1900.....  | 329,405                           | 17,999                |
| 1901.....  | 181,438                           | 43,489                |

The market of our greatest possibilities is, of course, Great Britain. But the packers here may be certain of one thing, that next to providing goods of quality they must in that country. A gentleman who is well informed in regard to the trade there says that without this business cannot be developed. And it is, of course, also essential that a man upon whom reliance can be placed should have charge of the stock. How essential this is certain packers know to their sorrow.

KEEP STOCK

POSSIBILITIES OF EXPORT TRADE.

A gentleman who takes a great deal of interest in the development of the export canned-goods trade with Great Britain, and who is at present in that country, recently wrote us pointing out the possibility of pushing Canadian canned vegetables and fruit there. "But," he concluded, "Canada must waken up to her great opportunity in this country in regard to canned vegetables and fruits. The Yankees have out-distanced us so far that unless we work hard and keep at it we never can overtake them."

NEED OF COOPERATION

A packer recently refused to allow us to publish an item regarding some goods he was exporting to Great Britain. And his objection was based on the plea that his competitors would know what he was doing. The view was not a broad one. Supposing his competitors did discover what he was doing and essayed to emulate him, what of it? Surely he did not imagine that the British market would be overstocked did some of his competitors send a carload or two to London? But whatever he thought he evidently did not realize that the more Canadian canned fruits and vegetables are put upon the British market the quicker will the people there become acquainted with them and the greater will their consumption be.

Canada's Choicest Pickles and Relishes

Quality is the talisman in all specials that bear the brand "STERLING"—the brand made in this factory. Grocers do not need the suggestion that only when good goods are sold customers can a satisfactory and enduring trade be built up. The goods that make "come-back-again" customers are the kind that pay—the only kind. The trade in all parts of the Dominion have tested "STERLING" goods by this standard, and never found them wanting.

Trap Salmon Fishing.

How it is Done in the United States—Agitation for Traps in Canada.

A QUESTION which has for some time been occupying the attention of the people of British Columbia is that regarding traps for salmon fishing. This year it has probably attracted more attention than ever before. The newspapers on the Coast have devoted column upon column of space to the question, and deputations of canners and others have visited the traps in the State of Washington in order that they might become better acquainted with their working.

BASIS OF THE OPPOSITION.

Opposition to the introduction of traps into British Columbian waters has been largely based on the supposition that they would eventually result in the destruction of the salmon, and with it, of course, the salmon-canning industry. But the opposition appears to be gradually disappearing. This may be ascribed to two or three causes.

ARGUMENTS IN FAVOR OF TRAPS

In the first place the traps are much more efficient as fish catchers than the gill nets, to which the fishermen in Canadian waters are confined. The one easily catches its thousands while the expensive one. Take for example, the season which recently closed. The canners on the Sound paid 2½c. per fish; those on the Fraser river 10 to 12½c. This means an increased cost, based on 12½c. fish, of $1.20 per case to the Canadian packer compared with his confrere in the State of Washington, for it takes on an average 12 salmon to a case. As the Sound canneries and the Fraser river canneries both compete for the British market it is evident the former have a decided advantage.

It is true that the Fraser river canners brought a large quantity of salmon over in scows from the traps on the United States side of the Straits of San Juan de Fuca during the past season, paying the duty thereon, and then saving quite a margin, but even then they were not placed in as good a position as their confreres in the neighboring republic.

CANADIAN SALMON IN UNITED STATES TRAPS

Another cause, and a somewhat irritating one, is that the salmon which fill up the traps in the United States are Canadian born. At any rate the most of them are believed to be. The Fraser millions upon millions of salmon fry, which, four years later, wend their way back to the Fraser river, provided they are not caught in traps or nets en route—to deposit their eggs and thus reproduce after their kind. Last year 6,000,000 salmon fry were put into one river alone—the Harrison—from the Fraser river hatchway.

In a word British Columbia produced the maximum of salmon but her canneries only get the minimum of the catch.

TWO CAMPS.

Those who are in favor of the traps are, roughly speaking, divided into two camps. The one believes in making them a permanent institution; the other would only start them with a view, on account of the threatened extermination of the salmon, of inducing the United States to agree to prohibit the use of traps or to provide regulations which would minimize the slaughter of the fish.

PROPOSED LOCATION OF TRAPS.

The idea is to place the traps at the southern end of Vancouver Island. It is held that the school of salmon, when making for the Fraser river, pass there before crossing the Strait of Juan de Fuca and skirting the United States shore. To put them at the mouth of the Fraser would, it is claimed, be of little use, as before reaching there the fish would have run the gauntlet of the traps in the waters of the United States.

DESCRIPTION OF THE TRAPS

The traps as used in the State of Washington are 2,400 feet in length over other is gathering in its hundreds. For example, 50,000 salmon a day is nothing extraordinary for a trap, while a catch of 400 or 500 in a night is pretty good work for one boat with a gill net.

Not only is net fishing a much slower process, but it is also an infinitely more and its tributaries, which are the chief spawning grounds of the salmon are, of course, in Canadian territory. And besides this, the hatcheries, which are under the control of the Dominion Government, every season propagate and plant in the waters of British Columbia

all. The accompanying diagram will give some idea as to their form. The traps are made of nets attached to piles. They do not touch the shore, but only come in as far as salmon are known to swim. To construct a trap, piles are driven in a straight line in a certain direction to the set of the current for a distance of about 2,250 feet, and a net is attached reaching to the bottom of the water. This intercepts the course of the fish, which follow it along, hoping to get out until they enter enclosed places, of which there are two called hearts, each about 40 feet square, and so placed that the long net, which is called the lead, terminates at one of the corners of the first "heart," which is open so as to allow the fish to enter. On the other side of the opening is an arm, called the jigger, which extends at right angles to the line of the lead, and is about 100 feet long with a termination something like a letter L. In fact, the jigger is almost exactly in shape like an L. This is to prevent fish that have followed up the lead from getting away from the opening of the heart. The fish swim against the current and when they have worked along the jigger, only to find their way blocked, instead of turning down and swimming with the current, they work back again to the mouth of the heart.

THE HEART.

Having entered the heart, they work their way along its sides until they come to the corner opposite that at which they entered, where they find another opening leading into the second heart, in the opposite corner of which there is an opening leading into an enclosed place 40 feet square, called the pot. This opening is 8 feet square, where it leaves the heart, but contracts to very much less.

THE POT.

Arrived in the pot and still seeking a way to get on his journey, the bewildered fish finds a small opening in the side of the pot which leads into the "spiller," and once in the spiller he stays there until the tug boat comes along side with its brailer and lifts him and his comrades by hundreds at a time out into scows. The spiller is 40 feet square and holds many thousands of fish. Fifty thousand is an average lot to be taken out at one time.

THE BRAILER.

with which the fish are taken out of the spiller, is a stout net, weighted by chains placed at the sides. It scoops the fish out and dumps them in the scow. Fish can be kept in a spiller with safety to themselves for from 10 days to two weeks; after the shorter of the two periods, they become exhausted by their efforts to escape and die. It is rarely necessary to keep them so long, but if the trap is full it can be opened so that the fish which would otherwise be caught can pass through on their way. Hence there is little loss from dead fish and none have to be thrown away because they cannot be used. The canner takes out what fish he can use in a day and leaves the rest until another time.

COST OF TRAPS.

It costs from $5,000 to $10,000 to build a trap, and considerable to maintain, as it is deemed economical to take up the piles every season and scrape them clean to prevent the accumulation of barnacles whereby the nuts might be cut.

There are several hundred traps in the United States waters through which the salmon pass in going from Canadian water off Vancouver Island to Canadian water in the Gulf of Georgia.

REGULATIONS TO PREVENT DESTRUCTION.

It is held by those in favor of the traps that if a weekly close season were observed, during which the salmon would be permitted to proceed unmolested to the spawning grounds, danger of the extermination would be obviated. It is also pointed out that the Strait of Juan de Fuca is 10 to 12½ miles wide and that therefore a great number of the salmon would never touch the traps on either shore.

BLUEBERRY PACKING IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

An Interesting Industry.

THE little modest blueberry does not amount to a great deal on the bush, but thanks to the development of the canned goods industry it is gradually taking a no mean place in the ranks of staple food products.

And in no part of the Dominion is this more marked than in the famous Miramichi district in New Brunswick. In fact, it has become numbered among the important industries of that district.

WHERE PACKED.

It is approximately 20 years since the industry started on its career in that part of the Dominion. Among the places in New Brunswick at which canneries are situated which put up blueberries are Chatham, Loggieville, Tracadie, Richibucto, Pokeshaw, etc.

HOW GATHERED.

The blueberries are gathered on the plains which are so common in that part of the country. The gathering is done nearly altogether by children and women, who earn quite a little money thereby. "It is like found money to many of them," once remarked a canner to me, "for those who pick the berries would be doing little or nothing else at that time." The pickers are paid at the rate of 1½c. per lb.

THE OUTPUT.

One of those engaged in the packing of blueberries told me that he estimated the output of the canned article in New Brunswick at about 40 carloads a year, or somewhere about 450,000 tins. This season the

PACK WAS LIGHT

in the Miramichi district on account of the drought. It is estimated, for instance, that one firm that has of late years put up about 10,000 cases of blueberries has this season only turned out about 2,000 cases. As those in the grocery trade know, blueberries are packed in 2-lb. and gallon tins

WHERE SHIPPED.

The greater part of the blueberries packed in New Brunswick are exported to the United States, although they are well known in the western Provinces of the Dominion.

THE UNITED STATES TARIFF.

Business with the United States is, however, done under a great disadvantage, the Customs duty being no less than 72 per cent. At the last annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade the excessive duty that is levied in the United States came in for some special reference, the feeling being that with even a moderate duty the export trade in blueberries would increase materially.

INCREASED CONSUMPTION.

The consumption of blueberries is undoubtedly on the increase in Canada as elsewhere. "A few years ago," remarked a packer, "the wholesale trade in Canada, all told, would scarcely buy a carload during the season. Now some houses take a carload each."

One unsatisfactory feature about the industry just now is the small profit which accrues to the packer, due largely to the high United States duty, part of which he at any rate pays. E.

Canned Goods in the Retail Store.

HINTS ON THE PURCHASE, CARE AND SALE.

NE of the most important considerations in the business of many retail grocers, especially during the fall months, is the canned goods business. The sale of this line has become such an important factor in grocery retailing that the merchant who buys, handles and sells the goods to best advantage finds they contribute largely to his aggregate revenue.

A representative of "The Canadian Grocer" interviewed several of the leading grocers of Toronto in regard to their opinions as to the proper time to purchase, how to judge of quality and how to handle, push and sell them to best advantage. Some of the answers given will be found of much interest and to the grocer, able and willing to take advantage of the suggestions thrown out, of considerable value.

SELECTION OF BRANDS.

Swan Bros., Toronto, are in the habit of buying a year's supply of canned goods at one time.

"We have found this method the most satisfactory," said Mr. Henry Swan. "Some years we may have lost by buying in this way, but everything considered, it has been most satisfactory."

"Do you stand by any particular brands?"

"Yes; we stand by the good ones. We are constantly weeding out the poorer brands. We find out easily enough each year which brands give the greatest satisfaction. When these are offered again we sample them carefully, and if they are up to the standard we again purchase them. Those which have not been satisfactory we do not again buy."

"We treat new brands with caution. It is better to let the other fellow try them, as few new brands are up to the standard of the best lines. The man who experiments with every new line is like the man who sets out to discover whether a new fungus is a toadstool or a mushroom. If the man dies the world knows it was a toadstool; if he lives he has discovered a mushroom. New lines of canned goods may be bought cheaper than the most reputable brands. If they prove good, other dealers are safe in trying them; if they prove bad, he alone bears the loss."

CARE OF CANNED GOODS.

"How do you keep your canned goods?"

"The only necessity is to keep them in a cool, dry place. We, of course, keep a plentiful supply on our shelves. In removing them from the cases to our shelves we reject every can which is swelled in any way. All cans are again examined before sent out to customers. It is easy to distinguish the swelled cans. A safe way is to lay a pencil across the edges of the top. If the can is swelled to touch the pencil, except at the edges, beware of it."

"By thus carefully watching our goods we have very few complaints. We are constantly warning our customers against swollen cans and impressing them that by dealing with a well trained grocer they are insuring themselves from danger of poisoning. This has its effect, too."

"What do you do with the swelled cans?"

"The swelling, you know, is proof of fermentation. This irretrievably spoils canned fish, meats, etc. We have found that by 'boiling over' canned fruits they can be made fit for use. These might be taken home and used, but they should never be given to a customer, even at a reduced price, as they might not pay proper attention to them and might suffer in consequence."

"Do you ever demonstrate canned goods?"

"No; I consider demonstrating a picayune method of getting business and never resort to the practice. We sell goods of known reputation, of worthy quality and at a fair price. That pleases our customers. Consequently, it satisfies us."

WILL BUY CAREFULLY THIS YEAR.

"I have generally purchased our season's supply of canned goods early in the season," said Mr. D. Bell, 702 Yonge street. "This year, however, I think I will buy as I need to, as there are no inducements to buy early. In past years prices have been put at a basis which made it appear likely that I would have to pay higher prices later. This year the crop of vegetables has been large and I am confident there has been a good pack and that prices are not likely to advance materially above the present basis, and so I am of the opinion that it would be better to take the use of my money than to lock it up in canned goods in my cellar."

"In buying, we take the brands which have proven most satisfactory. Some times we sample before we buy."

CAUSE OF COMPLAINTS.

"How about complaints?"

"These come chiefly from three sources: swelled cans or fermented product; light weight or bad color. The first difficulty we overcome by never sending out swelled tins. When five or six complaints come in regarding the quality or quantity put up in tins of any brand, we take it for granted that the brand is not up to standard, and sell it at a reduced price, and do not buy it again. We only want to sell goods of sound, ripe appearance, and cans which are full to the top."

WINDOW DISPLAYS.

"To push canned goods we make displays both in our windows and in the interior of our store. We always display them on the ridge above the shelving. This adds to the attractiveness of the store and, to some extent, increases the sales of canned goods."

GAUGING WANTS OF CANNED GOODS

"I generally buy a carload early in the season," said Frank W. Johnston, Davenport Road. "This year I have not decided yet, but I will probably buy my vegetables in the usual way. I judge from my sales of fresh fruit what my sales of canned fruits should be, and stock up accordingly. I intend to buy more peaches than usual this year, as my customers put down fewer peaches than usual during the past season."

"How do you keep canned goods?"

"In the cellar, which is cool and dry. Of course, I have some of every line on my shelves, but no more than are necessary, as I do not like to send out any canned goods with fly marks or sun-faded labels. I sometimes make window displays, but never leave them in the window over two weeks."

"Do you have any complaints as to quality?"

"Few. But when I have, I make good for all bad goods sent out. My customers are taught to expect everything they get from me to be thoroughly sound."

DOMESTIC AS IMPORTED CANNED FISH.

"The only way to push canned goods is to show them and talk about them," said D. J. Kelly, of Kelly Bros., Queen street east. "We find that our customers are ready to buy on our recommendation, so do not go to the trouble of demonstration, except when a new line comes on the market. When canned beets were first put on we opened a few cans of them to show them to our cus-

The following from the advertisement of a prominent wholesale grocer should be read and pondered by every dealer:

“Some grocers succeed where others seem to work just as hard and yet fail to achieve much—it is just as important to know what to push as it is how to push—pushing pure and pleasing products produces prosperity, but pushing poor stuff drives trade away.”

It pays infinitely better to push a baking powder like “Royal,” an article of known merit, whose good qualities are recognized and appreciated by all consumers.

Royal Baking Powder is easy to sell, and when sold there is always a pleased purchaser.

Royal Baking Powder is largely advertised and that helps the dealer; but a pleased purchaser is the best advertiser for your store, because she will recommend to others that dealer who has pleased her.

Royal Baking Powder is the highest class baking powder, made from pure cream of tartar, and absolutely free from alum or other harmful ingredient.

tomers. We are careful buyers, and our customers depend on us, as there is seldom cause for complaint and these we always make good, getting credit for the same from the wholesale house."

"Are all lines equally satisfactory?"

"Vegetables, fruit and salmon are all right, but it is about time we were told why Canadian fish, such as sardines, should be inferior to the imported article. The Canadian goods are not up to the standard of the latter in any respect. Why is it? Are the fish inferior? Is poorer oil used? Or, is it that the packers are not as skillful as the European packers? It's up to the packers to explain. They put up their goods in packages that are attractive enough. They have the advantage, as far as quantity is considered, but we cannot get anything like the prices for the home However, I am not a buyer. I prefer to let the other fellows hold the goods, believing I can get them for less money later than I can now. It is the syndicate that have put up prices, but there are jobbers in Toronto who are holding enough canned vegetables to break the market, and are fully determined to do it. Other lines than corn, tomatoes and peas I always buy as I need."

"Have you any preference as to brand?"

"Most assuredly. The cardinal principle of a good trade in canned goods is to get

BRANDS THAT PLEASE THE PEOPLE

"You tried a private brand of your own once, did you not?"

"Believing that new goods would be higher I bought enough of last year's goods several weeks ago, when they were going begging, to last me through this season. As I got good brands I know they will retain their quality all right. By having some surplus capital and taking advantage of the most favorable opportunity one is able to strike the market right by studying the conditions carefully. I have done so for several seasons. For instance, this year, we sold our last five cases of salmon at $1.60 to a wholesale firm who had run out and needed them to fill immediate wants, and within a week of this sale the same house delivered us new season's goods at $1.42½c. By striking the market right, we have been able to sell "Horseshoe" salmon at 15c. per tin for five years, while the price has jumped product that we have to charge for the foreign. If the Canadian fish packer could improve the quality of his product he would not only get better prices, but would find a greatly extended demand."

THE MARKET TOO HIGH.

"My purchases of canned goods at this time of year," said W. J. Sykes, College street, "depend entirely on circumstances, the chief consideration being price and supply. Generally, I have found it best to buy enough to last through the season. Sometimes I buy more than I can possibly need. One year I had fully 5,000 cases and came out very well on the transaction. This year, however, I am not going to buy enough canned vegetables to last me through the season. The market is too high. There was a large surplus stock. The crop of corn and tomatoes has been excellent, and the pack large. Besides, the consumption, especially of corn, has been considerably decreased during the past year or two because the majority of buyers have had more money to spend, and have preferred fresh vegetables. Peas may continue firm in price.

"I did, and found it a good move in some respects. But everything considered—expense, trouble, results—I decided it did not offer sufficient returns for what I put into it, and have not repeated the experiment. But I stand by the brands of highest quality."

HINTS ON BUYING CORN.

"What are the means of judging quality?"

"Tomatoes should be solidly packed (not too much liquid); sweet and of extra good red color. Corn should be tender, white and of good flavor. Peas should be tender without softness, and should retain their natural color and flavor as much as possible. Then, of course, the cans should be well filled, but never swelled. This one can depend on if one buys a good brand. Out of 200 cases of one brand I had last season there were only five tins which I found necessary to reject. Other years I had similar results with the same brand."

every way during that time. And it has been much the same with other lines."

CHUTNEE PRAISED BY ROYALTY.

Canadian food-products have proved their high qualities in many ways and under many different circumstances, but it is open to question whether any other Canadian product has received praise from so many persons in high estate as has been received by Canadian Tomato Chutnee, manufactured by Mrs. M. P. Card, Guelph, Ont. Among those who have commended it highly are H. R. H. Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, the late Sir John A. Macdonald, and the City Carlton Club, London, Eng. The merit of this condiment has not been appreciated only by persons such as the above, but has met with such popular approval that Mrs. Card's business has steadily grown during the eight years of its existence. Last year Mrs. Card extended the scope of her business by starting to manufacture pickles. This branch has also proven very successful, the output this year being double that of last year.

3 PROFITS TO 1

The up-to-date grocer knows which is better,
To make one profit slowly or two profits quickly.
He stocks the highest quality goods,
His trade increases,
His expenses per sale decrease with the increasing business,
His profits multiply by the reduced expenses per sale,
His capital outlay is smaller on the same volume of trade.
He is careful to purchase stock fulfilling these conditions.

Montreal Retailers Discuss the Propriety of Dealing in Them.

DURING the past few months considerable dissatisfaction has been expressed by wholesalers and retailers alike on account of the meagre profits afforded by trading in canned goods. There is no doubt that heavy losses were the chief result of speculative operations last year, and in spite of the steadying influence of the lately formed syndicate, the experience of the past 12 months is having appreciable effect on retail policy this fall. To get a fair and general idea of the attitude of retail grocers to the question, "The Canadian Grocer" has had interviews with some of the leading members of the Montreal trade during the past week. It will be readily seen that the purchases which grocers make at this time of the year must be appreciably less this fall than for many seasons. This refusal to buy is accounted for not only because of the losses incurred on heavy purchases last year, but it would seem that various other considerations must enter into a city grocer's ideas of the amount of canned goods he can sell in a twelve-month, and these, too, have, in cases, tended to lessen early purchases.

FUTURES DO NOT PAY.

Ald. R. Turner, the lately appointed President of The Retail Grocers' Association, who keeps a prosperous store on Wellington street, and supplies the working classes, was the first to be interrogated.

"No," said Mr. Turner, "I have not bought nearly so many canned goods this year as last. I find it does not pay. I have never made money on holding stocks and it seems every year I can buy tomatoes and corn as cheap in June as I can in October or September. This year I could have bought a good deal lower. Then what is the use of a grocer paying interest on the capital invested, meeting insurance charges, and losing on exploded cans, to reap no reward? I have decided to discontinue the policy and have bought hardly one-half of what I did last year for early delivery."

AN OBJECT LESSON

Another officer of the association who handles large quantities; in fact, has hitherto bought by the carload, spoke in the same strain. "Last year I bought 2,000 cases. This year I have ordered only 700. To me, the course of last year's grocery markets was an object lesson. I have come to the conclusion that it is little use to speculate in grocers' supplies—far better to buy lightly and often. Suppose a merchant lays in a carload of canned goods. If the price goes up, he raises his price, and stops consumption, invariably, and he has stock left. Look at Valencia raisins last year! So he makes no money on a rise. If the price falls, his small competitor comes down; he must do the same and thus he loses. I have come to the conclusion that a grocer cannot make money on heavy fall purchase of canned goods, and am acting accordingly."

THEY MAKE MONEY ON FUTURES.

But they don't all think alike. Mr. Fraser, of Fraser, Viger & Co., says he has bought more heavily this year than last, because his business will be greater.

"Did you lose on last year's purchases?"

"No; I never dropped my price; my customers did not ask for reductions. I got my anticipated profit, cleared out about all my goods, so how can I complain?"

"The fact is, I must buy ahead, in order to get the goods I want. My business is founded on the fact that I carry only the best goods and consequently I must order what brands I wish before they are all contracted for. My buying policy is moulded by the opportunities to secure the best goods, not by the ups and downs of the market. So this year you find me buying even more heavily than last fall."

OBJECTS TO EARLY NAMING OF PRICES.

Mr. Paul, the St. Catharine street grocer, who also does a high-class trade, spoke much in the same strain.

"I have always been strongly opposed to this idea of getting out prices so early. The canners are quoting prices on their pack before the seed is sown. Why not wait at least till they have an idea of the size of the pack and get out prices that will stand the test of the real market? As it is, they force us people who want the best goods, to buy early, which is not right."

"This year I have hopes that The Dominion Syndicate will give a ballast to the market. They are limiting the pack and promise advances rather than declines. So you can understand why my purchases are as large this fall as last."

DISGUSTED WITH SPECULATING

Mr. H. Graham, another St. Catharine street grocer, has come to the conclusion that he will discontinue his heavy fall buying. "There is nothing in it for me. I have tried speculating on canned goods, have never made a success of it, and now give it up in disgust. Last year was a finisher, for after carrying the goods eight months, I found I could buy for less money than my stock cost me in the first place. What would a sensible man do under such circumstances? No; I have bought but few canned goods this year and do not intend to load myself up with them. I'm willing to take chances on a rising market and mean to escape a falling one."

THE SUPPLY OF FRESH VEGETABLES

"At any rate, I find my sales of canned goods falling off. I now get fresh tomatoes nearly all the year round and I can have fresh beans whenever I want them, grown right in Canada, too. Lettuce is in my store all winter and celery nearly all the time. My customers will pay the price for these luxuries and have ceased to use the ordinary canned goods. Same way with canned fruits and table raisins. Oranges can now be had any day in the year, as well as bananas. Californian fruit comes in early as well as pineapples. This list of fresh goods in winter is being constantly added to and each addition signals a drop in canned vegetables and fruits. Stores that cater to the working people, no doubt, have a different story to tell, but such has been my experience. I still have canned vegetables in my store that I ordered over a year ago. Is that business? No; my purchases of canned goods hereafter will be frequent and light."

PRICES HIGH EARLY IN THE SEASON

Mr. Dionne, across the street, was the last approached. "My purchases are not so heavy as last year for two reasons. First, the market seems to be always high at the beginning of the year and low at the end, and, secondly, last year, some goods went bad on me. This fall I am buying only reputable brands and in lighter supply."

A summary of these interviews would indicate that, on the whole, early contracts placed with wholesalers must show an appreciable decrease from those of last year. The only merchants who appear to be buying as heavily as ever are those catering to the millionaires, who must have their favorite brands regardless of price.

THE BRITISH DUTY ON SUGAR

and on Articles in which it is used.

WHEN some months ago the British Government imposed a duty on sugar, molasses and syrup there were few people, indeed, who realized the extent to which it would affect a great many other articles into the manufacture of which sugar enters. The list of goods of this kind upon which a duty is now levied is quite extensive. Subjoined is the rate of duty on sugar, according to the several degrees of polariscopic test and also the rate upon the articles into the manufacture of which sugar enters. We believe this is the first time the list has been published in Canada, and our readers will, no doubt, find it interesting, while to those engaged in the export trade on articles therein enumerated it will possibly also be interesting:

Canadian Coats of Arms

An Interesting Subject and a Line which has proved Profitable to Some Merchants.

HERALDRY, as we know it, dates back to the 13th century, although, in much earlier times, badges and devices were made use of. St. Paul went in a vessel whose badge was Castor and Pollux, and the Roman soldiers had their eagles and standards. In the middle ages, heraldry had reached such a stage of perfection that even the unlearned could read its lessons, and understand its meanings. While modern heraldry often does not conform as strictly as might be wished to the scientific principles laid down in the past, still every coat of arms has a tale to tell, a tale which can, with a little attention, be easily read, and which is usually worth reading.

All coats of arms are shown on a shield, for in the days of knighthood the coat of arms served practically the purpose which the visiting card serves in modern civilization—to identify the bearer. The colors used on the shield may be gold, silver, blue, red, black, green, purple, or one of several kinds of fur. One or more of these colors may appear upon a shield. The division lines may be horizontal or vertical, or crosswise and practically in any part of the shield. The first additions to the shield were originally bars, chevrons and crosses of many different forms. Later, these were found insufficient to provide every one with a disarms of Great Britain and the British Empire—until a more comprehensive one is introduced.

In the first and fourth quarters are shown three golden lions passant guardant. Passant describes the attitude of the lion when walking with three paws on the ground, the fourth raised. The tail is always curled over the back, and the head is always to the right. Guardant shows that the lion is looking out from the shield towards the spectator. A lion passant is the emblem of resolution, and guardant, of prudence.

The ground is red; a fundamental rule of heraldry is that a metal must not appear upon a metal—but upon a color.

In the second quarter are the arms of Scotland—a red lion rampant upon a and France (three fleurs-de-lis), were quartered in the first and third quarters, Scotland and Ireland occupying the same positions as now. The Tudors bore the Arms of England and France only, the latter having been introduced by Edward III. in 1310. Previous to that time the three lions of England were used alone from the time of Henry II. William the Conqueror and the two following Sovereigns, used two lions only. The English lions have thus remained practically unchanged for nearly a thousand years.

DOMINION OF CANADA.

Passing now to the Arms of the Dominion of Canada—as usually represented—the shield comprises the separate arms of the seven Provinces. Strictly speaking, however, the Arms of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick only should appear on the shield, for the grant of armorial bearings made by Her Majesty's warrant of November 20, 1869, showed these only. Since that time, as gold ground within a treasured border. A lion rampant is shown standing erect on his two hind legs with one of his forelegs elevated; his tail is also elevated. The lion rampant is the emblem of magnanimity.

In the third quarter are the arms of Ireland; a golden harp, with silver strings, on a blue ground.

The Royal Arms have as supporters the Lion and Unicorn. These are nearly always incorrectly represented. The lion on the right of the shield is of gold, rampant guardant, wearing an Imperial crown. The unicorn on the left, should be of silver (nearly always represented as of gold), with teeth, claws, hoofs, and mane of gold; round the neck, a golden coronet composed of crosses and fleurs-de-lis, and from this a golden chain passing between the forelegs and over the back.

The Royal Arms, as just described, date back only to the accession of Queen Victoria. From 1801, the Arms of Hanover appeared in the centre, but on the death of William IV., the possession of Hanover passed from the British Crown. From the accession of George I. to 1801 distinctive coat of arms, so charges were introduced, comprising every description of bird, fish, animal (many of them imaginary), and the common objects of everyday life.

Two or more coats of arms may be combined to form one, the process being called quartering. Two such quartered shields may be combined, and so on, until we obtain 64, or even more quarterings.

FLEUR-DE-LYS.

The Fleurs-de-lys was the emblem of the King of France from the time of Clovis, who bore a shield covered with golden lilies. Charles VI. reduced the number to three, to symbolize, it is supposed, the Holy Trinity. With the passing of the Monarchy in France, the fleurs-de-lys ceased to be used. It is still used by the Orleans family, who claim the French throne. When Canada was colonized by France, and later, when ceded to Great Britain, the fleurs-de-lys was the emblem of France, and for that reason is dear to the hearts of French-Canadians.

MONTREAL.

This shield is divided into four parts by a cross. In the upper portion appears a rose (emblem of England), in the lower portion, a beaver (representing Canada), on the left-hand side, a thistle (for Scotland), and on the right-hand side, a spray of shamrocks (representing Ireland). Strangely enough, there is no French emblem. Motto: "Concordia Salus" (Safety in Harmony).

The maple leaf is most frequently used as Canada's national emblem. The beaver is sometimes used.

This industry was originated some 10 years ago, in Montreal, by Mr. Richard Hemsley. At first he was able to sell over his own counter the whole product. To-day, there are at least five firms in the Dominion actively engaged in this manufacture of heraldic jewellery, which is shipped in large quantities to the United States, Europe, and practically every part of the civilized world. It is gratifying to our national pride to know that we have a national industry, original with us, in which we have nothing to fear from foreign competition, either in novelty or elegance of design, or in price.

DRUMMOND HENDERSON.

HOW SUCCESSFUL TRADESMEN CHOOSE THEIR SHOPS.

THE success-ful tradesman of to-day must be a man of brains. Some of the kings of retail trade are indeed men of that shrewdness and indomitable energy which, in combination, amount to something like genius. They have reduced shopkeeping to a fine art, or, if you prefer it, to an almost exact science.

Take the case of a widely-known firm of tobacconists. They have shops in every crowded thoroughfare, and the pains they take in the selection of a site for a new shop are infinite.

Having had their eye on a street for a possible new branch, they do not open the shop forthwith. Before doing that they find out things. So their first step is to post a man in the street, whose task is to take a census of the people who pass by on each side. For a week this man keeps careful count of the pedestrians, marks the places where they cross from one side to another, and also keeps a sharp eye on the number of people entering the

NEAREST TOBACCO ESTABLISHMENTS.

This particular firm has a great penchant for corner shops, and pays strict attention to the construction of the doors. Instead of the old-fashioned corner door, they have one placed on each street which the shop faces, with a showcase between the two. A shop adjoining the entrance to a busy railway station is their ideal. Next to that a site close to a theatre is most desirable. "Don't wait for people to come to your shop, but take your shop where the people are," seems to be their motto. A considerable staff of men is employed, especially for the selection and examination of sites.

"In establishing a shop, the importance of the site is one that cannot be over-estimated," remarked a director of a huge drapery firm. "Just as a doctor feels your pulse, and finds out the weak points in your constitution, so does the successful tradesman inquire into the condition of his possible customers. When we contemplate opening a new branch we send out scouts to spy out the land. In every district there is always a favorite street for promenading, and for preference we select the most crowded part of this. Our scouts keep close observation on what the local people buy at other shops. In addition, they attend concerts, and other entertainments, and even churches and chapels, in order and millinery most in vogue among the inhabitants.

TO STUDY THE DRESSES

"Then we make the most careful inquiries among newsagents regarding the papers they sell most of. A neighborhood may be known by the papers it reads. A big sale of fashion papers is a sure indication that the buyers pay considerable heed to their raiment."

"Our chief desire," observed one of the chief officials of a big dairy company, who have depots of tea and other light refreshments all over London, "is to secure shops close to big blocks of offices, or other business premises, employing a large number of people. We depend more on regular than on casual customers. And business men, slipping out for a few minutes, don't want to go far to get lunch. They turn to the first decent place they find.

"And here I don't mind giving a hint to any of your readers who wish to make a fortune. Get permission to start tea-rooms in the principal blocks of offices in the city, such as Mansion House Chambers, Leadenhall Buildings, or Temple Chambers. A tea-place to which men could resort without troubling to change their office coats or put on their hats would make thousands.

"Other spots where we establish shops, as far as possible, are at tram termini, and places where omnibuses drop and take up passengers."

A very well-known gentleman who has an infinite number of provision shops all over the country pays great attention to the selection of sites. So important does he consider this subject that some years ago he who suggested a site for a new branch which he approved of would be placed in the position of manager as soon as the shop should be opened.

A large boot-manufacturing company do something of the same sort now. To any person suggesting an approved position for a new shop, either in London or in any important provincial town, they supply, free of cost, one pair of boots per annum for life.

"When we contemplate opening a new branch," said the secretary of a huge tailoring company, "we insist on a street with a very wide pavement in front of the shop. We believe in a good show in the window, and you can't get the full effect of this in a narrow thoroughfare. We also avoid opening near a fishmonger's or butcher's, as our experiences shows us that very few people like to linger in the vicinity of such places. On the other hand, being adjacent to a florist's shop is a great help to us. I don't know exactly why, but I have often thought that it may be because, after looking at beautiful flowers, men become imbued with a desire to make themselves look more presentable. And, when in that mood, what more natural than to turn into an adjoining tailor's."—Answers, London.

BEST LIKED WHERE BEST KNOWN.

My largest sales for "UNION BLEND" TEA are in St. John. This goes to show that my trade is best where I am best known, and that I get most customers at the point where buyers have the best facilities for comparing what they get of me with what they obtain of other dealers. Over 250 retail grocers in St. John alone sell "UNION BLEND" TEA. If you're not selling "UNION BLEND" it's your fault, not mine—you know it's the best seller, and I'm here to sell it.

WHERE AND HOW SIR THOMAS LIPTON BEGAN BUSINESS.

TALK with a successful man is usually interesting. And the greater his success the greater is the interest. If the successful man is at all communicative one gathers knowledge as well as pleasure from conversing with him. Opportunities for conversation with men who stand out prominently as the world's greatest merchants, statesmen, and soldiers are but limited, but thanks to the press the many have often the opportunity of reading what the few have gathered from such conversations or interviews. In a recent issue of Harmsworth's Magazine, there was printed an interesting interview which Charles E. Bateman had with Sir Thomas Lipton, who is one of the most successful of modern business men. The subject of the interview was Sir Thomas Lipton's "First Shop."

"Here," writes Mr. Bateman, in his introductory remarks, "I am asking Sir Thomas about the little first shop in a minor Glasgow street—the humble beginning of latter day wealth and world-wide commerce."

"What induced you to become a provision dealer?" I asked Sir Thomas as he leaned back in his rocking chair.

"Well, you see," he replied, "my father and mother were formerly in the line. When I came back to Glasgow from America a provision dealer's business seemed to offer me the best chances of success. My parents had a little general shop in another part of the city, where, as a boy, I often assisted my mother. She was a shrewd, businesslike woman, and the best of mothers. I often used to say to her, 'Never mind, mother, the time will come when I shall be able to give you a carriage.' She used to smile then, little dreaming that it would come true. It afforded me one of the greatest pleasures of my life to surround her with luxuries in the closing days of her life.

"When I came back from America, after my first trip there, I decided to settle down in a little shop situated in Stobcross street, Glasgow. That early journey to America did not prove as successful as I at first anticipated, but the experience I then gained became of great usefulness to me in later years."

"I thought your first venture was in High street, Sir Thomas?"

"I went there later on to open my second shop, but that in Stobcross street proved the beginning. It was a lock-up shop under tenement buildings, and I felt exceedingly proud of it. I made it my business to keep the place thoroughly smart and spotlessly clean. You know there is a great deal in the appearance a shop possesses and the treatment customers receive when they come in for purchases. I often used to say that a poor woman's 20 shillings is just as good to the shopkeeper as the rich lady's pound, and that both should receive equal attention.

"Yes," said Sir Thomas reflectively, "I early in life believed in advertising." Turning to one of his managers who was present he asked, "Have you a copy of those £1 notes I issued?" To me he explained that these formed an early course), when the matter was brought to his knowledge, voluntarily withdrew them.

"I had observed in America the power of advertising, and decided that if ever I had the capital I would be a big advertiser myself. When I started, however, I only got out a handbill concerning my special goods, and had it distributed to people as they passed my store. I did not put much matter on my bills; just a few facts and figures to catch the eye. Then after a time I advertised in the newspapers. My first advertisement cost me 7s. 6d., and drew attention to some extra fine bacon and ham that I had just purchased.

"When I started I determined to exhibit some specially striking and amusing cartoons in my windows referring to the goods I sold. One which attracted a from the trade in every section of Canada is continuously on the increase? Because it is growing in favor with the tea drinking public. True it is that endeavors are being made to make the public think that Japan Tea is inferior to other teas—but the greater the efforts, the faster it grows in favor with Canadians—it's because of its superior qualities. The grocers who are on the alert to win a good tea trade and, incidentally, good profits, fully appreciate the advantages of selling JAPAN TEA.

"At first I was my own shopman and errand boy, for I could not afford to pay for assistance in those days."

"Is it true that the late Mr. Biggar, M.P., financed you, Sir Thomas?"

"No," he said, smiling that peculiarly frank Irish smile. "I suppose the story got round owing to my Irish associations, but as a matter of fact I never had a partner until my business was turned question was warbled by that popular Scotch comedian, J. C. Macdonald, and every gamin in Glasgow knew it by heart. Thus ran the chorus:

That's the stuff to cram.

We trust the advertisement was none the less effective for being gratuitous.

A USE FOR BARREL HOOPS AND HEADS.

A correspondent of "The Canadian Grocer" gives the following suggestions to retailers re the use of barrel heads and hoops. "Don't throw them away. You can use them to advantage in your business. Take hoops, for instance, either large or small, and wrap them up with colored material, such as cheese cloth; suspend them in your window or store, and you have an excellent contrivance for displaying many lines—one much superior to leaving them under counters, or in boxes on shelves. If you want to sell anything it must be placed where it will catch the public eye.

"Take your barrel heads, fasten the parts securely by nails or glue, then cover them on both sides with material as suggested for hoops; fasten on your goods with braid or elastic, so as not to injure them; then hang up the display as you would a picture, in some conspicuous place. Goods shown in this way should be frequently changed to prevent them from becoming shopworn by too much exposure.

"Some time ago I placed these ideas before a large retail merchant as a means of displaying brushes of different kinds, which he formerly kept under the counter and in boxes. After trying the scheme for a few weeks he found his sales of brushes to be on the increase. This proved to be an all-round advantage.

into a company. In the early days I had many offers of partnership, but I always refused them. I determined to remain master of my own business and to find the capital for each extension out of the profits. When I got my money back from Stobcross street I managed to open another establishment in High street, Glasgow, in a better neighborhood.

"My two principles in starting business were to make each transaction a cash one, and to abolish the middleman. I had a curious experience once when I was buying butter in Ireland. My agent bought too freely for my limited resources, and I scarcely knew where to obtain sufficient to pay the bill. Then it occurred to me that I might get something on my silver English lever. So I sent it across to the pawnbroker and raised 30s. upon it, which enabled me to provide the balance of the account and keep my engagement. I very soon afterwards redeemed my watch," he added, smiling. "It was the effort to save the middleman which sent me to Ireland for butter, eggs and bacon."

"What is your recipe for success, Sir Thomas?"

"It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rules, but I have often said that if a man wants to get on he must work hard, deal honestly, use careful judgment, do unto others as he would be done by, advertise freely and judiciously, and success is bound to follow."

It is not the lot of many men, unpopular statesmen excluded, to have comic songs devoted to their exploits. Sir Thomas Lipton, however, years ago achieved such distinction. The ditty in he commenced on a large scale by his notable gift of £25,000 to the Lord Mayor's fund, which was being raised at the suggestion of the present Queen, then Princess of Wales, to give London's poor a share in the Diamond Jubilee festivities. It is an old story how Sir Thomas—then Mr.—Lipton spontaneously handed a cheque for that large amount to Sir George Faudel Phillips, and in a moment placed the Queen's generous intent on a sound, practical basis.

Thus started as a philanthropist, Sir Thomas did not turn back. A few months afterwards he conceived the idea of the Alexandra Trust, and by a preliminary gift of £100,000 commenced what is hoped will prove a far-reaching scheme for the provision of cheap and wholesome food to the poor and industrious workers in cities.

Whether the idea pays or not scarcely matters; Sir Thomas balances any loss,

The customers needed the brushes; the grocer had larger sales and I—as I represent a brush house—now get larger orders from him for my house."

A WISE MERCHANT'S LOGIC.

"Do you know," said the wise old merchant man of long years experience in business, "I never would consent to place my name on a fence for advertising purposes." "Why?" "Because three-fourths of the names you see painted on fences, barns, are of firms that have gone out of business. It's a fact. The next time you drive into the country just take notice and see if it isn't so."

THE PROVISION AND ALLIED TRADES.

CANADA AND THE WORLD'S PROVISION TRADE.

THE REMARKABLE strides taken by Canada in the production and export of hog products in recent years has caused this country to be recognized as a factor in the world's provision trade, and has served, moreover, to emphasize the fact that what Canada needs to-day is not money, but men; men with the foresight, courage and capacity to recognize the magnitude and wealth of the natural resources of the land, and to direct their own and other people's efforts as to make the most of this natural wealth.

THE OLD FAT HOG.

Canada has for years had at her hand all the essentials to hog-raising and pork-packing. But until a few years ago the aim of the Canadian hog-raiser was to breed a great, fat, big hog, whose chief recommendation was its weight. There was a general belief that the proper curing of meats depended largely on the phase of the moon. The natural result of such ignorant methods was that in the "eighties," this country's imports of hog products considerably exceeded our exports.

Some of the more enterprising packing houses, however, after making a determined but vain effort to build up an export trade of bacon and hams made from the big, heavy hog, and finding that the meat from that breed of pig was too fat and coarse to suit the British buyer, turned their own attention and eventually turned the attention of hog-breeders to the light, lean animal, which is so common throughout Ontario to-day.

Breeders backed up the efforts of the packers in a satisfactory manner. It was soon learned that certain foods produced a hog of superior quality, and these foods were generally used.

The larger packing plants were fitted with the most effective and economical plants, and, in fact, everything possible was done to produce bacon and hams of the quality and appearance desired by British buyers.

THE FACTS IN FIGURES.

The result, as far as quantities are concerned, is so well known that it hardly need be stated. In 1890 our exports of hams and bacon were $628,469; in 1895, $3,806,709, and in 1897, $5,813,619. But an even greater result had been achieved by the year 1898. The standard brands of ham and bacon on the British market have, for years, been Danish and Irish. American bacon has always been a factor, but in a class below that of either of the other two, as the quality of American bacon, which comes from corn-fed hogs, is much inferior to the Danish or Irish article. Canadian bacon was, and possibly for good reason, until comparatively recent years generally classed as American. This was injurious to Canadian trade when Canadian packers started to put up superior meat; but by reason of years of consistent maintenance of superior quality, Canadian packers had earned a reputation, and Canadian bacon averaged from a half-penny to a penny a pound higher than the American bacon.

INCREASE IN PACKING HOUSES

As is always the case when a pioneer of any industry has won unquestioned success, the attention of many Canadians was directed to pork-packing during 1898 and 1899, and the industry experienced a veritable "boom" in these years. New pork-packing plants were established in almost every section of Ontario, and practically all the old factories in the Province were enlarged or rebuilt. The result was that in the year ending June 30, 1900, the exports reached $12,758,025, and there seemed to be every indication of further growth.

COMPETITION AND PRICES.

The competition of packers for supplies during 1900 was so great that prices were kept at a high basis, and many breeders, anticipating a reaction, sold their hogs instead of keeping them for breeding purposes. Consequently, during the year ending June 30, last, reports were frequently heard to the effect that the industry was likely to show a big decline owing to the short supply of hogs. The matter was made to appear much worse than it was by reports from one or two of the largest and oldest packing houses, that their output was not more than half that of the previous year. This was taken by many, who did not take into consideration the fact that the new packing houses were, for the first time, curing a respectable proportion of the country's total hog production—to mean that the curing of hams and bacon had reached its limit in 1900, and that a reaction had set in. There was, nevertheless, a small falling off, the returns showing our exports in the two years to be $12,758,025, and $11,781,576. The reduction of imports was, however, due in some part to increased consumption at home.

THE FUTURE.

What does the future offer? Canadian hog-raisers and pork-packers have learned to breed the right kind of hog, and to cure bacon and hams to suit the British customer. With consistency of quality assured, the matter will henceforth depend largely on supply and demand.

Great Britain is, of course, the great consumer of the world's provision trade, her imports of bacon being about $50,000,000, and of hams about $20,000,000 per year (excluding the receipts from Ireland). These figures are steadily growing.

CANADIAN VS. U. S. BACON.

The shipment of bacon from the United States ranged from $7,500,000 in 1899 to $18,500,000, and of hams, from $10,193,180 in 1899 to $13,141,000 in 1901. The inferiority of United States provisions to Canadian gives the latter every advantage in fighting for a market. And, as the sentiment of the British market has, in recent years, been in a marked degree favorable to Canadian products, the only difficulty, as far as demand is concerned, will be to meet the price of United States provisions. This will not probably be a serious consideration as long as prosperous times provide such a large home demand for these products in both Canada and the United States. But a reaction from the prices prevailing at present is generally conceded to be inevitable, sooner or later.

THE SUPPLY OF HOGS.

In the meantime there is good reason to expect constant growth in the production of hogs. When, in 1895, the production of cheese was $14,253,002, a reduction of nearly $1,000,000 from the previous year, there were many who declared that the cheese industry had reached its limits. It was pointed out the Canadian farmers were keeping as many milk cows as were practical and profitable, and that the establishment of more cheese factories would endanger the industry. But the reverse has proved to be the case. During each of the last two years our exports of cheese have exceeded $20,000,000. It should be the same as regards pork and pork products. The farmers can raise more hogs, and as our grip on the export market grows, they can be depended upon for the supplies required by the packing factories. We need have no fear as regards insufficiency of supply.

PROFITS ON BYE PRODUCTS.

With the increased production at home and the inevitable reduction in prices in Great Britain will come the testing time for Canadian pork-packing establishments, particularly the recent established ones. The quotations of packers in other countries as well as those in Canada will have to be met. The large packing houses have made such arrangements for the disposal of their bye-progone out of business within the past year, and give as a reason that they found it impossible to keep up the volume of their sales in the face of increased prices, and in order to hold their customers they cut prices. Had these Cleveland butchers been wise they would have snapped their fingers at "volume of trade" and held up prices. Many a man, remarks The Butchers' Advocate, has "gone broke" trying to make a show of being busy, and found out later that the "little fellow" around the corner, who was doing a small business, was making money.

THE ADULTERATION OF LARD.

A CHICAGO packing firm has issued the following regarding the adulteration of lard:

"Some of the makers of tallow have been inveigled into using a mineral prohave any further dealings with men who will offer goods which contain any adulterations.

"This abuse has caused no end of trouble, and has prompted some of the manufacturers to make a list of all those who offer adulterated stock, which is equivalent to a black list, and all names going on this list, they will have no further dealings with.

"While many of those who have commenced using this adulteration, were undoubtedly brought into the practice through misrepresentation by being given to understand that it would not effect their product and that they could realize a greater remuneration for their goods, we wish to offer a suggestion (as from the complaints that have come to our notice we feel that we are in a position to do) and that is, to divorce any and all adulterations, and maintain the ducts that they are said to make more profit on them than they do on their bacon, hams, etc. When the testing time comes these factories will probably "weather the storm" with comparative ease; but it may go hard with such concerns as have not reduced their running expenses to the minimum and have not made provision for getting the largest possible returns from bye-products.

Yet, whether the weaker—of course, it does not follow by any means that the smallest or youngest concerns are the weakest—concerns stand the strains which are likely to follow the advent of dull times, or are not able to stand it, there is every reason to expect a steady growth in the exports of Canadian hams and bacon, at least until they have attained a position similar to that of our cheese exports, which are over half the total quantity imported by Great Britain.

SHOULD HAVE KEPT UP THE PRICE.

It is claimed that 20 per cent. of the retail butchers of Cleveland, O., have duct to adulterate their stock and have been given to understand that such an adulteration, which is much cheaper than tallow or grease, can be used with perfect safety, inasmuch as the buyers and users of tallow cannot detect it either in the manufacturing of goods, which it is to be used for, or by the closest inspection. It is true that some of the American people like to be humbugged, but let it be understood that soapmakers and candlemakers are not to be rated in this class; they will not tolerate such trickery, and those who have commenced using this adulteration, have already felt the results of their new experiment. It has returned to them like a boomerang, and it has discredited, in many cases, the confidence and good name of the person or parties who have been led into this evil.

"This new practice has already taught manufacturers, who use fats, to look with skepticism upon all offerings. And, where this adulteration is used, are frank to express themselves as not wishing to good name you have heretofore established."

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

It is not necessary to tell the readers of "The Canadian Grocer" whose property the accompanying photo represents. The property is on Wellington street, Montreal, and shows the expansion of this firm during the past two seasons, when they have gobbled up this whole large building. It has a facing of 105 feet on Wellington street and 82 feet on Ann street. In 1898 they occupied 35 feet; in 1900 they added 35 feet more; and in 1901, the last 35 feet.

The tank cars are part of their service of eight cars that ply between Montreal and their Southern cotton oil mills. These tanks hold from 33,000 to 50,000 lb. of cotton seed oil each and are never idle. This immense quantity of cotton seed oil is used principally in the manufacture of "Cottolene" and "Bear's Head" brand of refined lard compound.

THE SITUATION IN HOG PRODUCTS.

THERE were very unsettled conditions through last week in hog products. In its early portion, remarks The National Provisioner, the advantage was essentially with buyers; prices, however, were not badly shaken up. In the later dealings there appears to be a little more regularity, yet at the same time an apprehension that there is likely to be a renewal of bearish conditions. The probable or anticipated hog supplies are back of the feeling among the traders that the hog products are not likely to be upon the settled basis of values which would insure healthful activity to trading. It is a fact, however, that the receipts of hogs through the week have rarely come up to expectations, that almost daily they have fallen under estimates. Yet the talk is that the hogs are back in liberal volume, and that they are likely at any time to appear in numbers and weights to influence packers in movements over getting them upon a cheaper basis. It had been supposed a few days since, in the weather and crop conditions then hastening hog supplies forward, that the October marketing of the swine would suffer in volume and quality, and that if there were large receipts for a period in the month that they would not be indicative of a liberal run of supplies for the entire month. It is quite possible, therefore, that hog supplies for the remainder of this month may not come up to some expectations. We believe, however, that the later future hog supplies are likely to be of a liberal order, yet, that the effect from them is more likely to be had in the spring months than in the intervening period. This does not preclude the idea that hog products may be worked even lower in the near future than the existing basis. The fact that there are small stocks of the products means less to protect in value, while packers would probably, by bear movements, be able to lay the packing down upon a more profitable basis. With declining tendencies of the products hogs are often bought upon a relatively more favorable basis.

It is, however, a market over which no decided views can be entertained as to its drifting lower or higher in the near future. There are at present antagonistic influences, which it will take a few days to straighten out. The talk of buyers that everything is high means little in consideration of the fact that supplies of fats and meats everywhere had been pulled down upon an active consumption even at better figures than those current. It is, in our opinion, simply now that as the markets have reached to a lower basis that distributors are holding off for more settled conditions. The consumption, in our opinion, is just as liberal as at any time latterly. The markets everywhere hold less of a stock than ordinarily of hog products, therefore liberal supplies would be necessary to meet consumptive demands when the distributors feel that the drift of prices has a straighter course.

Manipulation has appeared to be rather more prominent latterly than in the summer months. The markets in the earlier period had been allowed to run more upon the influences of supply and demand. More recently in the natural desire to start upon lower-cost stuff in influencing hog prices, there has been an opportunity as well to increase a "short" interest, and which could be easily worked against on the statistical position of the products. There has, however, been more selling of the "long" stuff that had been held of the January option, notwithstanding the fact that the option could be easily squeezed, as it would have been impossible to make an accumulation of the lard product by that time to meet them. It is the selling of packers, moderately, perhaps, of the late option that causes some confusion of opinion over an ultimate rally of prices.

It is quite possible that with a lower drifting of prices of hogs that they will be marketed less freely; indeed, some of the trade inclined to the opinion that because of the late decline in the prices of hogs that they are now falling off in supply at marketable points, rather than from the opinion that the hogs are not liberally ready for market. The farmers, of course, are in a more independent position than ordinarily over marketing their products, and they watch the markets closely.

An estimate of the stocks at Chicago a day or two since was 42,000 bbls. pork, 22,000 tierces lard and 14,000,000 lb. ribs.

AN OLD FIRM WITH A NEW NAME.

On Monday, the 9th of September, the firm of Lawry & Son, Limited, who have been connected with the Canadian pork-packing business for the last 25 years, changed the name of the company to Fowler's Canadian Company, Limited, with Mr. Anderson Fowler, New York (who is President of The Anglo-American Provision Company, Chicago; The Kansas City Packing Company; The Fowler Bros. Company, New York, London and Liverpool), as president of The Hamilton company.

Their meats and lards will still be known as "Windsor," "L. & S." and "Imperial," and as the new company commence business with greatly improved facilities for slaughtering, curing and shipping, they feel assured that their brands will attain to even a higher standard of excellence than ever.

CANNING OX TONGUES.

The tongues are prepared for canning in the same manner as has been previously described in these articles. Special attention must be directed to having the tongues properly chilled after removing from the bullock's head, as tongues, owing to their close-grained texture, require gradual cooling at first and subsequent thorough chilling to put them in suitable condition for handling. Small, and in some cases, medium-sized tongues are utilized for putting into cans.

The tank for the calcium bath is built of  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch iron or steel, 9 feet long, 4 feet wide and about 1 foot 8 inches deep. It usually rests on a stand or framework to raise it to a convenient height for working over it. The bath solution of calcium chloride is prepared by filling the tank half full of water and bringing it to the boiling point. The calcium chloride is now put in until the required strength is obtained. The object of adding the calcium chloride is to raise the boiling point of the solution, which for ox tongues will be about 225 degrees Fah. or 106.25 degrees centigrade.

To make a solution of calcium chloride and water which will boil at this temperature requires about 36 to 37 parts of anhydrous calcium chloride to every 100 parts of water.

The cans are capped in the usual manner, the centre vents open, and then immersed in the crate or frame in the bath until the tops of the cans are nearly even with the surface of the liquid. The bath is then brought to a temperature of 225 degrees Fah., and the time of processing taken from the time the steam issues from the open vents. The time allowed for processing the ox tongues in the cans is one hour and 15 minutes. After the cans have remained in the bath this period, the vents are stopped while the cans are still in the bath. When this procedure has been accomplished, the trays or crates are removed and the cans placed in a retort and there boiled off for a period of two hours at a pressure of  $3\frac{1}{2}$  pounds. The cans, after this period has elapsed, are then removed from the retort and run to the shower room, there to be showered until cool. They are subsequently sent through the washing machine and thence to the labeling room.—National Provisioner.

CONDENSED CREAM AND MILK.

ONE of the most progressive, as well as aggressive, business institutions in Canada, is the St. Charles Condensing Co., Ingersoll, Ont., who prepare the "St. Charles" brand of evaporated unsweetened cream and "Silver Cow" condensed sweetened milk, now to be obtained in nearly every city and village throughout the civilized world, and at prices within the reach of all.

The advantageous location of this factory enables the company to secure without trouble what is, probably, the finest milk supply in the world, as the dairy farms of Oxford county are known far and wide as methods and a realizing sense of what is necessary both to interest the dealer and satisfy the consumer, are entitled to a liberal share of the business in the products among which their brands stand supreme.

BRADSHAW & CO.'S GOODS.

A Toronto manufacturing firm which has built up a steadily-increasing business during the past few years is that of I. D. Bradshaw & Co., manufacturers of chewing gum and wax paper. Bradshaw & Co. have established a reputation for first-class goods, which has given them an enviable position with the trade. Being content with small profits, their prices are reasonable. These, with chocolate, by reason of its fine quality and delicious flavor. This cocoa is already extensively used in Canada, and has become very popular with those who find the chocolate too rich for them. Chocolat-Menier is represented in Canada by Herdt & Co., 180 St. James street, Montreal, who predict a great demand for the cocoa during the coming season.

It is without hesitation that we call the attention of all grocers and druggists to the operations of this company, who, by reason of strict integrity, progressive strict business integrity and square dealing with all customers, have been some of the causes which contributed to their success. Any inquiries or orders will receive prompt and courteous attention at their hands; and Bradshaw & Co. promise to do their utmost to please all customers. Chocolat - Menier, manufacturers of French vanilla chocolate, which has become a household word all over the world, is now making a breakfast cocoa, which is fully sustaining the high reputation of the enviable reputation for its curative powers. Kola Tonic Wine is made from kola, celery, and pepsin. The kola nut is a native of the western territory of Africa. Its qualities are varied and extraordinary. The British Government has been making experiments with the pure paste of the kola nut in order to ascertain how far it would meet the difficulty of transporting provisions in time of war, as a concentrated sustainer of human life. Doctors use it in large quantities for invalids who require something strengthening without having an appetite to taste food. It purifies the blood and cures the worst cases of indigestion, dyspepsia, and nervousness.

The Tobacco, Cigar and Cigarette Trade.

SOME INTERESTING ARTICLES ON THE SUBJECT.

THE TOBACCO INDUSTRY OF WESTERN ONTARIO

By LEWIS WIGLE, Leamington, Ontario.

HERE are several varieties of tobacco grown on this western peninsula of Ontario, but that which has proven the greatest success is the "White Burley," which was not known in this country until about six years ago.

It is specially adapted for making chewing tobacco, and is far superior to any other kind on account of its absorbing qualities. It absorbs the licorice and other ingredients put into it for giving a flavor. The Empire Tobacco Co., of Granby, Quebec, first introduced the seed, through me, in this country as an experiment. It has proven a great success, and helped many persons to pay off their mortgages and buy more land.

SOME RESULTS

UP to the year of 1897, the greatest number of pounds grown in this tobacco district was about 800,000, which averaged about 11 cents per pound, and it averaged those who grew it about $150 per acre. It costs about $45 per acre to grow it. Eleven cents per pound average was the highest price ever paid for the crop. The profit was so great that it caused an overproduction the next year, and the price came down to an average of about six cents and has remained about that price until now.

THIS YEAR'S CROP

will average about 7 or  $7\frac{1}{2}$  cents and will leave a clear profit to the grower of about \$50 per acre. There were about 800,000 pounds in 1897, 6,000,000 pounds in 1898, 1,500,000 pounds in 1899, 2,500,000 pounds in 1900, and about the same quantity in 1901. The Empire Tobacco Co. has purchased three-fourths of the growth of the above years and are working up a large trade in tobacco manufacturing from Canadian leaf, nearly all of which has been grown in the county of Essex.

A Mr. Ward, from Pontiac, in the State of Michigan, has built a beautiful six-storey building, 60 x 120 feet, which he intends to use for curing tobacco suitable for making cigars and smoking tobacco. It is the

FIRST OF THE KIND IN CANADA

and if it proves a success, will be a great additional boon to South Essex. He introduced the seed of several varieties of smoking tobaccos this year, the best kinds being the Zimmer Spanish, Sumatra, and Connecticut seed leaf, and he must be well satisfied with the result, because the crop is A.1. as to quantity and quality. There are now about 1,500,000 pounds hanging in the barns waiting to be taken to his factory as soon as it is complete, and was grown under contract for seven cents per pound, barn run.

QUANTITY OF TOBACCO USED IN CANADA.

There are about 14,000,000 pounds of leaf tobacco manufactured yearly in all Canada; this includes chewing and smoking, cigars and cigarettes. About 10,000,000 of that is imported from the United States. If the Government of Canada would put the same duty on the American leaf, that the American Government put upon Canadian leaf, we, in Western Ontario, could grow all that is required for consumption in all Canada, and thus pay the Canadian farmer $5,000,000 or $6,000,000, which is now being paid the American farmer. All the Canadian Government would have to do would be to do the same as the American Government does: put on enough for excise duty for revenue purposes and enough Customs duty to keep all foreign leaf out of the country. If this were done there is no doubt but what we could grow all that is required for consumption in this country.

I have just returned from Pelce Island, Ont., where I purchased a large quantity of Burley leaf, as good as can be grown on the limestone lands of Kentucky.

GOOD BRANDS OF TOBACCO.

When grocers are choosing their brands of tobacco, they should pause to consider well. There are brands and brands. First of all insist upon having one that is well advertised. In plug tobacco get that of domestic growth, which is equal to any produced under the sun, and, lastly, but not leastly, see your way clear to a good profit. For the convenience of our readers we give the names of several tobaccos that fulfil these conditions. In chewing there are "Bobs," "Currency," and "Pay-Roll," and in smoking there is "Empire." These are all thoroughly advertised in papers and on sign boards, while their manufacturers were among the first to encourage the growth of tobacco in this country; what helps the farmer should be encouraged by the shopkeeper, and The Empire Tobacco Co., of Montreal, pay out scores of thousands of dollars for their domestic tobacco each season. To see that there is a good profit in these lines, one need only write to the manufacturers or wholesalers for prices.

THE GERMAN TOBACCO INDUSTRY.

THE United States Consul at Annaberg, Germany, recently sent to his Government, at Washington, some interesting data regarding the tobacco industry of Germany. The report read as follows:

In Germany, tobacco is grown in Baden, the Palatinate, Alsace, on the Lower Rhine, in the Altmark of Hanover, and in some districts of Silesia.

The Dutch colonies of Java and Sumatra furnish Germany with more tobacco than any other country. In 1900, the Empire imported 58,173 tons raw from all the different tobacco-producing countries. The total imports amounted in value to $21,420,000. Nearly 26,000 tons came from the Dutch colonies and 10,452 tons from the United States. The States of Kentucky, Virginia, Maryland, and Ohio raised most of this American tobacco, which the German manufacturer has rolled into cigars or pulverized into snuff. During the past year, 73 tons of raw tobacco were shipped from the Philippines to Germany.

Last year, 386 tons of cigarettes, valued at $1,737,000, or fully five times as many as 10 years ago, were consumed in Germany. These cigarettes came from France, Austria-Hungary, Russia, Turkey, Egypt, Algeria, and the United States, 60 per cent coming from Egypt.

In 1900, Germany exported and imported exactly the same quantity of cigars—namely, 313 tons. A great difference, however, existed in the quality. The imports for last year amounted in value to $2,000,000, while the exports were valued at only $800,000.

A GROWING INDUSTRY.

Essex county farmers are enjoying an era of prosperity owing to the rapid development of the Canadian tobacco industry. The Consumers' Tobacco Co., Limited, whose factory is located in the centre of the finest section in Canada for the growing of Canadian leaf, are running their factory night and day and report an increasing demand for their products. Their advertisement appears in this journal.

WHY GROCERS SHOULD SELL TOBACCO AND CIGARS.

ALTHOUGH we must congratulate the wholesale and retail grocers of the Dominion upon the fact that they control a large part of the tobacco business of this country, and commend their enterprise in caring for it well, where they do take it in hand, we find we are quite in order when we say that tobaccos, cigarettes and cigars are not so important a feature of the grocery business as they should be and that different lines merit more consideration than they have yet been accorded. At the present moment in particular, there are very important reasons why grocers should pay strict attention to their tobacco department.

It is conceded, frankly and sincerely, even by those whose status is affected, that the tobacconist in the small store of the country town is being crowded out of existence for the want of a "raison d'être." His days are passing quickly by. There may still be room enough for him in the city where the demand is enormous, but in the town, large or small, his trade is being shattered. His business is being absorbed by the grocer, the druggist, or the keeper of the restaurant. Manufacturers are unanimous in their concession of this point. There is a legacy dangling in the eyes of these three classes, and it behooves the grocer to stretch forth a strong arm to capture it. Some will get it; why not the grocer?

There is no reason in the wide world why this business should not be his. For many a year he has stocked plug tobacco, and without a great deal of trouble has made a handsome profit on his turnover. He would not seem to be going far to add a showcase of cigarettes and cigars. Notice that we say "showcase." Don't entertain the idea that they can be handled like chewing tobacco, off the ledge behind the counter; they must come out of a clean showcase, appealing to the class that will buy a good cigar.

The grocer has opportunities to cultivate this trade not possessed by the druggist. He has more customers who will come in and notice that he has a stock of tobacco and he will do a larger transient trade. Moreover, he will be satisfied with a smaller profit; he is accustomed to making 25 per cent. on his goods, the druggist wants a 50 to a 100 per cent. profit. Under those conditions, who is likely to get the business? The grocer can make at least a 25 per cent. profit on tobaccos and cigarettes, and a 40 per cent. profit on cigars and yet in the eyes of the druggist be cutting prices. The stock takes up very little room, and does not need to be delivered. The turnover is quick and payment is cash. But there is one point that needs emphasis. The grocer with the dirty store need not expect to compete with the druggist or restaurant keeper with a clean, bright place of business. A scrupulous gentleman of the most liberal smoker class, will not go into a filthy place to get his "imported" cigar. There are dealers who have ventured into the high-class tobacco trade and have become disgusted with it, finding it slow and unprofitable. If an investigation were made, we do not doubt that the verdict would be, not that they had no opportunity to make it a "go," but that they lost their opportunity by failing to keep the store clean. There is no doubt this lack of cleanliness is the great bane of many a grocery store. There are several lines, such as candies, that grocers, with clean stores, handle in large quantities, that an uncleanly grocer finds a drug on his hands.

Neither do the wholesale travellers push tobaccos and cigars as they might. Many never inquire of their customers about their stock in this line, leaving it to the retailer to ask himself. As a consequence the manufacturers are compelled to send out their own travellers, take the orders and ship the goods through the wholesale houses, the latter getting a profit they have not earned, reaping where they have not sown. A change is needed. Cigars ought to be a fertile subject with the traveller. They form a profitable line and samples are of comparatively small bulk. The failure to push the business seems due entirely to apathy. It cannot be expected that the manufacturers will forever allow the wholesaler a profit on the goods they sell.

We trust our remarks on this tobacco and cigar question will bear fruit with both of the classes we are addressing. There is much room for thought and certainly for action.

GRANDAS CIGARS.

The latest cigar to spring to the front in Canada is the "Grandas," made by The Granda, Hermanos y Ca., Montreal. It has attained a sale because it is made of pure Havana tobacco, a certificate to which effect accompanies every box. Not a cent's worth of domestic tobacco enters their premises, accidentally or otherwise.

This firm makes an imported cigar in Canada. They pay a duty of 10 cents per pound on their raw leaf, but are protected by a duty of $3 per pound and 25 per cent. ad valorem on cigars. They have imported the best Spanish labor and are turning out only high-class goods. They have grown in little more than a year to be one of the largest cigar manufacturers in Canada, having a capacity of 10,000 cigars daily. And yet they have no travellers on the road. Their plan has worked so well, and their assertions are so dependable that people come after their goods.

Country dealers may secure the "Grandas" cigar either through the wholesaler or direct.

GOOD BRAND OF CIGARS.

"Our King" is the name of a popular brand of high-grade Havana cigars made by Spilling Bros., 137 Jarvis street, Toronto, which are having an extensive sale among the trade. The above firm also manufacture the well-known brands of 5c.-cigars, "Board of Trade" and "Gold Point." These goods, for value, are unsurpassed, and being made carefully from good stock, the dealer can always rely on their pleasing his customers. Spilling Bros. will be glad to send a sample lot on application. Write them for prices.

CANADA'S IMPORTS AND EXPORTS OF TOBACCO.

Canada cannot be said to be a large buyer of tobacco on the world's markets. A considerable quantity is used in this country, but our imports are not now large, the figures for the past three years being $311,870, $426,458 and $438,250 respectively. As may be seen from the following table, showing the imports of the past three years, the bulk of our purchases has been of cigars:

|                                 | 1900.     | 1901.     |
|---------------------------------|-----------|-----------|
| Cigars.....                     | $263,540 | $295,338 |
| Cigarettes.....                 | 23,202    | 24,540    |
| Cut tobacco.....                | 73,802    | 77,100    |

| Total.....                      | $426,458 | $438,250 |

The returns for 1901 have not been in detail, but from the returns for 1900 it is at once seen that the bulk of the imports of cigars have been from Cuba, the principal figures being $217,192, from Cuba; $21,670, from the United States, and $14,374, from the Philippine Islands. Great Britain sent us $52,746 and the United States, $18,953 of the cut tobacco imported. It is also noteworthy that the receipts than any other Province, her share being $160,871, considerably over one-third of the total.

The exports of Canada have been even smaller than our imports, the figures for the past three years being $72,116, $97,619, and $171,696 respectively. The bulk of the exports have been to St. Pierre and Miquelon, Newfoundland, and the United States.

IMPORTED GREEN FRUITS IN MONTREAL.

How They are Handled and Sold.

REEN fruits spoil with age, but, strange to say, green-fruit trading seems to be in a better state of preservation, the older it grows. What with a more general knowledge of scientific horticulture, improvements in transportation methods and a more intimate knowledge of the requirements of the world's markets, as dictated by climatic changes, the green fruit business continues yearly to become much more satisfactory and expand. Canada shares in the progress and doubtless will cut a wider swath when she learns how to ship her goods. But while her exports are increasing, so are her imports. Montreal alone absorbed nearly a million dollars' worth of imported fruits last year.

By careful inquiry and the assistance of several of Montreal's fruit men, we have been able to compile the following table of the probable values of the eight leading lines of imported green fruits that come to this port:

|                                                                     |                 |

This does not include all the importations of green fruits to Montreal; there are many smaller lines, brought in in small jags that defy compilation. But this attempt at calculation is sufficient to indicate to the fruit trade of the Dominion what an extensive business is in their hands. Of course, this table does not include and Canadian fruits, such as strawberries, raspberries, plums, pears, peaches, apples and other lines that do need enumeration but which form by long odds the greatest bulk of the trade. These are brought into the market in divers ways and how much domestic fruit is sold in one season in Montreal wholesale establishments and on Bonsecours market will probably never be known. This much is certain, "fruit" stands out boldly on the Canadian's menu and the possibilities of a good trade in this line are unbounded.

HOW THE FRUIT IS HANDLED.

But we're speaking of Montreal's import fruit trade. It may be interesting to know how the imported goods are handled and distributed, attended as the process is with considerable difficulty. The goods all come forward in carlots. It would not pay to ship them in small quantities across the breadth of the continent, or from New York, and it is well to have full cars to have the goods put through in a hurry. But it is also difficult for one dealer to satisfactorily handle carlots of goods. Seven years ago the wholesale fruit merchants of Montreal got their heads together and obviated this difficulty by establishing The Montreal Fruit Auction Co., a joint stock company with an authorized capital of $100,000, now situated at the corner of Wellington and Murray streets, under the management of Mr. John McNally, who, by his courteous and businesslike manner, has run the institution with the greatest success. When an assignee of a car of fruit gets notice of its arrival, if he does not wish to sell it himself, he hands over the manifest to Mr. McNally, who sees that the car duty is paid, car unloaded, fruit sorted, has catalogues printed, manages all the details of the sale, sells the goods, and next day hands over the cash, less the 2 per cent. commissions to shareholders in the company and 10 per cent. to outsiders. If the assignee does not approve of the prices he may buy in the goods himself.

This arrangement makes the foot of Murray street a busy place all summer long and even in the winter time upwards of are sold every week. Last year the total sales amounted to about $600,000. Starting early in the spring sales are held every morning at 10 o'clock, when the buyers gather in the auction room, after examining the goods as listed in the catalogue. Here you find wholesaler and retailer sitting side by side bidding against one another, the latter handicapped because he can buy only in limited quantities. Sales of less than 10 boxes or barrels of any one line are prohibited. This rule keeps many a small dealer away from the sales, but yet there are many retailers like Walter Paul, George Graham or A. Dionne who can and do attend with profit. Others prefer to do their on McGill or Commissioners streets, paying more, probably, but saving time and being sure of what they are buying. But those who have plenty of time would not miss this sale. So in the auction room you will find Greeks, Turks, Italians, French and English discussing the merits and demerits of the fruit. Here is but suddenly as they draw together in the auction room there is a repetition of that Biblical miracle, and they all understand one another—such is the power of Mr. Walter Kearns, the auctioneer. He presides efficiently over all classes of men—and one woman, Mrs. Walker, who, Mr. McNally says, is the shrewdest business man in the bunch—but he may consider it politic to flatter the ladies.

So great has been the success of the fruit auction that it has now outgrown its present premises. There is hardly room for the fruit inside, and there certainly is not sufficient accommodation for the long string of grocers' rigs and drays that back up to the platform on a busy summer morning. The Grand Trunk has recognized the deficiency and is now building on Drummond street that will be occupied next year. The importance of these auctions, too, is growing as their fame spreads "abroad through the land." Some Quebec houses now keep agents in Montreal to attend the sales and Eastern Township buyers make a practice of attending. The western trade is mostly done through commission houses.

BANANAS.

The most important imported fruit, from a financial standpoint, is the banana. The banana is now provided the year round and has come to be regarded as a staple article. People buy it as a matter of habit. Montreal dealers mostly draw their supplies of this West Indian fruit from the Trust. The United Fruit Co., but a few are also brought in via Halifax by the monthly steamship service from that port. Since the Trust began to supply this market, there has been but little of the old-time glutting, the flow of supplies being very regular.

ORANGES AND LEMONS.

A year's shipments of oranges and lemons also total quite a large amount. They are now supplied 12 months in the year. Early in the spring come the Mediterranean fruit in the annual big shipment that last year was made up of 145,000 boxes and 29,686 half-boxes of oranges and lemons. Many of these, probably about two-thirds, go to the United States, while many are held in cold storage in Canada on speculative account. About the first of August the supply of lemons gives out and they are thereafter brought in from New York, and in the winter via Portland. Montreal takes from 50,000 to 55,000 boxes of lemons a year. Only one car of Cali-ifornian lemons has come to Montreal this year. Of oranges there are many kinds. Just now Jamaicas are the leaders. About Christmas time we begin to get Floridas and Californian navels and seedlings, which last till the Mediteranean fruit arrives.

TOMATOES FROM THE STATES.

United States tomatoes are growing in favor; probably 25 cars came to Montreal this year. Such fresh goods as Florida and Tennessee tomatoes, Californian celery and Boston lettuce are having quite a depreciative effect on the sales of canned goods, both fruits and vegetables.
